PREFATORY NOTE

THE whole of Keats's known works in verse are included in this volume; and the foot-notes contain a large selection of variorum readings. Sixteen lines of The Eve of St. Mark, found by the Editor in a Keats scrap-book lent to him by Mr. Frank Sabin, and given in the Introduction, have not been printed in any other edition. The Editor has endeavoured, in the Introduction, to acknowledge all obligations.

INTRODUCTION

THE chief aim in the present edition of Keats's poetry is to supply in a handy form an authoritative text of the whole body of his work in verse. The edition differs from those which I have prepared in past years, in that it is neither an exhaustive variorum edition nor a mere unannotated text, but a text illustrated by readings and cancelled passages selected from the great mass of manuscript and printed material. These illustrations are offered as likely to be helpful to those who would form a conception, not only of the results which Keats arrived at, but also of the steps by which he attained them, so far as those steps may be said to have a true literary or psychological value.

The more notable the effort on which the poet was engaged, the better has it seemed worth while to indicate the lower rungs of the creative ladder by which he ascended to the final result. Hence, the comparative fulness of annotation in the case of, say, Lamia, Isabella, The Eve of St. Agnes, the Ode to a Nightingale, and Hyperion, is to be attributed either to the intrinsic interest of the variations themselves or of that leap of the poetic mind which they serve to mark ; while the comparative freedom from foot-notes in the case of such work as Otho the Great and The Cap and Bells does not point to the absence of manuscript sources on which to draw, or to any failure to consult any or every source, but to the conviction that the variations are of little general interest, the works themselves being in the main of inferior texture.

In settling the text I have of course refrained from abandoning what is authorized, in any particular of the slightest consequence, without recording the counter-authority ; but I have not, as in my LIBRARY editions, sought to record every comma, capital, or typographical eccentricity (perhaps not Keats's after all), which I or the Press authorities have found it needful to amend for the sake of reasonable uniformity. "If these delights thy mind may move," the LIBRARY editions can be consulted in public libraries or picked up second-hand at a high price ; or, for a very small price, the "COMPLETE" variorum edition which I prepared for Messrs. Gowans and Gray of Glasgow may still be had. One not unusual editorial freedom, however, I have not permitted myself: when a reading is quoted from a manuscript, it has been my endeavour to cite the manuscript with the minutest accuracy ; and I trust it may not be found that I have in any instance been betrayed into representing Keats, or his brothers, or others of his transcribers, as having written anything but what they actually did write. If in the notes it has been needful to quote a word misspelt in the manuscript, I hope I have always got it printed with due inaccuracy ; and if I have so much as supplied a single letter obviously omitted by accident, I trust that the liberty has been duly indicated by the orthodox method of enclosure within brackets. But we are only mortals—the printers and I.

It seems to me that, in an edition of Keats intended to meet a popular demand among the educated classes, an attempt should be made to record precisely how and in what forms the text has come through the nineteenth century and reached his lovers and admirers in the twentieth.

As to the main body of printed authority for the text, the books had better be here mentioned with the customary bibliographical details. The volumes which Keats himself issued through the press are three. The contents of the first reappear in Keats's own order of arrangement as the text of the first fifty-three pages in the present edition ; and the book is cited in the foot-notes as Poems 1817. It was early in that year that this small volume was published.

The book, though worked in fours, is a foolscap octavo, each sheet of paper being cut in halves. It was issued in drab boards, with a back-label reading

"Keats's | Poems," and consists of a blank leaf, fly-title "Poems" in heavy black letter, with imprint on verso, "Printed by C. Richards, | No. 18, Warwick Street, Golden Square, London," title-page as given at the end of this Introduction, Dedication with a note on the verso, and pages 1 to 121 including the fly-titles to the Epistles, Sonnets, and Sleep and Poetry. There are head-lines in Roman capitals running throughout each section, recto and verso alike, (1) "Poems," (2) "Epistles," (3) "Sonnets," and (4) "Sleep and Poetry." The note after the Dedication is as follows:—

"[The Short Pieces in the middle of the Book, as | well as some of the Sonnets, were written at an | earlier period than the rest of the Poems.]"

Keats's second venture was the far more ambitious work Endymion, forming pages 55 to 168 of the present volume. There was talk of making the poem a quarto, with a portrait of Keats by Haydon; but ultimately it appeared without a portrait, as a handsome octavo volume. It was done up in thick drab boards labelled at the back, "Keats's | Endymion. | Lond. 1818," and consisted of (1) fly-title "Endymion: | A Romance" with imprint at foot of verso, "Printed by T. Miller, Noble street Cheapside," (2) title-page (with its motto adapted from Shakespeare's seventeenth Sonnet), which will be found reproduced at the end of this Introduction, (3) the dedication reprinted as lines 3 to 6 of page 55 in the present edition, (4) the Preface (pages vii to ix), (5) an erratum leaf with sometimes one and sometimes five errata printed on the recto, and (6) 207 pages of text including the fly-titles to the four books. The head-line throughout is "Endymion" in Roman small capitals, the number of the Book being indicated in smaller letters at the inner corners, and the pages in Arabic figures as usual at the outer corners. The full page consists of twenty-two lines; and the lines are numbered in tens in the margin, not every ten lines of verse, but every ten lines of print, so that when a fresh paragraph begins with a portion of a verse, that particular verse counts for two lines. In numbering the lines for the present edition I have of course counted by lines of verse.

The poet's third and last book of poems, the contents of which, arranged in the order adopted by Keats, occupy pages 169 to 279 of this edition, was issued in 12mo in the summer of 1820, put up in stout drab boards like those of Endymion, with a back-label "Lamia, Isabella, | &c. | — | 7s. 6d." It consists of half-title, reading "Lamia, Isabella, | &c.," with imprint on verso, "London: | Printed by Thomas Davison, Whitefriars," title-page, as given (post) following that of Endymion, Advertizement, Contents, and pages 1 to 199 including the half-titles to Lamia, Isabella, The Eve of St. Agnes, the miscellaneous Poems, and Hyperion. There are head-lines in Roman capitals running throughout each section, recto and verso alike: (1) "Lamia," (2) "Isabella," (3) "Eve of St. Agnes," (4) "Poems," and (5) "Hyperion." The pages are numbered in the usual way with Arabic figures; and in Lamia and Hyperion the Parts and Books are marked at the inner side of the head-line in smaller Roman capitals. On the verso of page 199 the imprint of Davison is repeated; and there are eight pages of Taylor and Hessey's advertizements, beginning with one of Endymion. A large part of the contents of the volume still exists in the poet's manuscript; and Professor Sidney Colvin possesses Richard Woodhouse's Common-place book, described later on, the contents of which bear largely on the poems in the 1820 publication. The following title for it, by the way, is sketched in pencil on a blank page of the manuscript book:

LAMIA

Hyperion, a Fragment,

ISABELLA

ST. AGNES' EVE,

and other poems.

The Advertizement prefixed to the published volume

(page 170 in this edition) appears to have been supplied by the publishers. In a copy shown to me by the late Canon Ainger, Keats had drawn his pen through and through this advertizement, writing at the head, "I had no part in this; I was ill at the time." The statement about Endymion he had bracketed off from the rest; and beneath it he had written "This is a lie!" In connexion with this unusual vehemence of expression, it is no more than fair to mention that the Woodhouse Common-place book, used by the publishers when considering which of Keats's unpublished poems they would issue in 1820, records a vote against Hyperion; and the inference is that they were induced by Keats's friends to publish the fragment after all.

In regard to the remainder of Keats's Poetical Works, those, namely, which are not to be found in the three volumes published by himself, an endeavour is here made to arrange the whole under one chronology, although it is not possible to adhere literally to the scheme, in view of the fact that, while Otho the Great was being composed, other poems were also written, and must not, obviously, be inserted between the scenes of the tragedy. We have not, however, yet completed the tale of the editiones principes of Keats's Poetry, seeing that his posthuma have from time to time been issued in substantive volumes as distinguished from the mere extension of editions of his works. The first in importance, as in date, of these posthumous editiones principes is the late Lord Houghton's invaluable contribution of 1848. In 1833, at the villa of Walter Savage Landor "on the beautiful hill-side of Fiesole," Lord Houghton, then Mr. Richard Monckton Milnes, had met Charles Armitage Brown, whose name is now universally associated with that of Keats; he had previously learnt much about the poet from Joseph Severn, then still (as to the end) at Rome; and he now found that Brown, having carefully guarded the literary remains of Keats, intended to publish them in two or three years on returning to England. Brown returned, got forward with his preparations, wrote his biographical account of Keats, and had arranged for publication, when he suddenly decided to emigrate to New Zealand. This he did, leaving his material for Lord Houghton to make use of, "for the purpose of vindicating the character and advancing the fame" of Keats.

Charles Cowden Clarke, Edward Holmes, George Felton Mathew, and Henry Stephens, helped the biographer and editor with their recollections; John Hamilton Reynolds "contributed the rich store of his correspondence"; Charles Wentworth Dilke and William Haslam supported the undertaking with letters and reminiscences; to John Taylor and James Augustus Hessey, Keats's friendly and helpful publishers, and Charles Ollier, who in a less friendly and helpful manner had preceded them in that office, Lord Houghton was "indebted for willing co-operation"; and Mr. Jeffrey, who had married George Keats's widow, contributed, in a very slovenly and misleading way, a great mass of letters and data which, notwithstanding his lack of judgment, of experience, and of thoroughness, were of quite extraordinary value. The result founded on all these aids and communications was given to the world in the year 1848, in two of those handy and agreeable volumes which, printed by Messrs. Bradbury and Evans, issued in a steady stream for some years from the house of Edward Moxon of Dover Street—the volumes which we associate with the names of Shelley, Wordsworth, Landor, Hood, Tennyson, and the Brownings.

When the book made its appearance, one of the main literary supporters of the undertaking, who had known intimately both Keats and Brown, was amused as well as nettled at the rôle claimed for Brown as the "generous protector" of Keats, and left a somewhat caustic note on the subject in his copy of Lord Houghton's work, the title-page of which he decorated with the following couplet from The Rosciad:

Appearances to save his only care ;
So things seem right, no matter what they are.

Charles Wentworth Dilke, in quoting thus epigrammatically from Churchill, did not of course mean to apply the couplet literally ; but the inscription and other notes show how advanced his views of editorial obligation were ; for Lord Houghton can scarcely be said to have carried editorial licence beyond the limits then usual.

Lord Houghton's first contribution to Keats literature, published in the best of company, may be bibliographically described as consisting of two volumes, foolscap octavo, bound in purple-brown cloth, upright-straight-grained, blind-blocked on the sides with the same severe floral-scroll design that appears on the fourth edition of Tennyson's Poems (two volumes, 1846), The Princess (1847), In Memoriam (1850), Landor's Hellenics (1847), and many others. The colour is the same as that of the cloth used for several editions of In Memoriam. The Keats volumes are gilt-lettered across the back, "Life | Letters &c. | of Keats. | Vol. I.[II.]" The title-pages are as follows :—

LIFE,
LETTERS, AND LITERARY REMAINS,
OF
JOHN KEATS.

EDITED BY RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. I. [II.]

LONDON:
EDWARD MOXON, DOVER STREET.

The half-titles read "Life, Letters, &c. | of | John Keats." Their versos are blank; but those of the titles have the central imprint "London: | Bradbury and Evans, Printers, Whitefriars." In volume I, pages v to vii contain a dedication to Francis (afterwards Lord) Jeffrey, page viii is blank, the preface extends from page ix to page xix, page xx is blank, and page 1 starts with a dropped head reading "Life and Letters | of | John Keats." There are 288 pages of the text, with head-lines reading "Life and Letters of" on the versos and "John Keats" on the rectos, save on page 288, where the legend appears in full: the printers' imprint is repeated at the foot. The volume has for frontispiece a print from a steel plate engraved by H. Robinson after the well-known half-length portrait of Keats by Severn, three-quarter face, seated behind a table with an open book before him, the right hand resting on the book, the left supporting the chin and cheek (fingers closed), while the elbow rests on the table. An eight-page catalogue of Moxon's publications is generally found in perfect copies, inserted within the glazed primrose end-paper of the recto cover.

Of volume II the text also starts with a dropped head worded as in volume I, with which it is uniform as to head-lines up to page 108. Then there is a half-title, "Literary Remains," dividing the posthumous poetry from the Life and Letters; and the poetry itself occupies the remainder of the volume, ending on page 306, and bearing distinctive head-lines. At the foot of page 306 the printers' imprint recurs; and facing it is a list, headed "Poetry," of volumes sold by Moxon: the verso of this is blank. The frontispiece to this second volume is a well lithographed fac-simile of a holograph manuscript,—the song "Shed no tear—O shed no tear."

These fascinating volumes have no index of any kind, or even so much as a table of contents; but besides the Literary Remains forming the bulk of the second volume, many poems and fragments are scattered through the first volume, some embodied in letters, and some appended at the close of the volume, after the Notes on Milton there reprinted from the scarce American periodical The Dial. A list of these poems is proper to this place. The page column indicates the position in Lord Houghton's volumes.

Moxon had already in 1846 reprinted, in his delightful paper-covered 24mo. series of Poets, Smith's edition of Keats's Poetical Works (1841) with a trifling change of order in the contents; and he now proceeded to publish a reissue in foolscap octavo to accompany the Life, Letters, and Literary Remains. The 1851 issue of this book ("a new edition") has no biography, but contains the same portrait print as the Life &c. Since that time no substantive volume of fresh poems by Keats has been published; but additions have been made in one issue after another until the mass has grown very considerably.

One more posthumous editio princeps remains to be dealt with. In the long journal-letter which Keats wrote to his brother and sister-in-law in America in December 1818 and January 1819, occurs the following passage, headed "Friday" simply, but belonging probably to Christmas Day 1818:—

"I think you knew before you left England, that my next subject would be 'the fall of Hyperion.' I went on a little with it last night, but it will take some time to get into the vein again. I will not give you any extracts because I wish the whole to make an impression. I have however a few Poems which you will like, and I will copy them out on the next sheet."

This no doubt relates to the fragment of Hyperion in direct narration, as ultimately published in 1820. The poem in that form, it will be remembered, was abandoned finally in August 1819; but by the end of the year he was at work on an attempt to recast it in a wholly different form. This took place at Wentworth Place: in the morning he sat with Brown and worked at The Cup and Bells: in the evening, fide Brown, he had a room to himself "and was deeply engaged in re-modelling the fragment of Hyperion into the form of a vision."

This remarkable production (pages 443-457 of this edition) was mentioned in the Life, Letters, &c. (1848) as a recast, but remained in manuscript until Lord Houghton contributed it to the third volume of the Bibliographical and Historical Miscellanies of the Philobiblon Society (1856-7), in doubt whether it was a recast or a draft. A few copies of it were also printed in pamphlet form apart from the Miscellanies. The fragment was afterwards published in the Appendix to Lord Houghton's new edition of The Life and Letters of John Keats issued in 1867 by Moxon & Co. On that occasion it was said to be without doubt the first draft. But Lord Houghton must have failed to consult again his manuscript memoir by Charles Brown, wherein the "Vision" is distinctly said to be a late reconstruction. It will be seen that, although a great deal of the "Vision" is special to the new poem, there are large passages from the epic version of Hyperion. A comparison of passages which are substantially identical while varying in detail perhaps affords the most astounding instance on record of the loss of artistic power and perception under physical decay and mental agony. The conception of Moneta, though not artistically on Keats's highest level, has a touching grandeur of its own, and, apart from the detrimental treatment of the Hyperion fragment, is highly notable. As regards the holograph manuscript of the "Vision," Lord Houghton told me in 1883 that a mystery attached to its fate: it was lent for some purposes of the 1867 reprint; and the owner failed to recover it. I have attempted to trace it further, but in vain.

The Philobiblon Society's separate print of course ranks among the éditiones principes of Keats's writings; and it is perhaps the scarcest of all. It is a pott quarto pamphlet of twenty-four pages printed on Saunders's unbleached hand-made paper, water-marked "1856."

There is no title-page ; but there is a half-title reading "Another Version of Keats's 'Hyperion'." Pages 3 and 4 are occupied by the following note :—

"Another Version of Keats's
'Hyperion.'

"The MS. of the following Poem was given to me by Mr. Brown, the friend and protector of John Keats, together with the other Literary Remains which I published in 1848. Is it the original sketch out of which the earlier part of the printed poem was composed, or is it the commencement of a reconstruction of the whole ? I have no external evidence to decide this question ; but it seems to me that, in either case, this fragment well deserves preservation. If it is the first composition out of which a portion of the printed poem was selected, it is most remarkable, as showing the affluence and self-command of the genius that could afford to lay by passages of so much originality and splendour as, on this supposition, have here been cancelled. If, on the other hand, it is the beginning of a new version of the whole Poem, we may equally admire the imagination which was not content with what had been already accomplished, and, not satisfied with completing the work as it stood, desired to improve its scope and enlarge its proportions. There is, indeed, no lover of the writings of this wonderful youth who will not be glad to see this production for its own sake, and apart from all discussion as to its intention ; but the problem of the priority of the two poems—both fragments, and both so beautiful—may afford a wide field for ingenious and critical conjecture.

R. M. MILNES."

The poem starts on page 5 with a dropped head reading "Hyperion, a Vision" ; but the head-lines, from page 6 to page 24, read on the versos, "Another version of," and on the rectos "Keats's Hyperion." Concerning the title of this reconstruction, I do not find much evidence properly so called. As we have seen, Brown is the authority for the now established fact that Keats attempted the task of "re-modelling the fragment of Hyperion into the form of a Vision"; but it does not appear that he called it "Hyperion, a Vision." Lord Houghton contributed it to the Philobiblon Society's Collections as "Another Version" of the fragment, and used the description "A Vision" on one page. The almost invariably accurate Woodhouse calls it "The Fall of Hyperion, a Dream"—not casually or descriptively, but as the title of an unpublished work from which he inscribes some extracts in a collection of quotations from various authors prefixed to his interleaved copy of Endymion.

Many of Keats's poems appeared first in periodicals; and mention should here be made of The Examiner (in Leigh Hunt's time), Annals of the Fine Arts (1817-20), Hunt's Literary Pocket-Book, his Indicator, The Gem, a Literary Annual, edited by Thomas Hood, Hood's Magazine, The Dial, The Athenæum, Notes and Queries, and The Century Guild Hobby Horse, all of which are among the textual sources laid under contribution for the present edition. And it should also be mentioned that, in the year 1877, a great mass of new material, mixed with old and frightfully garbled, appeared in the New York World (June 26 and 27). The Manuscript source of most of it is now in what may properly be called the HOUGHTON-CREWE KEATS COLLECTION.

Passing now from Printed to Manuscript material in this survey of authorities and their history, I think I may say that the sources of the present edition include practically everything that is known. In giving a somewhat full account of this material it will be necessary to compromise more or less as between the order in which the material was gradually unearthed and the order in which the final results obtained from it appear in this edition.

First and foremost, Lord Houghton, always generous, not only allowed me to make free with all his Keats publications for the purposes of my previous editions, but tendered the use of his manuscript papers also, though at the time I was not able to make the full examination of them at Fryston Hall which he offered to allow. His generosity, however, has been continued by his son, the Earl of Crewe, who has permitted a free use of the papers by Professor Colvin, Mr. Ernest de Sélincourt, and myself; and between us three workers there has, of course, been reciprocity of accommodation. The HOUGHTON-CREWE KEATS COLLECTION is now much increased in value both by addition and by rearrangement.

Sir Charles Diike's collection includes many things, of the utmost consequence, both to the text of the writings of Keats and to the completeness of illustrative detail. Letters from the poet, books formerly possessed by him, numerous letters from George Keats, Severn, and Brown, and a great mass of related documents, were placed unreservedly in my hands by Sir Charles, and figure conspicuously throughout the volumes of my previous editions.

Important papers of Severn fell some twenty-four years ago into the hands of Mr. Henry Sotheran of Piccadilly; and I had the advantage of going over them all and making full collations, either by Mr. Sotheran's kindness or by that of later owners of such as passed from the Piccadilly establishment before I examined the collection. To one or two of these papers it will be necessary to recur later.

A document of exceptional interest used at that time was a copy-book into which Tom Keats had copied, before publication, a number of the poems forming the 1817 volume. This book contained transcripts of the Specimen of an Induction, Calidore, On receiving a Curious Shell, Imitation of Spenser, and several of the Sonnets. It had passed into the hands of John Scott, editor of The London Magazine, who was killed in a duel with a Mr. Christie arising out of the abominable "Cockney School" articles in Blackwood's Magazine.

Tom Keats had visited Scott in Paris ; and it may have been on that occasion that the copy-book came into Scott's possession.

A more important document acquired by myself about the same time, and still in my collection, was a curious volume originally used for writing fair copies of poems in—poems from various hands. At a later stage it was converted into a scrap-book—newspaper cuttings and other curiosities being stuck over pages of George Keats's writing ; and in one part several of George's copies from John's poems are inserted, having at their head the autograph manuscript of the sonnet to Mrs. George Keats (when Miss Wylie), whom I suppose to have been the owner of the book, seeing that it contains among its curiosities the original parchment commission of James Wylie, as adjutant of the Fifeshire Regiment of Fencible Infantry, signed by George III. in 1794.

The numerous letters to and from Haydon, preserved in the journals of the painter, filled up important blanks and supplied a great number of additions and corrections for Keats's Poetry as well as his Letters.

Most of Keats's principal works and a great mass of the minor poems have been revised by me from manuscript sources ; and not the least of the fortunate chances attending my efforts was the discovery of Richard Woodhouse's copy of the published Endymion, in which were noted, not only the variations of the final manuscript from the printed text, but also those of the first draft, which had not itself come to the surface. Woodhouse was an ardent admirer of Keats and an enthusiastic student of his works, as well as an excellent scholar and most judicious adviser. His copy of Endymion was interleaved, seemingly while Keats was still alive, and the textual differences were noted down in the most business-like and elaborate manner, while the pages bear many remarks and hints of a learned and acute kind, whereof I have not scrupled to avail myself. So far as regards the largest of Keats's poems, this book has been of more service than either of the other printed copies of Endymion used by me, namely Sir Charles Dilke's copy and one in my own possession with a number of autograph corrections. But Sir Charles Dilke's copy has a quantity of manuscript poems bound up at the end; and these have yielded a good deal of assistance in textual work. Numerous readings marked Dilke in the foot-notes are from that volume.

In Woodhouse's copy of Endymion, there is a note against the passage "so I will begin" &c., line 39, Book I, to the effect that the poem was begun in the spring of 1817 and finished in the winter of 1817-18; and in the title-page he has inserted April before 1818. The statement corresponds with Keats's own record of May 1817 that he was busying himself at Margate with the commencement of Endymion. This reference cannot of course be to the same Endymion ("I stood tip-toe upon a little hill") that he expected to finish in one more attack when he wrote to Clarke in December 1816. Probably the conception referred to by Lord Houghton (ALDINE edition, page xvii) as "long germinating in his fancy" really took bodily form and substance, and that substance was wholly rejected, when Keats came within the radius of Haydon's heroic art propaganda, for the design on an ambitious scale which the next spring was to see in print. Woodhouse records that at the end of the first draft is written "Burford Bridge, Nov. 28, 1817." His statement as to the month of issue scarcely does more than confirm the record of the series of documents bearing on this point published by Lord Houghton. Thus, the first book was in the publisher's hands by January 1818, and the last was copied out by the 14th of March; the original Preface, rejected upon the unfavourable verdict of Reynolds and others of Keats's friends, is dated the 19th of March; the Preface as published is dated the 10th of April, and went, it seems, in a letter to Reynolds of that date.

ENDYMION.

A ROMANCE.

BY JOHN KEATS.

“The stretched metre of an antique song.”

Shakespeare's Sonnets.

In favour of the simple dedication as printed in the book, the following had been rejected :—

INSCRIBED,

WITH EVERY FEELING OF PRIDE AND REGRET
AND WITH “A BOWED MIND,”

TO THE MEMORY OF

THE MOST ENGLISH OF POETS EXCEPT SHAKESPEARE,

THOMAS CHATTERTON.

ORIGINAL PREFACE REJECTED ON CONSIDERATION.

IN a great nation, the work of an individual is of so little importance ; his pleadings and excuses are so uninteresting ; his “way of life” such a nothing, that a Preface seems a sort of impertinent bow to strangers who care nothing about it.

A Preface, however, should be down in so many words ; and such a one that by an eye-glance over the type the Reader may catch an idea of an Author's modesty, and non-opinion of himself—which I sincerely hope may be seen in the few lines I have to write, notwithstanding many proverbs of many ages old which men find a great pleasure in receiving as gospel.

About a twelvemonth since, I published a little book of verses ; it was read by some dozen of my friends who lik'd it; and some dozen whom I was unacquainted with, who did not.

Now, when a dozen human beings are at words with another dozen, it becomes a matter of anxiety to side with one's friends—more especially when excited thereto by a great love of Poetry. I fought under disadvantages. Before I began I had no inward feel of being able to finish; and as I proceeded my steps were all uncertain. So this Poem must rather be considered as an endeavour than a thing accomplished; a poor prologue to what, if I live, I humbly hope to do. In duty to the Public I should have kept it back for a year or two, knowing it to be so faulty: but I really cannot do so,—by repetition my favourite passages sound vapid in my ears, and I would rather redeem myself with a new Poem should this one be found of any interest.

I have to apologize to the lovers of simplicity for touching the spell of loneliness that hung about Endymion; if any of my lines plead for me with such people I shall be proud.

It has been too much the fashion of late to consider men bigoted and addicted to every word that may chance to escape their lips; now I here declare that I have not any particular affection for any particular phrase, word, or letter in the whole affair. I have written to please myself, and in hopes to please others, and for a love of fame; if I neither please myself, nor others, nor get fame, of what consequence is Phraseology?

I would fain escape the bickerings that all Works not exactly in chime bring upon their begetters—but this is not fair to expect, there must be conversation of some sort and to object shows a man's consequence. In case of a London drizzle or a Scotch mist, the following quotation from Marston may perhaps 'stead me as an umbrella for an hour or so: "let it be the curtesy of my peruser rather to pity my self-hindering labours than to malice me."

One word more—for we cannot help seeing our own affairs in every point of view—should any one call my dedication to Chatterton affected I answer as followeth: “Were I dead, sir, I should like a Book dedicated to me.”

TEIGNMOUTH,
March 19th, 1818.

On the 27th of April, Keats wrote to Taylor apologizing for giving him “all the trouble” of Endymion, and adding, apparently in allusion to that poem, “The book pleased me much. It is very free from faults; and, although there are one or two words I should wish replaced, I see in many places an improvement greatly to the purpose.” The measure of Keats’s fluency in composition may be judged by observing the alterations recorded in Book I. Of that Book there appears to have been but one manuscript, written on sheets of quarto foolscap paper, and considerably altered before going to press. The other three Books were written into a blank book and afterwards copied on quarto foolscap uniform with that used for Book I. Hence the printer’s copy (the quarto manuscript) shows much more revision in Book I than elsewhere. The quarto manuscript remained in the Taylor family till 1897, when it was sold at auction by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, and was bought by a bookseller. With that manuscript I collated the printed text throughout before issuing the Library edition, the precious holograph being courteously lent to me by Mr. Taylor; but the variations given in Books II, III, and IV from the draft, I took from Woodhouse’s manuscript annotations, not having yet traced the holograph draft of these three books. The manuscript of the rejected Preface (first published by Lord Houghton in 1867 in the Life and Letters of John Keats) was formerly in the collection of Dr. John Webster, sometime M.P. for Aberdeen. It was attached to the rejected title-page and dedication, the whole consisting of six quarto leaves evidently detached from the Taylor manuscript, which, if I remember rightly, did not begin in Keats's autograph, but had at least one leaf in another hand. The rejected Preface, when I saw it in 1890, showed some cancellings; but I have mislaid any notes I may have taken of them; and, since I saw it, it has been sold by auction and gone I know not whither.

Keats's holograph manuscript of Lamia, from which the poem was actually printed, consists of twenty-six leaves, foolscap folio, generally written upon one side only. It is a carefully finished manuscript, finally revised for the press. The extract from Burton does not figure in it; but there is the following foot-note on page 1:—"The ground work of this story will be found in Burton's 'Anatomy of Melancholy' Part 3. Sect. 3. Memb. 1st Subs. 1st." It was lent to me for use in connexion with the Library edition of Keats, having remained in the Taylor family; and it was disposed of by public auction at the same time as the manuscript of Endymion, namely in 1897. The fragment in the HOUGHTON-CREWE collection referred to at pages 182 et seq. consists of two leaves from a draft of Part II of Lamia.

Of the bulk of Isabella or the Pot of Basil I had no manuscript authority before me in preparing the library edition of 1883 and only Woodhouse's transcript for the reissue of 1889: nevertheless, that is the next poem to be dealt with now.

In a letter from Teignmouth to Reynolds dated the 27th of April, 1818, Keats says, "I have written for my folio Shakespeare, in which there are the first few stanzas of my 'Pot of Basil.' I have the rest here, finished, and will copy the whole out fair shortly, and George will bring it you. The compliment is paid by us to Boccace, whether we publish or no . . ." As the folio Shakespeare, now in Sir Charles Dilke's hands, contains no stanzas of Isabella, it is to be presumed they were only loose in the book. Again on the 3rd of May 1818, Keats writes to Reynolds, "I have written to George for the first stanzas of 'Isabel.' I shall have them soon, and will copy the whole out for you." And, in a letter to Bailey dated the 10th of June, he says, "I want to read you my 'Pot of Basil.'" This all points to the recent completion of the poem; and Lord Houghton records on the authority of Brown that it was only just completed when the friends started on their Scotch tour in June 1818. On the 14th of February 1819, he promised to send the poem out to his brother George, with other recent work. It is necessary to be particular about this point, because Leigh Hunt when reviewing the 1820 volume, made the unaccountable statement that the poems in this volume "were almost all written four years ago, when the author was but twenty." The allusion to Boccaccio is connected with a project of Keats and Reynolds to issue a volume of tales versified from that author.

No doubt Keats fulfilled his promise to send the manuscript of Isabella to Reynolds before he started on his Scotch tour with Brown. After his return he appears to have met Reynolds and discussed the poem with him; for, in a letter dated "Wedn. morn." and post-marked "Oct. 14," Reynolds speaks of having seen Keats "yesterday." The contents of the letter point to the autumn of 1818; and, though the year-date of the post-mark was torn off (with a few words of the text) in opening the sealed letter, the almanac tells us that the 14th of October was a Wednesday in 1818. The holograph is said to be in the possession of Mr. W. H. Arnold of New York, who allowed the letter to appear in The Century Magazine for October 1895, where it reads thus:—

"My dear Keats: I was most delighted at seeing you yesterday, for I hardly knew how I was to meet with you, situated as you are and confined as I am. I wish I could have stayed longer with you. As to the poem, I am of all things anxious that you should publish it, for its completeness will be a full answer to all the ignorant malevolence of cold, lying Scotchmen and stupid Englishmen. The overweening struggle to oppress you only shows the world that so much of endeavour cannot be directed to nothing. Men do not set their muscles and strain their sinews to break a straw. I am confident, Keats, that the 'Pot of Basil' hath that simplicity and quiet pathos which are of sure sovereignty over all hearts. I must say that it would delight me to have you prove yourself to the world what we know you to be—to have you annul The Quarterly Review by the best of all answers. When I see you I will give you the Poem, and pray look it over with that eye to the littlenesses which the world are so fond of excepting to (though I confess, with that word altered which I mentioned, I see nothing that can be cavilled at). And let us have the Tale put forth, now that an interest is aroused. One or two of your sonnets you might print, I am sure. And I know that I may suggest to you which, because you can decide as you like after[ward. You] will remember that we were [to print?] together. I give over all intention, and you ought to be alone. I can never write anything now—my mind is taken the other way. But I shall set my heart on having you high, as you ought to be. Do you get Fame, and I shall have it in being your affectionate and steady friend. There is no one I am more interested in, and there is no one that I have more pleasure in communicating my own happiness to. You will gratify me much by letting me have, whenever you have leisure, copies of what you write; for more than myself have a sincere interest in you. When shall I see you, and when shall I go with you to Severn's?

Your ever affectionate

Wedn. morn.

J. H. REYNOLDS."

Two of the tales from Boccaccio versified by Reynolds were published in The Garden of Florence, &c. (1821). In view of the unachieved scheme of joint authorship, the following sentences from the Preface to Reynolds's volume should stand associated with his letter and with Isabella:—

"The stories from Boccaccio (The Garden of Florence and The Ladye of Provençe) were to have been associated with tales from the same source, intended to have been written by a friend; but illness on his part, and distracting engagements on mine, prevented us from accomplishing our plan at the time; and Death now, to my deep sorrow, has frustrated it for ever! He, who is gone, was one of the very kindest friends I possessed, and yet he was not kinder perhaps to me, than to others. His intense mind and powerful feeling would, I truly believe, have done the world some service, had his life been spared—but he was of too sensitive a nature—and thus he was destroyed! One story he completed, and that is to me now the most pathetic poem in existence!"

The holograph of Isabella in the British Museum volume (Egerton 2780) is called simply The Pot of Basil. It is probably the one sent to Reynolds and duly returned by him. Mr. R. A. Potts formerly possessed what would seem to be two fragments of the original draft. This manuscript, which was collated for the LIBRARY edition of 1883, is of stanzas xxx to xl, exclusive of stanza xxxii; two leaves, one shorter than the other by the length of a stanza, written upon both sides of the paper, and probably having lost stanza xxxii with stanza xxix at the back of it by a stroke of those generous scissors wherewith manuscripts of Keats were distributed by Severn, formerly the owner of these fragments. The readings marked MS. fragment are from this.

In Woodhouse's "Common-place book" is a transcript from an autograph manuscript of Isabella with notes and corrections, some in the poet's writing and some in other handwritings. It would be almost safe to assume that any variation of Woodhouse's version from the printed text is a genuine reading incidental to the stage of the composition which had been reached when the holograph was transcribed; but as a matter of fact the transcript was clearly made from the very holograph now in the Museum. At the close of the Woodhouse transcript are inscribed the words "Written at Teignmouth in the Spring of 1818 at the suggestion of J. H. R."

The Eve of St. Agnes is the next poem to be dealt with. In a letter to George Keats and his wife dated the 14th of February [1819], Keats says that he took with him to Chichester, where he had been staying in January, "some of the thin paper, and wrote on it a little poem called 'St. Agnes' Eve,' which you will have as it is, when I have finished the blank part of the rest for you." Lord Houghton says the poem "was begun on a visit in Hampshire, at the commencement of this year [1819] and finished on his return to Hampstead." On the 5th of September 1819, Keats wrote to Taylor from Winchester that he was "occupied in revising 'St. Agnes' Eve,' and studying Italian."

A manuscript of The Eve of St. Agnes, wanting the first seven stanzas, was in the Locker-Lampson collection. It was among the relics which passed from the late Joseph Severn to a Dr. Valeriani, and which were afterwards bought and sold by Messrs. Sotheran of Piccadilly (see ante). This manuscript, collated for the LIBRARY edition of 1883, is written in double columns on both sides of very thin oblong paper, presumably that taken to Chichester, and shows abundant and extensive revisions and corrections. Nothing could be more interesting as a study of a great poet's way of work. It is possible that the opening stanzas were separated to be sent to Mr. Taylor in support of Keats's complaint that a liberty had been taken with the text of the seventh stanza; but, as the Woodhouse Common-place book, containing a transcript of the poem, was in use at the publisher's house and could have been appealed to, it is perhaps more probable that Severn cut the stanzas off for an autograph collector. Fortunately the Woodhouse transcript seems to have been made from the Locker-Lampson holograph before it was mutilated, and may be held to supply for critical purposes the missing seven stanzas. It also supplies a suppressed one between the published stanzas iii and iv. Woodhouse's divergences from the final state of the holograph are, generally, of a trifling kind. The holograph is difficult to read completely; and there was room for two interpretations of the author's final meaning here and there. Moreover, Woodhouse was in communication with Keats, and may have got an oral change or two, as for instance in the matter of the hero's name, which he gives as Lionel in his transcript and never writes Porphyro, though the holograph shows Keats to have been wavering between Lionel and Porphyro.

The transcript in the Museum Keats manuscript book, made by George Keats, was evidently from a different holograph. Hence it may be presumed that, when Keats was "occupied in revising" the poem in September 1819, he was making a fresh copy from the very rough draft already described. In collating the whole of these manuscripts with Keats's published text, I have noted many variations of no great consequence in themselves in order to give a reasonable insight into the composition of this deservedly much-prized poem.

The Pocket Dante mentioned at page 349 in connexion with the Sonnet On a Dream &c. is in my own collection: it contains a holograph draft of that sonnet and a copy by Miss Brawne of Keats's last sonnet.

A holograph manuscript of the Stanzas beginning "In adrear-nighted December" was sold at Sotheby's in June 1876 and purchased by Mr. Charles Law, who lent it to me at the time for collation: it is the manuscript referred to at page 338.

The letters of Keats to his sister, which form so large a proportion of the letters first published by me in 1883, threw a flood of new light on his character, and had also their contributions to and bearings on the mass and text of his verse. These were lent to me by Señora Fanny Keats de Llanos for the purposes of my edition of that year, and, though not bequeathed by her to the nation as a memorial of her illustrious brother, were—all but three or four—presented after her death to the British Museum by her daughter, Señorita Rosa Llanos y Keats.

Thus far my survey has been mainly of the material available up to 1883. After the LIBRARY edition of that year was published other workers put forth books by and about Keats based more or less on original material. First came an American issue of Lord Houghton's edition of the poetry, together with a volume of letters, superintended by Mr. J. G. Speed, who, being a grandson of George Keats, had access to some of the papers formerly preserved at Louisville in Kentucky, and was enabled to publish one new letter of considerable interest as well as several passages omitted from previous printed versions, and a fac-simile of the holograph draft of the lines, "Unfelt, unheard, unseen."

Later still Mr. Colvin's admirable volume for the MEN OF LETTERS SERIES was written and brought out. It first appeared in 1887. Not only is it, as an appreciation of Keats's character and works, highly valuable; but it is based upon material of which much had not then (and some has not yet) been published. Of much of this material Mr. Colvin gave me the benefit of consultation at first hand for the purposes of a revision of my Library edition published in 1889 and of the volume entitled Poetry and Prose by John Keats published the next year.

The following is Mr. Colvin's own account of the special material used by him with which I am now particularly concerned.

"In addition to printed materials I have made use of the following unprinted, viz. :—

"I. Houghton MSS. Under this title I refer to the contents of an album from the library at Fryston

Hall, in which the late Lord Houghton bound up a quantity of the materials he had used in the preparation of the 'Life and Letters,' as well as of correspondence concerning Keats addressed to him both before and after the publication of his book. The chief contents are the manuscript memoir of Keats by Charles Brown, which was offered by the writer in vain to Galignani, and I believe other publishers; transcripts by the same hand of a few of Keats's poems; reminiscences or brief memoirs of the poet by his friends Charles Cowden Clarke, Henry Stephens, George Felton Mathew, Joseph Severn, and Benjamin Bailey; together with letters from all the above, from John Hamilton Reynolds, and several others. For the use of this collection, without which my work must have been attempted to little purpose, I am indebted to the kindness of its owner, the present Lord Houghton.¹

"II. Woodhouse MSS. A. A common-place book in which Richard Woodhouse, the friend of Keats and of his publishers Messrs. Taylor and Hessey, transcribed—as would appear from internal evidence, about midsummer, 1819—the chief part of Keats's poems at that date unpublished. The transcripts are in many cases made from early drafts of the poems: some contain gaps which Woodhouse has filled up in pencil from later drafts: to others are added corrections, or suggestions for corrections, some made in the hand of Mr. Taylor and some in that of Keats himself.

"III. Woodhouse MSS. B. A note-book in which the same Woodhouse has copied—evidently for Mr. Taylor, at the time when that gentleman was meditating a biography of the poet—a number of letters addressed by Keats to Mr. Taylor himself, to the transcriber, to Reynolds and his sisters, to Rice, and Bailey. Three or four of these letters, as well as portions of a few others, are unpublished.²

² This statement was left standing, no doubt through oversight,

"Both the volumes last named were formerly the property of Mrs. Taylor, a niece by marriage of the publisher, and are now my own. A third note-book by Woodhouse, containing personal notices and recollections of Keats, was unluckily destroyed in the fire at Messrs Kegan Paul and Co's. premises in 1883 . . ."

Woodhouse's book of transcripts has been called a Common-place book because it happens that he used for his purpose a book published in 1811 by Taylor and Hessey for use as an ordinary Common-place book. This publication was a quarto volume of blank paper with a printed introduction, bound in brown grained calf; and it was entitled The Literary Diary; or, Improved Common-place Book. The preliminary matter consists of an explanatory treatise, an abridgment of the "Aurifodina" of Drexelius by Bishop Horne, and an "Index, formed with some variations, on the celebrated plan of Mr. Locke." All this machinery was of course wasted in the circumstances of the case; but the book is of good paper; and Woodhouse produced very workmanlike copies. The Common-place book contains transcripts of no fewer than thirty-two minor poems by Keats, besides those of Isabella, The Eve of St. Agnes, and Hyperion.

Under the title "A Shelf of Old Books," Mrs. Fields contributed to Scribner's Magazine for March 1888 an account of some books of personal interest owned by the late Mr. James T. Fields. One of these was a volume containing the poems of Coleridge, Shelley, and Keats, annotated in manuscript by Leigh Hunt. Inserted in this were a letter from Coleridge, a tiny business note from Shelley, and a fragment of Keats's holograph draft of "I stood tip-toe upon a little hill." It seems to follow line 37, and is duly described with all its cancellings set out in the COMPLETE edition, Volume I, page 208.

in the later issue of Mr. Colvin's book; but both he and I have, since 1887, published the letters and passages referred to.

By 1889 Mr. Colvin had in his hands the holographs (which had been so badly dealt with in the New York World) of some of the most important of Keats's letters to George and Georgiana Keats in America, showing portentous variations from published texts and a surprising mass of unpublished or imperfectly published matter. Of these also I had the use in 1889. Since then (1891) Mr. Colvin has used the same material in his Letters of John Keats to his Family and Friends; and I myself published in a single volume in 1895 the whole of Keats's then known letters, chronologically arranged. These included several discovered after 1891.

In The Athenæum for the 23rd of January 1891, Professor Jenks of Melbourne in Victoria announced the discovery of that highly interesting little volume of Keats manuscripts, formerly belonging to George Keats and now in the British Museum. It contains holograph copies, by the poet, of Isabella, the Mermaid Tavern lines, and The Eve of St. Mark, and also transcripts of "Hence Burgundy, Claret, and Port," The Eve of St. Agnes, the Odes on Melancholy, to a Nightingale, and on a Grecian Urn, "Welcome joy, and welcome sorrow," "Where's the Poet?" the Ode to Autumn, the Robin Hood lines, some lines by L. E. L. on a portrait of Keats, three stanzas of Adonais, and a sonnet by the Honorable Mrs. Norton. Placed loosely in the volume were a transcript of the Lines written in the Scotch Highlands and some verses addressed by "an unknown bard" to one of George Keats's daughters. The book proved on careful collation to be most valuable. From it are the readings marked Holograph in the foot-notes to Isabella.

Why it has been suggested that the poems in George Keats's book not in the autograph of the poet are in that of his sister-in-law, it is difficult to imagine. Apart from the easily verifiable fact that all but one of them are in George Keats's writing, it is obvious on internal evidence that the hand is that of a man, and of that particular man who signed his name as George Keats on the first page. From the fact that he put the date 1820 under his signature, it is not very unsafe to deduce that, during the three weeks which the brothers passed together in January of that year, George got together all he could of John's unpublished work, taking such holographs as were available, and copying from his brother's or Brown's book when no detached copies were at hand. From the almost rustic appearance of the little volume, I judge that he got the papers bound together in Kentucky on his return. The binding is of strong brown leather (cowhide, I should say), roughly worked; and the book opens badly. The loose papers have now been fastened in at the end of the book, the Egerton arms have been stamped upon the original rough cover, and the book is officially known as Egerton Manuscript 2780.

The following data bear upon the manuscript authority for Otho the Great. Keats and Brown went to the Isle of Wight for a summer sojourn in 1819; and during the months of July and August the tragedy was written at intervals under very peculiar conditions. Those conditions are thus described by Brown in a note given by Lord Houghton in the ALDINE edition of 1876:—"At Shanklin he undertook a difficult task; I engaged to furnish him with the title, characters, and dramatic conduct of a tragedy, and he was to enwrap it in poetry. The progress of this work was curious, for while I sat opposite to him, he caught my description of each scene entire, with the characters to be brought forward, the events, and everything connected with it. Thus he went on, scene after scene, never knowing nor inquiring into the scene which was to follow, until four acts were completed. It was then he required to know at once all the events that were to occupy the fifth act; I explained them to him, but, after a patient hearing and some thought, he insisted that many incidents in it were too humorous, or, as he termed them, too melodramatic. He wrote the fifth act in accordance with his own views, and so contented was I with his poetry that at the time, and for a long time after, I thought he was in the right." There are numerous references to this undertaking in Keats's published letters; but one in particular should be quoted here. It is in a letter to Mr. Dilke dated "Shanklin, August 2, 1819," and is as follows:—"Brown and I are pretty well harnessed again to our dog-cart. I mean the tragedy, which goes on sinkingly. We are thinking of introducing an elephant, but have not historical reference within reach to determine as to Otho's menagerie. When Brown first mentioned this I took it for a joke; however, he brings such plausible reasons, and discourses so eloquently on the dramatic effect, that I am giving it a serious consideration." This joke no doubt got to Brown's ears, even if Keats did not show it to him; for in The Papers of a Critic (1875), Volume I, page 9, Sir Charles Dilke gives the following extract from a letter dated ten days later (August 12, 1819), in which Brown, writing from the Isle of Wight to Mr. Dilke retorts with yet more boisterous jocularity:—"Keats is very industrious, but I swear by the prompter's whistle, and by the bangs of stage-doors, he is obstinately monstrous. What think you of Otho's threatening cold pig to the newly-married couple? He says the Emperor must have a spice of drollery. His introduction of Grimm's adventure, lying three days on his back for love, though it spoils the unity of time, is not out of the way for the character of Ludolf, so I have consented to it; but I cannot endure his fancy of making the princess blow up her hairdresser, for smearing her cheek with pomatum and spoiling her rouge. It may be natural, as he observes, but so might many things. However, such as it is, it has advanced to nearly the end of the fourth act."

From the fact that Keats wrote to Taylor on the 5th of September 1819 of having finished Lamia after finishing Otho the Great, we may fairly regard the Tragedy as having been done before the end of August, even if it was taken out again and touched up after that month. Brown certainly made at least one copy of the whole play; and it may be that Keats touched up one transcript or more of his colleague's making. George Keats wrote to Dilke in 1833 a letter which has bearings on this subject, and of which passages will be found in the General Appendix of the Library edition of Keats's Works (Volume IV, pages 416-17). He had no reason to love Brown, though he was grateful to him for befriending Keats. On the Otho topic, George, who, by the bye, wrote much better than he spelt, says:—

“When I left Hampstead I thought I had a complete copy of Otho, John took some pa[ins] to get the sheets together, copied what was deficient and [made] the whole, as he said perfect, when I arrived home I fo[und] many sheets missing, I suspected Brown had abstracted [them]. I may not perhaps do him justice, I may be meeting [out the] same measure to him that he meet[ed] [sic] to me, and regret that any cause should have occur[r]ed to sever so long a friendship between you. . . .

“I belive I must retract the above severity against Brown, since writing it, I have been looking over John's correspondence in which he dwells so much on his kindness that I must perforce acquit, and try to like him. Has any one got a copy of John's, unpublished works? I suppose I must suspend my curiosity untill I can cross the broad Atlantic.”

In a later letter he says:—

“I have an imperfect copy of Otho much of it the original composition, Brown has a perfect copy, and has I believe some ownership right to it, perhaps one half, will he furnish a copy, or sell his interest?”

Some eight or ten years ago, a large fragment of what is probably the holograph produced in the conditions described by Brown was sent over from America and passed into the hands of Mr. Thomas Wise. It consisted of the first three acts and the first scene of Act IV; and, when I saw it, it was bound as a separate volume. Among the papers of the late Joseph Severn were the remains of a manuscript from which he had cut some pieces, to give away as specimens of Keats's handwriting. The greater part of these remains were (1) the second scene of Act IV, almost complete, and (2) Act V, also almost complete: these are, no doubt, substantially the complement of the bound manuscript; but there was also among the Severn papers a short fragment from the first scene of Act I, beginning with Conrad's speech (line 23) and ending with line 44. Lord Houghton's text, first published among the Literary Remains, varies greatly from the dismembered manuscript, as may be seen in the COMPLETE Keats from the results of collation. The small manuscript fragment of Act I, scene i, corresponds with the first printed text; but it may safely be assumed that that is because Brown's copy so corresponded and that it was from Brown's copy, handed over with the rest of the Keats papers, that Lord Houghton printed the play. Also, it seems quite clear that there were other reasons than those found in Keats's letters for acquitting Brown of the particular charge of meanness retracted by George Keats: his brother must have unwittingly taken the missing portions of Otho to Italy with him. Hence, so far as that affair is concerned, however much Brown may have misjudged George Keats, he "leaves the court without a stain upon his character."

The appearance of the large folio fragment from America, which must be what George took back with him in 1820, responds perfectly to Brown's graphic description of the way in which the collaborators worked. Keats's writing generally goes boldly and freely across the pages—the iambic line being usually enough for the width of the paper. The names of the speakers are as a rule inserted on the verso of the leaf preceding that on which the dialogue is written upon the recto, so that an inch or so is thus added to the width of paper available for speech and name of speaker. In some instances Keats omitted to put the names: for example, at the beginning of the long variant of lines 16 to 121 in the first scene, the speakers' names had to be inserted in square brackets for seven speeches in the COMPLETE edition, where all minutiæ of the kind are recorded.

In collating the manuscript and printed texts I have adopted readings from each. The list of persons of the drama, printed by Lord Houghton, is not in the holograph Manuscript, in which GERSA and GERZA both stand as the name of the Prince of Hungary. Presumably the list was furnished by Brown.

Concerning the fine fragment King Stephen, Lord Houghton gives in the Aldine edition of 1876 the following note by Brown:—"As soon as Keats had finished Otho the Great, I pointed out to him a subject for an English historical tragedy in the reign of Stephen, beginning with his defeat by the Empress Maud and ending with the death of his son Eustace. He was struck with the variety of events and characters which must necessarily be introduced, and I offered to give, as before, their dramatic conduct. 'The play must open,' I began, 'with the field of battle, when Stephen's forces are retreating'—'Stop,' he cried, 'I have been too long in leading-strings; I will do all this myself.' He immediately set about it, and wrote two or three scenes—about 170 lines." Brown's estimate was considerably within the mark, as there are about 193 lines. The manuscript fragment, which is in the HOUGHTON-CREWE collection, consists of eight leaves—three quarto leaves in the writing of Charles Armitage Brown and five folio leaves in Keats's writing. This manuscript I first examined in 1889. Brown's first leaf has on the recto the title—

King Stephen.
 a fragment
 of a tragedy, by
 John Keats
 Novr 1819—

while the verso bears the following list of Dramatis Personæ.

King Stephen.
 Duke of Gloucester
 Earl of Chester.
 Earl Baldwin.
 The Empress Maud, or Matilda.

In Keats's text, however, Gloucester is the Earl of Gloucester. So far as Scene I is concerned, Brown's transcript corresponds with the published text save in line 35, where he reads "Not twenty Earl of Chesters." From the appearance of this manuscript it would seem that, in November 1819, to throw off poetic utterances in the finest and freest style was as easy to Keats as the breathing of his native air.

Between the times at which the LIBRARY editions and the COMPLETE edition appeared I obtained what is, as far as I am aware, the only known authority for the Sonnet beginning—

Before he went to feed with owls and bats.

This was preserved by Henry Stephens in a little manuscript volume consisting of Keats's published Poems of 1817 copied out with the addition of eight fugitive pieces of which this Sonnet alone was still unpublished when the little volume, written by Stephens in 1828, came into my hands. The Sonnet is doubtless authentic, although poor, obscure, and possibly corrupt in the last line.

It was during the same interval that I had an opportunity of examining a holograph manuscript of The Cap and Bells, wanting stanzas ix to xvi and lxxxii to lxxxviii. I think it possible that Keats got it out to work on it, after throwing it aside—for on the margin of one of its pages is written the clearly late fragment (page 486) beginning—

This living hand, now warm and capable ;

but he may have had it in his hand again merely to lend to Hunt for The Indicator, in which a few stanzas were printed. The variations and rejected readings recorded in my foot-notes are of course from this manuscript. It is written with unusual inaccuracy: the first stanza, for example, shows the forms "sleight" for "slight," "woing" for "wooing," "warn" for "warm," and "smoth" for "smooth." Errors of this kind are not recorded as a rule in the notes to this poem in the COMPLETE edition, where however the results of a scrupulous examination of the holograph are given. This manuscript was sold by auction on the 5th of June 1902; and I examined it again: it had been further mutilated since my previous examination, as I pointed out in The Athenæum for the 14th of June: the sheet containing the latter part of stanza xlv, stanzas xlvi to li, and, I believe, the fragment "This living hand," had been removed in the interim; but who now owns either that sheet or the rest of the manuscript, I cannot say.

Up to the time when the COMPLETE Keats was published, no holograph manuscript of Hyperion had yet come to light; but Woodhouse had had one copied into his Common-place book before it was revised finally for the impression of 1820, and had marked or got marked in pencil some of the subsequent omissions and alterations. The transcript was made in what one would feel confident in describing as the writing of a lawyer's young clerk (Woodhouse was a lawyer): it is very carefully made, and, I did not doubt, preserved much of Keats's spelling, punctuation, and capitalling. It may be noted as a measure of the transcriber's education that Mnemosyne is invariably spelt Mucmosyne

(Keats's n's and u's being more or less indistinctive). In one case, Woodhouse found his boy out, and altered the u to an n. There is scarcely any doubt that this transcript was the "copy" sent to the printer in 1820 to set the poem up from. It has the usual indelible printing-house finger-marks, and, as touched up with the pencil, does not vary from the printed book in a greater degree than would be likely, if we allow for the usual amount of printing-house punctuation and a not undue revision of proofs by the author. The rest of the Common-place book was kept clean and secret while Hyperion was thus "at press," by some arrangement of sealing up; for the remains of the sealing-wax are still there on the pages before and after Hyperion.

Since the COMPLETE Keats was published very little unknown poetry by Keats has come to light, and none of any consequence except a suppressed passage of The Fall of Hyperion and a passage of The Eve of St. Mark, to be mentioned presently. Of Hyperion as published by Keats, however, the holograph manuscript, almost complete, has been recovered and added to the British Museum collection; and a further examination of Lord Houghton's papers by the Earl of Crewe has revealed the presence of a transcript of The Fall of Hyperion, made by Woodhouse's clerks and corrected by Woodhouse himself. The recovery of these two documents—the holograph of Hyperion and the Woodhouse transcript of The Fall of Hyperion—formed together an event of capital importance in relation to the text of Keats's works; and that event was signalized by the issue of a large folio volume from the CLARENDON PRESS, under the editorship of Mr. Ernest de Sélincourt. The volume contained a fac-simile of the holograph and a print of the Woodhouse copy of The Fall, together with admirable introductions and notes by the editor.

In the meantime, on the 13th of May 1901, some Keats manuscripts were disposed of in the autograph collection of the late Townely Green. The Keats items included (1) a holograph copy of the Sonnet on first looking into Chapman's Homer, headed in another hand "To Mariane Reynolds," and catalogued as "Autograph Verses to Marianne Reynolds" [sic; but her name was really Mariane with one n only], (2) the draft of the Nightingale Ode now in the HOUGHTON-CREWE collection, headed "Ode to the Nightingale," not "a Nightingale," (3) a beautiful copy on quarto paper of the Ode to Psyche, and (4) a rough sheet of note-paper bearing fair copies of the lines "Unfelt, unheard, unseen," and the Hymn to Apollo. All of these manuscripts I examined carefully: by far the most important was the Nightingale draft, fully described by Professor Sidney Colvin in No. 30 of The Monthly Review (March 1903), which contains a fac-simile of the manuscript.

With special reference to this important lyric, Benjamin Robert Haydon, in one of his letters to Miss Mitford (Correspondence &c., Volume II, page 72), says of Keats—"The death of his brother wounded him deeply, and it appeared to me from that hour he began to droop. He wrote his exquisite Ode to the Nightingale at this time, and as we were one evening walking in the Kilburn meadows he repeated it to me, before he put it to paper, in a low, tremulous under-tone which affected me extremely." Lord Houghton says the Ode was suggested by the continued song of a nightingale which, in the spring of 1819, had built its nest close to Wentworth Place. "Keats," says the biographer (ALDINE edition, 1876, page 237), "took great pleasure in her song, and one morning took his chair from the breakfast-table to the grass plot under a plum tree, where he remained between two and three hours. He then reached the house with some scraps of paper in his hand, which he soon put together in the form of this Ode." The anecdote as told in the Life, Letters, &c. (Volume I, page 245 of the 1848 edition, and page 207 of the 1867 edition) represents Brown as detecting the poet in the act of thrusting the scraps of the Ode away

"as waste paper, behind some books," and names Brown as the person who put them together. I presume Lord Houghton thought afterwards that Brown must have mistaken the bearing of Keats's action, inasmuch as the other evidence does not square with the carelessness implied. It is well to put the two forms of the story together, because the earliest version is still a favourite "literary anecdote," and the HOUGHTON-CREWE draft does not appear to me to dispose finally of the question. This draft clearly shows Keats in the act of composition—or recomposition; but I do not think Professor Colvin proves conclusively that those two leaves were the very scraps Brown saw Keats bring in and hide. It is quite conceivable that the poet, after hiding—perhaps forgetting where he hid—the scraps, found himself in the mood to give one of the Reynoldses a copy of the ode, sat down, and recomposed it, mainly, of course, from memory.

In December 1903, Messrs. H. Sotheran & Co., of 37 Piccadilly, lent me for collation a beautiful holograph manuscript of lines 1 to 96 of the poem beginning the complement, no doubt, of the manuscript in the ROWFANT collection with which I had previously collated the poem from line 97 to the end. At the same time they lent me a holograph manuscript of the sonnet On leaving some Friends at an early Hour, on the back of which were some lines of or connected with "I stood tip-toe," and, further, a holograph of the stanzas To some Ladies (pages 15-16 of this edition).

I stood tip-toe upon a little hill,

It was from the Woodhouse section of the HOUGHTON-CREWE papers that Mr. de Sélincourt was enabled to give for the first time the trifle of 1814, "Fill for me a brimming bowl" (pages 283-4 of this edition), and the early sonnet on Peace (page 284); for at the end of The Fall of Hyperion Woodhouse's clerks had copied for him a small collection of minor poems mostly long familiar to Keats's readers, but including one or two which Lord Houghton had not thought it worth while to print.

Lord Crewe also discovered in 1904 a fragment of the manuscript of Keats's Ode to Fanny, of which Mr. de Sélincourt gave an account in Notes and Queries for the 4th of February 1905. And the Woodhouse transcript of the Sonnet "The day is gone" (pages 437-8 of this edition), now found in the same collection, varies from the Houghton text, hitherto adopted, by the transposition of the second and third quatrains. Mr. de Sélincourt gives the Woodhouse transposition in full, though only in his notes; but, as he pronounces the general effect of the whole sonnet "immeasurably enhanced" by the change, I presume that he would have adopted the new arrangement in the body of his book if he had had it in time. No other manuscript being then available, the choice lay between two hypotheses, (1) that Woodhouse's copy was made from a rough holograph which left a doubt and that the Houghton version was derived from a better holograph, and (2) that Lord Houghton himself transposed the quatrains from the Woodhouse copy. I think the sequence from line 12 to line 13 better than that from line 8 to line 13; and would leave the Sonnet as it is. Since the body of the present edition was printed I have had in my hands what is probably the holograph draft copied by Woodhouse, and have illustrated some remarks on it in The Bookman for October 1906 by means of a reproduction of the manuscript. Mr. de Sélincourt can quite properly claim this manuscript as evidence on his side; but it leaves me unconvinced. I can hardly suppose that Keats did not copy the Sonnet fairly for Miss Brawne; and I should expect her copy, if it were found, to show the quatrains arranged as in the Houghton text, and the reading light whisper in the third line as against the more significant but distinctly cacophonous tranc'd whisper of the newly discovered manuscript. The holograph is in the scrap-book lent to me by Mr. Sabin, of 118 Shaftesbury Avenue. In that book is a beautifully written manuscript of the Sonnet to Spenser (also "fac-simile'd" in The Bookman), which has great value in that it clears Keats of responsibility for the ridiculous line describing Phœbus with "a golden quill": it turns out to be "a golden quell," wherever Keats may have got that bold and picturesque noun—whether from Macbeth ("our great quell") or out of his own head. He used it also in Endymion (II, 537, "a sovereign quell"); and he was quite capable of evolving the noun quell from the verb to quell, in sheer emulation of Leigh Hunt's liberties with the English language—the liberties of the "loved Libertas"!

Mr. Sabin's book contains a third holograph—a leaf from a rough copy of The Eve of St. Mark, or of a part of that fragment. It is of very high interest, though the sixteen lines which I think it authorizes us to add to the fragment are not of equal quality with what we had already, and may have been specially rejected, not merely dropped with the whole scheme of the unfinished poem. The newly recovered passage deals with the essential legend which Dante Gabriel Rossetti told me he was convinced that Keats was going to treat as the back-bone of the poem—the legend about the wraiths of people who were in peril of death trooping into church on St. Mark's Eve. Rossetti identified the fragment with the poetic scheme mentioned in a letter to Fanny Brawne (COMPLETE edition, Volume v, page 185), and was of opinion that Bertha in The Eve of St. Mark had trifled with her lover and, now that he was sick, was to go to the cathedral porch and watch the wraiths going in, with the view of ascertaining whether her lover's wraith came out again—for those who were to die that year would not come out; but those who were to get well would. Keats simplified the legend: for him, all whose wraiths went in would die: here are the sixteen lines, which immediately precede line 99,

Als writith he of swevenis,

at page 342 of the present edition.

Gif ye wol stonden hardie wight—
 Amiddes of the blacke night—
 Righte in the churche porch, pardie
 Ye wol behold a companie
 Appouchen thee full dolourouse
 For sooth to sain from everich house
 Be it in City or village
 Wol come the Phantom and image
 Of ilka gent and ilka carle
 Whom colde Deathe hath in parle
 And wol some day that very year
 Touchen with foule venime spear
 And sadly do them all to die—
 Hem all shalt thou see verilie—
 And everichon shall by the[e] pass
 All who must die that year Alas

There is a rejected reading of the last couplet, which joins more perfectly than the final version does with line 99—

And everichon shall by the[e] go
 Truly mine auctour says it so

of which the last three words seem to me to have been carelessly written for sayeth so. Appouchen in the fifth line is plain enough; but it seems likely that Keats meant to write Approchen. The British Museum holograph (Egerton 2780) shows, of course, no trace of this new passage; but it is not clear which was written last, the draft whereof the new passage is a fragment, or the Museum copy which is also a much revised draft. I have not been able to ascertain what bearing the copy sent to George Keats in the Winchester journal-letter of September 1819 has on the status of the new passage, as I do not know in whose possession that letter now is. But this is clear:—both copies are drafts, showing Keats in the mood of composition and revision; and in both alike, for example, the first word in the line

Gif that the modre (God her blesse)

was first written as If and then altered to Gif, or, literally, to *GI*f. If he could be drafting The Eve of St. Mark twice, why not the Nightingale Ode? The beautiful draft of the HOUGHTON-CREWE collection is astonishingly mature.

Of work attributed to Keats in former editions and here excluded from the text there is very little; but of such rejection as has been necessary an account should be rendered. The poem and sonnet given in Lord Houghton's ALDINE edition (and others) as of doubtful authenticity are both omitted because I do not think that Keats had anything more to do with the poem than with the sonnet ("Pleasures lie thickest where no pleasures seem"), which is to be found among Laman Blanchard's works, and is assigned to that author in several anthologies, as for instance in Leigh Hunt's Book of the Sonnet, Dr. Mackay's A Thousand and One Gems of English Poetry, and Mr. John Dennis's English Sonnets. Lord Houghton has recorded his belief that the sonnet was "one of George Byron's forgeries" (ALDINE edition, page 493); but at page 326, the poem commencing with the words "What sylph-like form before my eyes," is introduced by a suggestion that there were genuine pieces among the forgeries sold at the George Byron "autograph" auction. My own belief is that, so far as the actual documents are concerned, all were forged; but that many of them were copies, in assumed hands, of genuine documents. Some of the Shelley letters certainly were; and I think it is only a question of time how soon this particular piece of verse shall be traced to the source outside Keats's work from which George Byron copied it. The song "Stay, ruby-breasted warbler, stay," given at page 6 of the ALDINE edition, was probably sent to Lord Houghton from America. I omitted it because, in the scrap-book mentioned at page xxiv, containing a mass of transcripts by George Keats from his brother's poetry, this poem is not only written in George's hand but signed "G. K." instead of "J. K."; and indeed it seems to me more likely to be one of the effusions which George is recorded to have produced than an early poem by John. The occurrence of the song among the lately found Woodhouse papers of the HOUGHTON-CREWE collection induced Mr. de Sélincourt to enter it once more to the credit (or discredit) of Keats's account with the Muse, against the evidence of George Keats. I still think that George's claim holds good ; but here are the verses, for those who wish to form an opinion on the subject.

SONG.

TUNE—"Julia to the Wood-Robin."

Stay, ruby-breasted warbler, stay,
And let me see thy sparkling eye,
Oh brush not yet the pearl-strung spray
Nor bow thy pretty head to fly.

Stay while I tell thee, fluttering thing,
That thou of love an emblem art,
Yes! patient plume thy little wing,
Whilst I my thoughts to thee impart.

When summer nights the dews bestow,
And summer suns enrich the day,
Thy notes the blossoms charm to blow,
Each opes delighted at thy lay.

So when in youth the eye's dark glance
Speaks pleasure from its circle bright,
The tones of love our joys enhance
And make superior each delight.

And when bleak storms resistless rove,
And every rural bliss destroy,
Nought comforts then the leafless grove
But thy soft note—its only joy—

E'en so the words of love beguile
When Pleasure's tree no flower bears,
And draw a soft endearing smile
Amid the gloom of grief and tears.

From the same George Keats scrap-book a sonnet attributed by George to his brother John was extracted for the LIBRARY edition in 1883. It is the sonnet beginning with the line

Brother belov'd if health shall smile again, and passed without public challenge as Keats's till I observed it by chance among Mrs. Tighe's posthumous poems, and of course withdrew it at once from my current editions of Keats and made confession of the mistake into which George Keats had unwittingly lured me. No doubt Keats had copied it at some time from the volume containing Psyche (which he greatly admired in early days before his taste was mature) and some minor poems, and thus deceived his brother without intending to do so.

Another piece which I was led to attribute to Keats was a delightful set of couplets issued by Leigh Hunt in The Indicator for the 19th of January 1820, headed Vox et Præterea Nihil, and opening with the lines

Oh! what a voice is silent. It was soft
As mountain-echoes, when the winds aloft
(The gentle winds of summer) meet in caves.

After some discussion with Dante Gabriel Rossetti, I concluded that these beautiful lines had been written by Keats as a part of Endymion, in one of the foot-notes to which I inserted them with the suggestion that they had been intended to come between lines 853 and 854 of Book II and had been rejected by Keats as over-weighting the passage. This suggestion also passed unchallenged for thirteen years, after which, through the courtesy of Mr. Bryan Charles Waller, author of The Twilight Land and Perseus with the Hesperides, I was made aware that Vox et Præterea Nihil was to be found in a volume of poetry by his uncle, Bryan Waller Procter ("Barry Cornwall").¹ Of this false ascription also due confession was made; and the couplets were cancelled in my current editions of Keats's poetry. How they had betrayed me and others, may be judged from the single sample—

Like the low voice of Syrinx when she ran
Into the forests from Arcadian Pan;

strongly resembling a couplet in Endymion—

Telling us how fair, trembling Syrinx fled
Arcadian Pan, with such a horrid dread.

There has been some temptation to add to Keats's poetic fragments the following lines forming a part of a letter sent to Fanny Brawne:

To see those eyes I prize above my own
Dart favors on another—
And those sweet lips (yielding immortal nectar)
Be gently press'd by any but myself—
Think, think Francesca, what a cursed thing
It were beyond expression!

These lines follow the words "Some lines I read the other day are constantly ringing a peal in my ears" (COMPLETE edition, Volume v, page 69); but they were specially signed "J"—which might mean "John"—before he passed on in prose to other matters and signed "J. Keats." Not having found the passage in any one else's works since publishing it in 1878, I lately sought information about it through The Bookman; and I am now referred by Mr. Arthur Langmead Casserley to its source, namely Massinger's tragedy The Duke of Milan, Act 1, scene 3, where Sforza, about to go into battle, tells Marcelia his apprehension of what may follow on his defeat. Marcelia says—

'Tis not in the power
Of fate to alter me; for while I am,
In spite of it, I'm yours.

Sforza replies—

But should that will
To be so forced; Marcelia; and I live

To see those eyes I prize above my own
Dart favours, though compell'd, upon another ;
Or those sweet lips, yielding immortal nectar,
Be gently touch'd by any but myself ;
Think, think, Marcelia, what a cursed thing
I were beyond expression.

Keats only left two lines untouched ; and, in mitigating the coarseness of Massinger's imagination for his own less indelicate purpose, he also took the liberty of making the situation instead of the sufferer a cursed thing, and thus leaving the lines more characteristic of Keats than of Massinger.

LIST OF PRINCIPAL WORKS CONSULTED

THIS List is not meant for a complete Keats bibliography; but, as it has been necessary to consult a considerable number of books &c., it seems desirable to supplement, by means of such a list, the information given in the Preface as to the sources of this edition. Keats's three volumes published in his life-time, in 1817, 1818, and 1820, do not head the list, as their title-pages immediately precede it, and each volume is fully described in the Introduction. No second edition of the Poems, Endymion, or Lamia, &c., was published during the poet's life: hence the sources of "various readings" are either manuscripts or prints occurring in periodical and other works not by Keats.

1. Annals of the Fine Arts, for MDCCCXVI ... London ... Sherwood, Neely, and Jones ... 1817.

2. Annals of the Fine Arts, for MDCCCXVII ... London ... 1818.

3. Annals of the Fine Arts, for MDCCCXVIII ... London ... 1819.

4. Annals of the Fine Arts, for MDCCCXIX ... London ... 1820.

5. Annals of the Fine Arts, for MDCCCXX ... London ... 1820.

These five octavo volumes were edited by James Elmes; but the ruling spirit and chief contributor to the work was Haydon, although Keats, Wordsworth, Hazlitt, Lamb, and Southey, all figure in its pages. Three numbers appeared in 1816, four each in 1817, 1818, and 1819, and two in 1820,—seventeen in all. The Nightingale and Grecian Urn odes made their first appearance here; and the Elgin Marbles sonnets were reprinted by Elmes from The Examiner. One of Haydon's many fine dissertations, that, namely, on Visconti's mistake as to the action of the Ilissus in the Elgin collection, appeared as an octavo pamphlet in French,—so determined was the learned painter to make his voice heard throughout Europe on this subject.

The copy used (penes me) is profusely corrected and annotated by Medwin, and is described by him as "corrected for a new edition just about to appear"; but it has certainly not been handled as "copy" by a printer; and I am unable to ascertain that any such edition as was thus prepared by the author ever really appeared.

27. Life, Letters, and Literary Remains, of John Keats. Edited by Richard Monckton Milnes. In Two Volumes [foolscap 8vo.]... London... Moxon... 1848.

The particular copy used in preparing the Library edition was one in Sir Charles Dilke's collection, largely annotated in manuscript by his grandfather, Charles Wentworth Dilke, the friend of Keats. As Sir Charles allowed me to copy the whole of the notes, I have been able to refer to them again whenever necessary in preparing subsequent editions.

LXX LIST OF PRINCIPAL WORKS CONSULTED

51. The Poetical Works of John Keats. Chronologically arranged and edited, with a Memoir, by Lord Houghton... Second [Aldine] Edition... 1879.

52. The Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley in Verse and Prose now first brought together with Many Pieces not before published Edited with Prefaces Notes and Appendices by Harry Buxton Forman in Eight Volumes [demy 8vo.]... London Reeves and Turner... 1880.

53. John Keats A Study By F. M. Owen... London C. Kegan Paul & Co.... 1880 [one volume, crown 8vo.].

54. The English Poets Selections with Critical Introductions by various Writers and a General Introduction by Matthew Arnold edited by Thomas Humphry Ward, M.A. London Macmillan and Co. 1880 [four volumes, crown 8vo.].

The fourth volume, "The Nineteenth Century: Wordsworth to Dobell," includes, of course, a selection from Keats's works. This is preceded by an Essay from the pen of Matthew Arnold.

55. English Literature by the Rev. Stopford Brooke, M.A. London: Macmillan and Co. 1880 [one volume, medium 8vo.].

This book was originally issued as a "Primer of English Literature"—which title it bears as a "dropped head" above Chapter I.

56. The Poetical Works and Other Writings of John Keats now first brought together including Poems and numerous Letters not before published Edited with Notes and Appendices by Harry Buxton Forman in Four Volumes [demy 8vo.]... London Reeves & Turner... 1883.

This was the first attempt to collect and set out the whole of Keats's Writings. The volumes contained, in addition to all the Writings of Keats known at that time, everything judged of importance from the numerous earlier works cited in the present list, except, of course, Lord Houghton's Memoirs, which were, and are still, accessible in his own editions of Keats, which have circulated very widely. Keats's letters in this first Library edition numbered 196,—157 to his family and friends and 39 to Fanny Brawne.

57. The Letters of John Keats edited by Jno. Gilmer Speed... New-York Dodd, Mead & Company 1883 [one volume, medium 8vo.].

58. The Poems of John Keats with the Annotations of Lord Houghton and a Memoir by Jno. Gilmer Speed... New York Dodd, Mead & Company 1883 [two volumes, medium 8vo.].

These three handsome volumes, issued together, have half-titles worded "The Letters and Poems of John Keats. In Three Volumes." There are 15 letters to his brothers, 62 to his friends, and 37 to Fanny Brawne, 114 in all. Whatever is new is very inaccurately printed; and the arrangement of the Poetry does not correctly represent Lord Houghton's editions.

59. The Poetical Works of John Keats given from his own Editions and other Authentic Sources and Collated with many Manuscripts Edited by Harry Buxton Forman London Reeves & Turner... 1884 [one volume, crown 8vo.].

This is an unannotated edition in large type, with a collection of Cancelled Passages from "Endymion" at the end, full subject index, and index of first lines.

60. The Poetical Works of John Keats edited by William T. Arnold. London Kegan Paul, Trench, & Co. ... MDCCCLXXXIII [one volume, crown 8vo.].

This edition is of course incomplete; but it has a valuable introduction and contains most of Keats's best poetry. The editor treated in a full and systematic way the subject of the sources of Keats's diction,—a subject on which Woodhouse began while Keats was still alive, as shown in the notes to the Library edition. Mr. Arnold added a good deal to what Woodhouse and others had done in this way.

61. The Poetical Works of John Keats Reprinted from the Original Editions with Notes by Francis T. Palgrave London Macmillan and Co. 1884 [A Selection in one volume of the "Golden Treasury" Series, pott 8vo.].

62. The Asclepiad. A Book of Original Research and Observation... By Benjamin Ward Richardson, M.D., F.R.S. ... published quarterly... London. April 1884 [octavo].

This contains an important article entitled "An Esculapian Poet—John Keats."

63. The Life of Percy Bysshe Shelley by Edward Dowden LL.D. ... In Two Volumes [demy 8vo.] ... London ... Kegan Paul, Trench and Co. ... 1886.

64. Keats by Sidney Colvin London: Macmillan and Co. ... 1887 [one volume of Mr. Morley's "English Men of Letters" Series, crown 8vo.].

lxxii LIST OF PRINCIPAL WORKS CONSULTED

65. Life of John Keats by William Michael Rossetti. London Walter Scott... 1887 [one volume, medium 8vo.].

66. The Poetical Works and other Writings of John Keats edited with Notes and Appendices by H Buxton Forman In Four Volumes [demy 8vo.] Reissue with Additions and Corrections... London Reeves & Turner... 1889.

67. Letters of John Keats to Fanny Brawne with Introduction and Notes by H Buxton Forman Second Edition Revised and Enlarged London Reeves & Turner... 1889.

68. Poetry and Prose by John Keats A Book of Fresh Verses and New Readings—Essays and Letters lately found—and Passages formerly suppressed Edited by H Buxton Forman and forming a Supplement to the Library edition of Keats's Works London Reeves & Turner... 1890 [one volume, demy 8vo.].

This volume, designed to put those who owned the Library edition of 1883 in the same position as those who owned the Reissue of 1889, contained also some little material special to itself.

69. Letters of John Keats to his Family and Friends Edited by Sidney Colvin London Macmillan and Co.... 1891 [one volume, large foolscap 8vo.].

This edition, which does not include the Letters to Fanny Brawne, contains 164 letters in all. The poetry inserted by Keats in the originals is given in full, though in a type smaller than that used for the body of the Letters. The editor has added valuable notes.

70. The Life and Letters of Joseph Severn by William Sharp ... London Sampson Low ... 1892 [one volume, royal 8vo.].

71. The Poetical Works of Percy Bysshe Shelley Edited with a Memoir by H. Buxton Forman In Five Volumes... London George Bell & Sons... 1892.

72. Excursions in Criticism Being some Prose Recreations of a Rhymer By William Watson London:... Mathews &... Lane... MDCCCXCIII.

73. John Keats A Critical Essay by Robert Bridges Privately Printed MDCCCXCV [one volume, post 8vo.].

74. Keats' Jugend und Jugendgedichte. Von J. Hoops. Sonderabdruck aus Englische Studien XXI. Band, 2. Heft 1895 [Leipzig, 8vo. pamphlet.].

LIST OF PRINCIPAL WORKS CONSULTED lxxiii

75. The Letters of John Keats Complete revised edition with a Portrait not published in previous editions and twenty-four contemporary views of places visited by Keats. Edited by H Buxton Forman London Reeves & Turner... 1895 [one volume, crown 8vo.].

This edition contains every letter of Keats known to be extant at the time, including those to Fanny Brawne, which take their place in order of date among the rest, not as a separate group. There are 214 letters in all; and these are given with the transcribed poetry in full, set in the same large type as the body of the letters, for easy reference, their textual value being considerable.

76. Literary Anecdotes of the Nineteenth Century: Contributions towards a Literary History of the Period Volume II. Edited by W. Robertson Nicoll, M.A., LL.D., and Thomas T. Wise London: Hodder & Stoughton ... MDCCCXCVI.

In an article about Keats appear the "nonsense sonnet" at page 291 of this edition and a fac-simile of the manuscript of the sonnet to Miss Wylie.

77. The Poetical Works of John Keats ... Edited by H. Buxton Forman ... Sixth Edition with Seven Portraits and Ten other Illustrations London... Reeves and Turner... 1898.

This is a new edition of No. 59, illustrated and brought up to date. The seventh edition is a reprint of it.

78. Keats' Hyperion Mit Einleitung herausgegeben von Johannes Hoops... Berlin Verlag von Emil Felber 1899 [one volume, crown 8vo.].

This little book is No. 3 in a series, namely the "Englische Textbibliothek Herausgegeben von Johannes Hoops a. o. Professor an der Universität von Heidelberg."

79. The Complete Works of John Keats in Five Volumes ... Edited by H. Buxton Forman... Gowans & Gray Glasgow... 1900-1901 Agent for London R. Brimley Johnson... [fools-cap 8vo.].

In this edition the Library editions of 1883 and 1889 were brought up to date, new material being published and all manuscript Sources discovered in the interim being used. The collations and notes variorum are as minute and literal as those of the Library editions; but the appended matter, not quite so voluminous, is scattered through the volumes beneath or between the poems, letters, &c.; a memoir is prefixed to the poetry; and a series of brief biographical notes on Keats's relations, friends, and correspondents stands before the letters.

lxxiv LIST OF PRINCIPAL WORKS CONSULTED

80. The Monthly Review No. 30. Mar. 1903. London: John Murray.

Contains an article by Professor Colvin on the Nightingale ode with fac-simile of manuscript.

81. Illustrated Catalogue of Unique Grangerized Books Rare MSS. of Keats Original Drawings... On Sale by Henry Sotheran & Co. ... London ... 1904.

82. Hyperion A Facsimile of Keats's Autograph Manuscript with a Transliteration of the Manuscript of The Fall of Hyperion a Dream with Introductions and Notes by Ernest de Sélincourt Oxford At the Clarendon Press 1905.

This large folio volume is very valuable from a critical point of view. The "Transliteration" is a printed text literally given, not from Keats's manuscript but from a copy of it made by two of Richard Woodhouse's clerks: the original has not yet been found.

83. The Poems of John Keats edited with an Introduction and Notes by E. de Sélincourt with a frontispiece in photogravure Methuen and Co. ... London [1905].

The introductions and notes are particularly valuable and interesting. Mr. de Sélincourt goes much more exhaustively into the sources of Keats's language than ever the late Mr. William Thomas Arnold did.

84. The Bookman Keats Double Number [for October 1906] London: Hodder & Stoughton, Warwick Square, E.C.

This contains, among other original material relating to Keats, mechanical reproductions of the Sonnet to Spenser, the Sonnet beginning "The day is gone," and a hitherto unknown passage of The Eve of St. Mark.

POEMS

PUBLISHED IN 1817.

DEDICATION.

TO LEIGH HUNT, ESQ.

GLORY and loveliness have pass'd away ;
For if we wander out in early morn,
No wreathed incense do we see upborne
Into the east, to meet the smiling day :
No crowd of nymphs soft voic'd and young, and gay,
In woven baskets bringing ears of corn,
Roses, and pinks, and violets, to adorn
The shrine of Flora in her early May.
But there are left delights as high as these,
And I shall ever bless my destiny,
That in a time, when under pleasant trees
Pan is no longer sought, I feel a free,
A leafy luxury, seeing I could please
With these poor offerings, a man like thee.

POEMS

"Places of nestling green for Poets made."

Story of Rimini.

I stood tip-toe upon a little hill,
The air was cooling, and so very still,
That the sweet buds which with a modest pride
Pall droopingly, in slanting curve aside,
Their scantily leav'd, and finely tapering stems,
Had not yet lost those starry diadems
Caught from the early sobbing of the morn.
The clouds were pure and white as flocks new shorn,
And fresh from the clear brook; sweetly they slept
On the blue fields of heaven, and then there crept
A little noiseless noise among the leaves, 11
Born of the very sigh that silence heaves:
For not the faintest motion could be seen
Of all the shades that slanted o'er the green.
There was wide wand'ring for the greediest eye,
To peer about upon variety;
Far round the horizon's crystal air to skim,
And trace the dwindled edgings of its brim;
To picture out the quaint, and curious bending
Of a fresh woodland alley, never ending; 20
Or by the bowery clefts, and leafy shelves,
Guess where the jaunty streams refresh themselves.
I gazed awhile, and felt as light, and free
As though the fanning wings of Mercury
Had play'd upon my heels: I was light-hearted,
And many pleasures to my vision started;
So I straightway began to pluck a posey
Of luxuries bright, milky, soft and rosy.

A bush of May flowers with the bees about them;
Ah, sure no tasteful nook would be without them;
And let a lush labernum oversweep them, 31
And let long grass grow round the roots to keep them
Moist, cool and green; and shade the violets,
That they may bind the moss in leafy nets.

A filbert hedge with wild briar overtwined,
 And clumps of woodbine taking the soft wind
 Upon their summer thrones; there too should be
 The frequent chequer of a youngling tree,
 That with a score of light green brethren shoots
 From the quaint mossiness of aged roots: 40
 Round which is heard a spring-head of clear waters
 Babbled so wildly of its lovely daughters
 The spreading blue-bells: it may haply mourn
 That such fair clusters should be rudely torn
 From their fresh beds, and scattered thoughtlessly
 By infant hands, left on the path to die.

Open afresh your round of starry folds,
 Ye ardent marigolds!
 Dry up the moisture from your golden lids,
 For great Apollo bids 50
 That in these days your praises should be sung
 On many harps, which he has lately strung;
 And when again your dewiness he kisses,
 Tell him, I have you in my world of blisses:
 So haply when I rove in some far vale,
 His mighty voice may come upon the gale.

Here are sweet peas, on tip-toe for a flight:
 With wings of gentle flush o'er delicate white,
 And taper fingers catching at all things,
 To bind them all about with tiny rings. 60

Linger awhile upon some bending planks
 That lean against a streamlet's rushy banks,
 And watch intently Nature's gentle doings:
 They will be found softer than ring-dove's cooings.
 How silent comes the water round that bend;
 Not the minutest whisper does it send
 To the o'erhanging shallows: blades of grass
 Slowly across the chequer'd shadows pass.

61-67 Lord Houghton records the following alternative reading:

Linger awhile among some bending planks
 That lean against a streamlet's daisied banks,
 And watch intently Nature's gentle doings:
 That will be found as soft as ringdoves' cooings.
 The inward ear will hear her and be blest,
 And tingle with a joy too light for rest.

Why, you might read two sonnets, ere they reach
 To where the hurrying freshnesses aye preach 70
 A natural sermon o'er their pebbly beds;
 Where swarms of minnows show their little heads,
 Staying their wavy bodies 'gainst the streams,
 To taste the luxury of sunny beams
 Temper'd with coolness. How they ever wrestle
 With their own sweet delight, and ever nestle
 Their silver bellies on the pebbly sand.
 If you but scantily hold out the hand,
 That very instant not one will remain;
 But turn your eye, and they are there again. 80
 The ripples seem right glad to reach those cresses,
 And cool themselves among the em'rald tresses;
 The while they cool themselves, they freshness give,
 And moisture, that the bowery green may live:
 So keeping up an interchange of favours,
 Like good men in the truth of their behaviours.
 Sometimes goldfinches one by one will drop
 From low hung branches; little space they stop;
 But sip, and twitter, and their feathers sleek;
 Then off at once, as in a wanton freak: 90
 Or perhaps, to show their black, and golden wings,
 Pausing upon their yellow flutterings.
 Were I in such a place, I sure should pray
 That naught less sweet, might call my thoughts away,
 Than the soft rustle of a maiden's gown
 Fanning away the dandelion's down;
 Than the light music of her nimble toes
 Patting against the sorrel as she goes.
 How she would start, and blush, thus to be caught
 Playing in all her innocence of thought. 100
 O let me lead her gently o'er the brook,
 Watch her half-smiling lips, and downward look;
 O let me for one moment touch her wrist;
 Let me one moment to her breathing list;
 And as she leaves me may she often turn
 Her fair eyes looking through her locks auburne.
 What next? A tuft of evening primroses,
 O'er which the mind may hover till it dozes;
 O'er which it well might take a pleasant sleep,
 But that 'tis ever startled by the leap 110

Of buds into ripe flowers ; or by the flitting
 Of diverse moths, that aye their rest are quitting ;
 Or by the moon lifting her silver rim
 Above a cloud, and with a gradual swim
 Coming into the blue with all her light.
 O Maker of sweet poets, dear delight
 Of this fair world, and all its gentle livers ;
 Spangler of clouds, halo of crystal rivers,
 Mingler with leaves, and dew and tumbling streams,
 Closer of lovely eyes to lovely dreams, 120
 Lover of loneliness, and wandering,
 Of upcast eye, and tender pondering !
 Thee must I praise above all other glories
 That smile us on to tell delightful stories.
 For what has made the sage or poet write
 But the fair paradise of Nature's light ?
 In the calm grandeur of a sober line,
 We see the waving of the mountain pine ;
 And when a tale is beautifully staid,
 We feel the safety of a hawthorn glade : 130
 When it is moving on luxurious wings,
 The soul is lost in pleasant smotherings :
 Fair dewy roses brush against our faces,
 And flowering laurels spring from diamond vases ;
 O'er head we see the jasmine and sweet briar,
 And bloomy grapes laughing from green attire ;
 While at our feet, the voice of crystal bubbles
 Charms us at once away from all our troubles :
 So that we feel uplifted from the world,
 Walking upon the white clouds wreath'd and curl'd.
 So felt he, who first told, how Psyche went 141
 On the smooth wind to realms of wonderment ;
 What Psyche felt, and Love, when their full lips
 First touch'd ; what amorous, and fondling nips
 They gave each other's cheeks ; with all their sighs,
 And how they kist each other's tremulous eyes :
 The silver lamp,—the ravishment,—the wonder—

115, 116 Lord Houghton records the following variation :

Floating through space with ever-living eye,
 The crowned queen of ocean and the sky.

144 what . . . nips] What fondleing and amorous nips MS.
but marked for transposition.

The darkness,—loneliness,—the fearful thunder ;
Their woes gone by, and both to heaven upflown,
To bow for gratitude before Jove's throne. 150
So did he feel, who pull'd the boughs aside,
That we might look into a forest wide,
To catch a glimpse of Fauns, and Dryades
Coming with softest rustle through the trees ;
And garlands woven of flowers wild, and sweet,
Upheld on ivory wrists, or sporting feet :
Telling us how fair, trembling Syrinx fled
Arcadian Pan, with such a fearful dread.
Poor nymph,—poor Pan,—how he did weep to find,
Nought but a lovely sighing of the wind 160
Along the reedy stream ; a half-heard strain,
Full of sweet desolation—balmy pain.

What first inspired a bard of old to sing
Narcissus pining o'er the untainted spring ?
In some delicious ramble, he had found
A little space, with boughs all woven round ;
And in the midst of all, a clearer pool
Than e'er reflected in its pleasant cool,
The blue sky here, and there, serenely peeping
Through tendril wreaths fantastically creeping. 170
And on the bank a lonely flower he spied,
A meek and forlorn flower, with naught of pride,
Drooping its beauty o'er the watery clearness,
To woo its own sad image into nearness :
Deaf to light Zephyrus it would not move ;
But still would seem to droop, to pine, to love.
So while the poet stood in this sweet spot,
Some fainter gleamings o'er his fancy shot ;
Nor was it long ere he had told the tale
Of young Narcissus, and sad Echo's bale. 180

Where had he been, from whose warm head out-flew
That sweetest of all songs, that ever new,
That aye refreshing, pure deliciousness,
Coming ever to bless
The wanderer by moonlight ? to him bringing
Shapes from the invisible world, unearthly singing
From out the middle air, from flowery nests,

Of their dear friends, nigh foolish with delight ;
Who feel their arms, and breasts, and kiss and stare,
And on their placid foreheads part the hair. 230
Young men, and maidens at each other gaz'd
With hands held back, and motionless, amaz'd
To see the brightness in each other's eyes ;
And so they stood, fill'd with a sweet surprise,
Until their tongues were loos'd in poesy.
Therefore no lover did of anguish die :
But the soft numbers, in that moment spoken,
Made silken ties, that never may be broken.
Cynthia ! I cannot tell the greater blisses,
That follow'd thine, and thy dear shepherd's kisses : 240
Was there a poet born ?—but now no more,
My wand'ring spirit must no further soar.—

SPECIMEN OF AN INDUCTION TO A POEM

Lo ! I must tell a tale of chivalry ;
For large white plumes are dancing in mine eye.
Not like the formal crest of latter days :
But bending in a thousand graceful ways ;
So graceful, that it seems no mortal hand,
Or e'en the touch of Archimago's wand,
Could charm them into such an attitude.
We must think rather, that in playful mood,
Some mountain breeze had turn'd its chief delight,
To show this wonder of its gentle might. 10
Lo ! I must tell a tale of chivalry ;
For while I muse, the lance points slantingly
Athwart the morning air : some lady sweet,
Who cannot feel for cold her tender feet,
From the worn top of some old battlement
Hails it with tears, her stout defender sent :
And from her own pure self no joy dissembling,
Wraps round her ample robe with happy trembling.
Sometimes, when the good Knight his rest would take,
It is reflected, clearly, in a lake, 20
With the young ashen boughs, 'gainst which it rests,
And th' half seen mossiness of linnets' nests.

1 Namely Calidore.

Ah! shall I ever tell its cruelty,
When the fire flashes from a warrior's eye,
And his tremendous hand is grasping it,
And his dark brow for very wrath is knit?
Or when his spirit, with more calm intent,
Leaps to the honors of a tournament,
And makes the gazers round about the ring
Stare at the grandeur of the ballancing? 30
No, no! this is far off:—then how shall I
Revive the dying tones of minstrelsy,
Which linger yet about long gothic arches,
In dark green ivy, and among wild larches?
How sing the splendour of the revelries,
When butts of wine are drunk off to the lees?
And that bright lance, against the fretted wall,
Beneath the shade of stately banneral,
Is slung with shining cuirass, sword, and shield?
Where ye may see a spur in bloody field. 40
Light-footed damsels move with gentle paces
Round the wide hall, and show their happy faces;
Or stand in courtly talk by fives and sevens:
Like those fair stars that twinkle in the heavens.
Yet must I tell a tale of chivalry:
Or wherefore comes that steed so proudly by?
Wherefore more proudly does the gentle knight,
Rein in the swelling of his ample might?

Spenser! thy brows are arched, open, kind,
And come like a clear sun-rise to my mind; 50
And always does my heart with pleasure dance,
When I think on thy noble countenance:
Where never yet was aught more earthly seen
Than the pure freshness of thy laurels green.
Therefore, great bard, I not so fearfully
Call on thy gentle spirit to hover nigh
My daring steps: or if thy tender care,
Thus startled unaware,
Be jealous that the foot of other wight
Should madly follow that bright path of light 60

46 knight for steed, Poems 1817, but steed in a copy corrected by Keats.

Trac'd by thy lov'd Libertas ; he will speak,
 And tell thee that my prayer is very meek ;
 That I will follow with due reverence,
 And start with awe at mine own strange pretence.
 Him thou wilt hear ; so I will rest in hope
 To see wide plains, fair trees and lawny slope :
 The morn, the eve, the light, the shade, the flowers ;
 Clear streams, smooth lakes, and overlooking towers.

CALIDORE

A FRAGMENT

YOUNG Calidore is paddling o'er the lake ;
 His healthful spirit eager and awake
 To feel the beauty of a silent eve,
 Which seem'd full loth this happy world to leave ;
 The light dwelt o'er the scene so lingeringly.
 He bares his forehead to the cool blue sky,
 And smiles at the far clearness all around,
 Until his heart is well nigh over wound,
 And turns for calmness to the pleasant green
 Of easy slopes, and shadowy trees that lean 10
 So elegantly o'er the waters' brim
 And show their blossoms trim.
 Scarce can his clear and nimble eye-sight follow
 The freaks, and dartings of the black-wing'd swallow,
 Delighting much, to see it half at rest,
 Dip so refreshingly its wings, and breast
 'Gainst the smooth surface, and to mark anon,
 The widening circles into nothing gone.

And now the sharp keel of his little boat
 Comes up with ripple, and with easy float, 20
 And glides into a bed of water lillies:
 Broad leav'd are they and their white canopies
 Are upward turn'd to catch the heavens' dew.
 Near to a little island's point they grew ;
 Whence Calidore might have the goodliest view
 Of this sweet spot of earth. The bowery shore
 Went off in gentle windings to the hoar

And light blue mountains: but no breathing man
 With a warm heart, and eye prepared to scan
 Nature's clear beauty, could pass lightly by 30
 Objects that look'd out so invitingly
 On either side. These, gentle Calidore
 Greeted, as he had known them long before.

The sidelong view of swelling leafiness,
 Which the glad setting sun, in gold doth dress;
 Whence ever, and anon the jay outsprings,
 And scales upon the beauty of its wings.
 The lonely turret, shatter'd, and outworn,
 Stands venerably proud; too proud to mourn
 Its long lost grandeur: fir trees grow around, 40
 Aye dropping their hard fruit upon the ground.

The little chapel with the cross above
 Upholding wreaths of ivy; the white dove,
 That on the window spreads his feathers light,
 And seems from purple clouds to wing its flight.
 Green tufted islands casting their soft shades
 Across the lake; sequester'd leafy glades,
 That through the dimness of their twilight show
 Large dock leaves, spiral foxgloves, or the glow
 Of the wild cat's eyes, or the silvery stems 50
 Of delicate birch trees, or long grass which hems
 A little brook. The youth had long been viewing
 These pleasant things, and heaven was bedewing
 The mountain flowers, when his glad senses caught
 A trumpet's silver voice. Ah! it was fraught
 With many joys for him: the warder's ken
 Had found white coursers prancing in the glen:
 Friends very dear to him he soon will see;
 So pushes off his boat most eagerly,
 And soon upon the lake he skims along. 60
 Deaf to the nightingale's first under-song;
 Nor minds he the white swans that dream so sweetly:
 His spirit flies before him so completely.
 And now he turns a jutting point of land,

28 But sure no breathing man Tom Keats's MS.

40, 41 Its long lost grandeur. Laburnums grow around
 And bow their golden honors to the ground.

Tom Keats's MS.

Whence may be seen the castle gloomy, and grand :
Nor will a bee buzz round two swelling peaches,
Before the point of his light shallop reaches
Those marble steps that through the water dip :
Now over them he goes with hasty trip,
And scarcely stays to ope the folding doors : 70
Anon he leaps along the oaken floors
Of halls and corridors.
Delicious sounds ! those little bright-eyed things
That float about the air on azure wings,
Had been less heartfelt by him than the clang
Of clattering hoofs ; into the court he sprang,
Just as two noble steeds, and palfreys twain,
Were slanting out their necks with loosened rein ;
While from beneath the threat'ning portcullis
They brought their happy burthens. What a kiss, 80
What gentle squeeze he gave each lady's hand !
How tremblingly their delicate ankles spann'd !
Into how sweet a trance his soul was gone,
While whisperings of affection
Made him delay to let their tender feet
Come to the earth ; with an incline so sweet
From their low palfreys o'er his neck they bent :
And whether there were tears of languishment,
Or that the evening dew had pearl'd their tresses
He feels a moisture on his cheek, and blesses 90
With lips that tremble, and with glistening eye,
All the soft luxury
That nestled in his arms. A dimpled hand,
Fair as some wonder out of fairy land,
Hung from his shoulder like the drooping flowers
Of whitest Cassia, fresh from summer showers :
And this he fondled with his happy cheek
As if for joy he would no further seek ;
When the kind voice of good Sir Clerimond
Came to his ear, like something from beyond 100
His present being ; so he gently drew
His warm arms, thrilling now with pulses new,
From their sweet thrall, and forward meekly bending,
Thank'd heaven that his joy was never ending ;

While 'gainst his forehead he devoutly press'd
 A hand heaven made to succour the distress'd;
 A hand that from the world's bleak promontory
 Had lifted Calidore for deeds of Glory.

Amid the pages, and the torches' glare,
 There stood a knight, patting the flowing hair 110
 Of his proud horse's mane: he was withal
 A man of elegance, and stature tall:
 So that the waving of his plumes would be
 High as the berries of a wild ash tree,
 Or as the winged cap of Mercury.
 His armour was so dexterously wrought
 In shape, that sure no living man had thought
 It hard, and heavy steel: but that indeed
 It was some glorious form, some splendid weed,
 In which a spirit new come from the skies 120
 Might live, and show itself to human eyes.
 'Tis the far-fam'd, the brave Sir Gondibert,
 Said the good man to Calidore alert;
 While the young warrior with a step of grace
 Came up,—a courtly smile upon his face,
 And mailed hand held out, ready to greet
 The large-eyed wonder, and ambitious heat
 Of the aspiring boy; who as he led
 Those smiling ladies, often turn'd his head
 To admire the visor arch'd so gracefully 130
 Over a knightly brow; while they went by
 The lamps that from the high roof'd hall were pendent,
 And gave the steel a shining quite transcendent.

Soon in a pleasant chamber they are seated;
 The sweet-lipp'd ladies have already greeted
 All the green leaves that round the window clamber,
 To show their purple stars, and bells of amber.
 Sir Gondibert has doff'd his shining steel,
 Gladdening in the free, and airy feel
 Of a light mantle; and while Clerimond 140
 Is looking round about him with a fond,
 And placid eye, young Calidore is burning
 To hear of knightly deeds, and gallant spurning

Of all unworthiness ; and how the strong of arm
 Kept off dismay, and terror, and alarm
 From lovely woman : while brimful of this,
 He gave each damsel's hand so warm a kiss,
 And had such manly ardour in his eye,
 That each at other look'd half staringly ;
 And then their features started into smiles 150
 Sweet as blue heavens o'er enchanted isles.

Softly the breezes from the forest came,
 Softly they blew aside the taper's flame ;
 Clear was the song from Philomel's far bower ;
 Grateful the incense from the lime-tree flower ;
 Mysterious, wild, the far heard trumpet's tone ;
 Lovely the moon in ether, all alone :
 Sweet too the converse of these happy mortals,
 As that of busy spirits when the portals
 Are closing in the west ; or that soft humming 160
 We hear around when Hesperus is coming.
 Sweet be their sleep. * * * * *

TO SOME LADIES

WHAT though while the wonders of nature exploring,
 I cannot your light, mazy footsteps attend ;
 Nor listen to accents, that almost adoring,
 Bless Cynthia's face, the enthusiast's friend :
 Yet over the steep, whence the mountain stream rushes,
 With you, kindest friends, in idea I muse ;
 Mark the clear tumbling crystal, its passionate gushes,
 In spray that the wild flower kindly bedews.
 Why linger you so, the wild labyrinth strolling ?
 Why breathless, unable your bliss to declare ? 10
 Ah ! you list to the nightingale's tender condoling,
 Responsive to sylphs, in the moon-beamy air.
 'Tis morn, and the flowers with dew are yet drooping,
 I see you are treading the verge of the sea :
 And now ! ah, I see it—you just now are stooping
 To pick up the keep-sake intended for me.

If a cherub, on pinions of silver descending,
 Had brought me a gem from the fret-work of heaven ;
 And smiles, with his star-cheering voices sweetly blending,
 The blessings of Tighe had melodiously given; 20

It had not created a warmer emotion
 Than the present, fair nymphs, I was blest with from you,
 Than the shell, from the bright golden sands of the ocean
 Which the emerald waves at your feet gladly threw.

For, indeed, 'tis a sweet and peculiar pleasure
 (And blissful is he who such happiness finds),
 To possess but a span of the hour of leisure,
 In elegant, pure, and aerial minds.

ON RECEIVING A CURIOUS SHELL, AND A COPY OF VERSES,

FROM THE SAME LADIES

Hast thou from the caves of Golconda, a gem
 Pure as the ice-drop that froze on the mountain?
 Bright as the humming-bird's green diadem,
 When it flutters in sun-beams that shine through a fountain?

Hast thou a goblet for dark sparkling wine?
 That goblet right heavy, and massy, and gold?
 And splendidly mark'd with the story divine
 Of Armida the fair, and Rinaldo the bold?

Hast thou a steed with a mane richly flowing?
 Hast thou a sword that thine enemy's smart is?
 Hast thou a trumpet rich melodies blowing? 11
 And wear'st thou the shield of the fam'd Britomartis?

Title] In Tom Keats's MS. On receiving a curious shell and a copy of verses; but in George Keats's MS. Written on receiving a copy of Tom Moore's 'Golden Chain,' and a most beautiful Dome-shaped shell from a Lady.

What is it that hangs from thy shoulder, so brave,
Embroider'd with many a spring peering flower?
Is it a scarf that thy fair lady gave?

And hastest thou now to that fair lady's bower?

Ah! courteous Sir Knight, with large joy thou art
crown'd;

Full many the glories that brighten thy youth!
I will tell thee my blisses, which richly abound
In magical powers to bless, and to sooth. 20

On this scroll thou seest written in characters fair
A sun-beamy tale of a wreath, and a chain;
And, warrior, it nurtures the property rare
Of charming my mind from the trammels of pain.

This canopy mark: 'tis the work of a fay;
Beneath its rich shade did King Oberon languish,
When lovely Titania was far, far away,
And cruelly left him to sorrow, and anguish.

There, oft would he bring from his soft sighing lute
Wild strains to which, spell-bound, the nightin-
gales listen'd; 30

The wondering spirits of heaven were mute,
And tears'mong the dewdrops of morning oft glisten'd.

In this little dome, all those melodies strange,
Soft, plaintive, and melting, for ever will sigh;
Nor e'er will the notes from their tenderness change;
Nor e'er will the music of Oberon die.

So, when I am in a voluptuous vein,
I pillow my head on the sweets of the rose,
And list to the tale of the wreath, and the chain,
Till its echoes depart; then I sink to repose. 40

Adieu, valiant Eric! with joy thou art crown'd;
Full many the glories that brighten thy youth,
I too have my blisses, which richly abound
In magical powers, to bless and to sooth.

[GEORGIANA AUGUSTA WYLLIE, AFTERWARDS
MRS. GEORGE KEATS]

HADST thou liv'd in days of old,
O what wonders had been told
Of thy lively countenance,
And thy humid eyes that dance
In the midst of their own brightness ;
In the very fane of lightness.
Over which thine eyebrows, leaning,
Picture out each lovely meaning :
In a dainty bend they lie,
Like to streaks across the sky, 10
Or the feathers from a crow,
Fallen on a bed of snow.
Of thy dark hair that extends
Into many graceful bends :
As the leaves of Hellebore
Turn to whence they sprung before
And behind each ample curl
Peeps the richness of a pearl.
Downward too flows many a tress
With a glossy waviness ; 20
Full, and round like globes that rise
From the censer to the skies

3 Richard Woodhouse records in his Keats Commonplace Book that this poem was altered from a copy of verses written by K. at the request of his brother George, and by the latter sent as a valentine to Georgiana Wyllie. This valentine, after line 2, read :—

Of thy lively dimpled face
And thy footsteps full of grace :
Of thy hair's luxurious darkling,
Of thine eyes' expressive sparkling.
And thy voice's swelling rapture,
Taking hearts a ready capture.
Oh ! if thou hadst breathed then,
Thou hadst made the Muses ten.

Then came lines 37 to 68 as in the text, and lastly,

Ah me ! whither shall I flee ?
Thou hast metamorphosed me.
Do not let me sigh and pine,
Prythee be my valentine.

14 Feby. 1816.

Through sunny air. Add too, the sweetness
Of thy honey'd voice; the neatness
Of thine ankle lightly turn'd:
With those beauties, scarce discern'd,
Kept with such sweet privacy,
That they seldom meet the eye
Of the little loves that fly
Round about with eager pry. 30
Saving when, with freshening lave,
Thou dipp'st them in the taintless wave;
Like twin water lillies, born
In the coolness of the morn.
O, if thou hadst breathed then,
Now the Muses had been ten.
Couldst thou wish for lineage higher
Than twin sister of Thalia?
At least for ever, evermore,
Will I call the Graces four. 40

Hadst thou liv'd when chivalry
Lifted up her lance on high,
Tell me what thou wouldst have been?
Ah! I see the silver sheen
Of thy broider'd, floating vest
Cov'ring half thine ivory breast;
Which, O heavens! I should see,
But that cruel destiny
Has placed a golden cuirass there;
Keeping secret what is fair. 50
Like sunbeams in a cloudlet nested
Thy locks in knightly casque are rested:
O'er which bend four milky plumes
Like the gentle lilly's blooms
Springing from a costly vase.
See with what a stately pace
Comes thine alabaster steed;
Servant of heroic deed!
O'er his loins, his trappings glow
Like the northern lights on snow. 60
Mount his back! thy sword unsheath!
Sign of the enchanter's death;
Bane of every wicked spell;

Silencer of dragon's yell.
 Alas! thou this wilt never do:
 Thou art an enchantress too,
 And wilt surely never spill
 Blood of those whose eyes can kill.

TO HOPE

WHEN by my solitary hearth I sit,
 And hateful thoughts enwrap my soul in gloom;
 When no fair dreams before my 'mind's eye' flit,
 And the bare heath of life presents no bloom;
 Sweet Hope, ethereal balm upon me shed,
 And wave thy silver pinions o'er my head.

Whene'er I wander, at the fall of night,
 Where woven boughs shut out the moon's bright ray,
 Should sad Despondency my musings fright,
 And frown, to drive fair Cheerfulness away, 10
 Peep with the moon-beams through the leafy roof,
 And keep that fiend Despondence far aloof.

Should Disappointment, parent of Despair,
 Strive for her son to seize my careless heart;
 When, like a cloud, he sits upon the air,
 Preparing on his spell-bound prey to dart:
 Chace him away, sweet Hope, with visage bright,
 And fright him as the morning frightens night!

Whene'er the fate of those I hold most dear
 Tells to my fearful breast a tale of sorrow, 20
 O bright-eyed Hope, my morbid fancy cheer;
 Let me awhile thy sweetest comforts borrow:
 Thy heaven-born radiance around me shed,
 And wave thy silver pinions o'er my head!

Should e'er unhappy love my bosom pain,
 From cruel parents, or relentless fair;
 O let me think it is not quite in vain
 To sigh out sonnets to the midnight air!
 Sweet Hope, ethereal balm upon me shed,
 And wave thy silver pinions o'er my head! 30

In the long vista of the years to roll,
 Let me not see our country's honour fade :
 O let me see our land retain her soul,
 Her pride, her freedom ; and not freedom's shade.
 From thy bright eyes unusual brightness shed—
 Beneath thy pinions canopy my head !

Let me not see the patriot's high bequest,
 Great liberty ! how great in plain attire !
 With the base purple of a court oppress'd,
 Bowing her head, and ready to expire : 40
 But let me see thee stoop from heaven on wings
 That fill the skies with silver glitterings !

And as, in sparkling majesty, a star
 Gilds the bright summit of some gloomy cloud ;
 Brightening the half veil'd face of heaven afar :
 So, when dark thoughts my boding spirit shroud,
 Sweet Hope, celestial influence round me shed,
 Waving thy silver pinions o'er my head.

February, 1815.

IMITATION OF SPENSER

* * * * *

Now Morning from her orient chamber came,
 And her first footsteps touch'd a verdant hill ;
 Crowning its lawny crest with amber flame,
 Silv'ring the untainted gushes of its rill ;
 Which, pure from mossy beds, did down distill,
 And after parting beds of simple flowers,
 By many streams a little lake did fill,
 Which round its marge reflected woven bowers,
 And, in its middle space, a sky that never lowers.

There the king-fisher saw his plumage bright 10
 Vieing with fish of brilliant dye below ;
 Whose silken fins, and golden scales' light
 Cast upward, through the waves, a ruby glow :

12 golden scales light Tom Keats's MS.

There saw the swan his neck of arched snow,
 And oar'd himself along with majesty ;
 Sparkled his jetty eyes ; his feet did show
 Beneath the waves like Afric's ebony,
 And on his back a fay reclined voluptuously.

Ah ! could I tell the wonders of an isle
 That in that fairest lake had placed been, 20
 I could e'en Dido of her grief beguile ;
 Or rob from aged Lear his bitter teen :
 For sure so fair a place was never seen,
 Of all that ever charm'd romantic eye :
 It seem'd an emerald in the silver sheen
 Of the bright waters ; or as when on high,
 Through clouds of fleecy white, laughs the cœrulean sky.

And all around it dipp'd luxuriously
 Slopings of verdure through the glossy tide,
 Which, as it were in gentle amity, 30
 Rippled delighted up the flowery side ;
 As if to glean the ruddy tears, it tried,
 Which fell profusely from the rose-tree stem !
 Haply it was the workings of its pride,
 In strife to throw upon the shore a gem
 Outvieing all the buds in Flora's diadem.

[EDMONTON.]

WOMAN ! when I behold thee flippant, vain,
 Inconstant, childish, proud, and full of fancies ;
 Without that modest softening that enhances
 The downcast eye, repentant of the pain
 That its mild light creates to heal again :
 E'en then, elate, my spirit leaps, and prances,
 E'en then my soul with exultation dances
 For that to love, so long, I've dormant lain :
 But when I see thee meek, and kind, and tender,
 Heavens ! how desperately do I adore 10

Thy winning graces;—to be thy defender
 I hotly burn—to be a Calidore—
 A very Red Cross Knight—a stout Leander—
 Might I be loved by thee like these of yore.

Light feet, dark violet eyes, and parted hair;
 Soft dimpled hands, white neck, and creamy breast,
 Are things on which the dazzled senses rest
 Till the fond, fixed eyes, forget they stare.
 From such fine pictures, heavens! I cannot dare
 To turn my admiration, though unpossess'd 20
 They be of what is worthy,—though not drest
 In lovely modesty, and virtues rare.
 Yet these I leave as thoughtless as a lark;
 These lures I straight forget,—e'en ere I dine,
 Or thrice my palate moisten: but when I mark
 Such charms with mild intelligences shine,
 My ear is open like a greedy shark,
 To catch the tunings of a voice divine.

Ah! who can e'er forget so fair a being?
 Who can forget her half retiring sweets? 30
 God! she is like a milk-white lamb that bleats
 For man's protection. Surely the All-seeing,
 Who joys to see us with his gifts agreeing,
 Will never give him pinions, who intreats
 Such innocence to ruin,—who vilely cheats
 A dove-like bosom. In truth there is no freeing
 One's thoughts from such a beauty; when I hear
 A lay that once I saw her hand awake,
 Her form seems floating palpable, and near;
 Had I e'er seen her from an arbour take 40
 A dewy flower, oft would that hand appear,
 And o'er my eyes the trembling moisture shake.

EPISTLES.

TO GEORGE FELTON MATHEW

SWEET are the pleasures that to verse belong,
 And doubly sweet a brotherhood in song;
 Nor can remembrance, Mathew! bring to view
 A fate more pleasing, a delight more true
 Than that in which the brother Poets joy'd,
 Who with combined powers, their wit employ'd
 To raise a trophy to the drama's muses.
 The thought of this great partnership diffuses
 Over the genius loving heart, a feeling
 Of all that's high, and great, and good, and healing.

Too partial friend! fain would I follow thee 11
 Past each horizon of fine poesy;
 Fain would I echo back each pleasant note
 As o'er Sicilian seas, clear anthems float
 'Mong the light skimming gondolas far parted,
 Just when the sun his farewell beam has darted:
 But 'tis impossible; far different cares
 Beckon me sternly from soft 'Lydian airs,'
 And hold my faculties so long in thrall,
 That I am oft in doubt whether at all 20
 I shall again see Phœbus in the morning:
 Or flush'd Aurora in the roseate dawning!
 Or a white Naiad in a rippling stream;
 Or a rapt seraph in a moonlight beam;
 Or again witness what with thee I've seen,
 The dew by fairy feet swept from the green,
 After a night of some quaint jubilee
 Which every elf and fay had come to see:
 When bright processions took their airy march
 Beneath the curved moon's triumphal arch. 30

This and the two other Epistles form a separate section of the 1817 volume, with a half-title bearing the following motto from Broune's 'Britannia's Pastorals':—

"Among the rest a shepherd (though but young
 "Yet hartned to his pipe) with all the skill
 "His few yeeres could, began to fit his quill."

But might I now each passing moment give
To the coy muse, with me she would not live
In this dark city, nor would condescend
Mid contradictions her delights to lend.
Should e'er the fine-eyed maid to me be kind,
Ah! surely it must be whene'er I find
Some flowery spot, sequester'd, wild, romantic,
That often must have seen a poet frantic;
Where oaks, that erst the Druid knew, are growing,
And flowers, the glory of one day, are blowing; 40
Where the dark-leav'd laburnum's drooping clusters
Reflect athwart the stream their yellow lustres,
And intertwined the cassia's arms unite,
With its own drooping buds, but very white.
Where on one side are covert branches hung,
'Mong which the nightingales have always sung
In leafy quiet: where to pry, aloof,
Atween the pillars of the sylvan roof,
Would be to find where violet beds were nestling,
And where the bee with cowslip bells was wrestling.
There must be too a ruin dark, and gloomy, 51
To say 'joy not too much in all that's bloomy.'

Yet this is vain—O Mathew lend thy aid
To find a place where I may greet the maid—
Where we may soft humanity put on,
And sit, and rhyme and think on Chatterton;
And that warm-hearted Shakspeare sent to meet him
Four laurell'd spirits, heaven-ward to intreat him.
With reverence would we speak of all the sages 59
Who have left streaks of light athwart their ages:
And thou shouldst moralize on Milton's blindness,
And mourn the fearful dearth of human kindness
To those who strove with the bright golden wing
Of genius, to flap away each sting
Thrown by the pitiless world. We next could tell
Of those who in the cause of freedom fell;
Of our own Alfred, of Helvetian Tell;
Of him whose name to ev'ry heart's a solace,
High-minded and unbending William Wallace.
While to the rugged north our musing turns 70
We well might drop a tear for him, and Burns.

Felton! without incitements such as these,
How vain for me the niggard Muse to tease:
For thee, she will thy every dwelling grace,
And make 'a sun-shine in a shady place.'
For thou wast once a flowret blooming wild,
Close to the source, bright, pure, and undefil'd,
Whence gush the streams of song: in happy hour
Came chaste Diana from her shady bower,
Just as the sun was from the east uprising; 80
And, as for him some gift she was devising,
Beheld thee, pluck'd thee, cast thee in the stream
To meet her glorious brother's greeting beam.
I marvel much that thou hast never told
How, from a flower, into a fish of gold
Apollo chang'd thee; how thou next didst seem
A black-eyed swan upon the widening stream;
And when thou first didst in that mirror trace
The placid features of a human face:
That thou hast never told thy travels strange, 90
And all the wonders of the mazy range
O'er pebbly crystal, and o'er golden sands;
Kissing thy daily food from Naiad's pearly hands.

November, 1815.

TO MY BROTHER GEORGE

FULL many a dreary hour have I past,
My brain bewilder'd, and my mind o'ercast
With heaviness; in seasons when I've thought
No sphere's strains by me could e'er be caught
From the blue dome, though I to dimness gaze
On the far depth where sheeted lightning plays;
Or, on the wavy grass outstretch'd supinely,
Pry 'mong the stars, to strive to think divinely:
That I should never hear Apollo's song,
Though feathery clouds were floating all along 10
The purple west, and, two bright streaks between,
The golden lyre itself were dimly seen:
That the still murmur of the honey bee
Would never teach a rural song to me:

That the bright glance from beauty's eyelids slanting
Would never make a lay of mine enchanting,
Or warm my breast with ardour to unfold
Some tale of love and arms in time of old.

But there are times, when those that love the bay,
Fly from all sorrowing far, far away; 20

A sudden glow comes on them, naught they see
In water, earth, or air, but poesy.

It has been said, dear George, and true I hold it,
(For knightly Spenser to Libertas told it,)

That when a Poet is in such a trance,

In air he sees white coursers paw, and prance,

Bestriden of gay knights, in gay apparel,

Who at each other tilt in playful quarrel,

And what we, ignorantly, sheet-lightning call,

Is the swift opening of their wide portal, 30

When the bright warder blows his trumpet clear,

Whose tones reach naught on earth but Poet's ear.

When these enchanted portals open wide,

And through the light the horsemen swiftly glide,

The Poet's eye can reach those golden halls,

And view the glory of their festivals:

Their ladies fair, that in the distance seem

Fit for the silv'ring of a seraph's dream;

Their rich brimm'd goblets, that incessant run

Like the bright spots that move about the sun; 40

And, when upheld, the wine from each bright jar

Pours with the lustre of a falling star.

Yet further off, are dimly seen their bowers,

Of which, no mortal eye can reach the flowers;

And 'tis right just, for well Apollo knows

'Twould make the Poet quarrel with the rose.

All that's reveal'd from that far seat of blisses,

Is, the clear fountains' interchanging kisses,

As gracefully descending, light and thin,

Like silver streaks across a dolphin's fin, 50

When he upswimmeth from the coral caves,

And sports with half his tail above the waves.

These wonders strange he sees, and many more,

Whose head is pregnant with poetic lore.

Should he upon an evening ramble fare
With forehead to the soothing breezes bare,
Would he naught see but the dark, silent blue
With all its diamonds trembling through and through?
Or the coy moon, when in the waviness
Of whitest clouds she does her beauty dress, 60
And 'staidly paces higher up, and higher,
Like a sweet nun in holy-day attire?
Ah, yes! much more would start into his sight—
The revelries, and mysteries of night:
And should I ever see them, I will tell you
Such tales as needs must with amazement spell you.

These are the living pleasures of the bard:
But richer far posterity's award.
What does he murmur with his latest breath, 69
While his proud eye looks through the film of death?
'What though I leave this dull, and earthly mould,
Yet shall my spirit lofty converse hold
With after times.—The patriot shall feel
My stern alarum, and unsheath his steel;
Or, in the senate thunder out my numbers
To startle princes from their easy slumbers.
The sage will mingle with each moral theme
My happy thoughts sententious; he will teem
With lofty periods when my verses fire him,
And then I'll stoop from heaven to inspire him. 80
Lays have I left of such a dear delight
That maids will sing them on their bridal night.
Gay villagers, upon a morn of May,
When they have tired their gentle limbs with play,
And form'd a snowy circle on the grass,
And plac'd in midst of all that lovely lass
Who chosen is their queen,—with her fine head
Crowned with flowers purple, white, and red:
For there the lilly, and the musk-rose, sighing,
Are emblems true of hapless lovers dying: 90
Between her breasts, that never yet felt trouble,
A bunch of violets full blown, and double,
Serenely sleep:—she from a casket takes
A little book,—and then a joy awakes
About each youthful heart,—with stifled cries,

And rubbing of white hands, and sparkling eyes :
For she's to read a tale of hopes, and fears ;
One that I foster'd in my youthful years :
The pearls, that on each glist'ning circlet sleep,
Gush ever and anon with silent creep, 100
Lured by the innocent dimples. To sweet rest
Shall the dear babe, upon its mother's breast,
Be lull'd with songs of mine. Fair world, adieu !
Thy dales, and hills, are fading from my view :
Swiftly I mount, upon wide spreading pinions,
Far from the narrow bounds of thy dominions.
Full joy I feel, while thus I cleave the air,
That my soft verse will charm thy daughters fair,
And warm thy sons !' Ah, my dear friend and brother,
Could I, at once, my mad ambition smother, 110
For tasting joys like these, sure I should be Happier, and dearer to society.
At times, 'tis true, I've felt relief from pain
Whensomebright thought has darted through my brain:
Through all that day I've felt a greater pleasure
Than if I'd brought to light a hidden treasure.
As to my sonnets, though none else should heed them,
I feel delighted, still, that you should read them.
Of late, too, I have had much calm enjoyment, 119
Stretch'd on the grass at my best lov'd employment
Of scribbling lines for you. These things I thought
While, in my face, the freshest breeze I caught.
E'en now I'm pillow'd on a bed of flowers
That crowns a lofty clift, which proudly towers
Above the ocean-waves. The stalks, and blades,
Chequer my tablet with their quivering shades.
On one side is a field of drooping oats,
Through which the poppies show their scarlet coats ;
So pert and useless, that they bring to mind
The scarlet coats that pester human-kind. 120
And on the other side, outspread, is seen
Ocean's blue mantle streak'd with purple, and green.
Now 'tis I see a canvass'd ship, and now
Mark the bright silver curling round her prow.
I see the lark down-dropping to his nest,
And the broad winged sea-gull never at rest ;
For when no more he spreads his feathers free,

His breast is dancing on the restless sea.
 Now I direct my eyes into the west,
 Which at this moment is in sunbeams drest : 140
 Why westward turn? 'Twas but to say adieu!
 'Twas but to kiss my hand, dear George, to you!

[MARGATE] August 1816.

TO CHARLES COWDEN CLARKE

OFT have you seen a swan superbly frowning,
 And with proud breast his own white shadow crowning;
 He slants his neck beneath the waters bright
 So silently, it seems a beam of light
 Come from the galaxy: anon he sports,—
 With outspread wings the Naiad Zephyr courts,
 Or ruffles all the surface of the lake
 In striving from its crystal face to take
 Some diamond water drops, and them to treasure
 In milky nest, and sip them off at leisure. 10
 But not a moment can he there insure them,
 Nor to such downy rest can he allure them;
 For down they rush as though they would be free,
 And drop like hours into eternity.
 Just like that bird am I in loss of time,
 Whene'er I venture on the stream of rhyme;
 With shatter'd boat, oar snapt, and canvass rent
 I slowly sail, scarce knowing my intent;
 Still scooping up the water with my fingers,
 In which a trembling diamond never lingers. 20
 By this, friend Charles, you may full plainly see
 Why I have never penn'd a line to thee:
 Because my thoughts were never free, and clear,
 And little fit to please a classic ear;
 Because my wine was of too poor a savour
 For one whose palate gladdens in the flavour
 Of sparkling Helicon:—small good it were
 To take him to a desert rude, and bare,
 Who had on Baïæ's shore reclin'd at ease,
 While Tasso's page was floating in a breeze 30
 That gave soft music from Armida's bowers,
 Mingled with fragrance from her rarest flowers:

Small good to one who had by Mulla's stream
Fondled the maidens with the breasts of cream;
Who had beheld Belphebe in a brook,
And lovely Una in a leafy nook,
And Archimago leaning o'er his book:
Who had of all that's sweet tasted, and seen,
From silv'ry ripple, up to beauty's queen;
From the sequester'd haunts of gay Titania, 40
To the blue dwelling of divine Urania:
One, who, of late, had ta'en sweet forest walks
With him who elegantly chats, and talks—
The wrong'd Libertas,—who has told you stories
Of laurel chaplets, and Apollo's glories;
Of troops chivalrous prancing through a city,
And tearful ladies made for love, and pity:
With many else which I have never known.
Thus have I thought; and days on days have flown
Slowly, or rapidly—unwilling still 50
For you to try my dull, unlearned quill.
Nor should I now, but that I've known you long;
That you first taught me all the sweets of song:
The grand, the sweet, the terse, the free, the fine;
What swell'd with pathos, and what right divine:
Spenserian vowels that elope with ease,
And float along like birds o'er summer seas;
Miltonian storms, and more, Miltonian tenderness;
Michael in arms, and more, meek Eve's fair slenderness.
Who read for me the sonnet swelling loudly 60
Up to its climax and then dying proudly?
Who found for me the grandeur of the ode,
Growing, like Atlas, stronger from its load?
Who let me taste that more than cordial dram,
The sharp, the rapier-pointed epigram?
Show'd me that epic was of all the king,
Round, vast, and spanning all like Saturn's ring?
You too upheld the veil from Clío's beauty,
And pointed out the patriot's stern duty;
The might of Alfred, and the shaft of Tell; 70
The hand of Brutus, that so grandly fell
Upon a tyrant's head. Ah! had I never seen,

Or known your kindness, what might I have been?
What my enjoyments in my youthful years,
Bereft of all that now my life endears?
And can I e'er these benefits forget?
And can I e'er repay the friendly debt?
No, doubly no;—yet should these rhymings please,
I shall roll on the grass with two-fold ease:
For I have long time been my fancy feeding 80
With hopes that you would one day think the reading
Of my rough verses not an hour misspent;
Should it e'er be so, what a rich content!
Some weeks have pass'd since last I saw the spires
In lucent Thames reflected:—warm desires
To see the sun o'erpeep the eastern dimness,
And morning shadows streaking into slimness
Across the lawny fields, and pebbly water;
To mark the time as they grow broad, and shorter;
To feel the air that plays about the hills, 90
And sips its freshness from the little rills;
To see high, golden corn wave in the light
When Cynthia smiles upon a summer's night,
And peers among the cloudlets jet and white,
As though she were reclining in a bed
Of bean blossoms, in heaven freshly shed.
No sooner had I stepp'd into these pleasures
Than I began to think of rhymes and measures:
The air that floated by me seem'd to say
"Write! thou wilt never have a better day." 100
And so I did. When many lines I'd written,
Though with their grace I was not oversmitten,
Yet, as my hand was warm, I thought I'd better
Trust to my feelings, and write you a letter.
Such an attempt required an inspiration
Of a peculiar sort,—a consummation;—
Which, had I felt, these scribblings might have been Verses from which the soul would never wean:
But many days have passed since last my heart
Was warm'd luxuriously by divine Mozart; 110
By Arne delighted, or by Handel madden'd;
Or by the song of Erin pierc'd and sadden'd:
What time you were before the music sitting,
And the rich notes to each sensation fitting.

Since I have walk'd with you through shady lanes
 That freshly terminate in open plains,
 And revel'd in a chat that ceased not
 When at night-fall among your books we got:
 No, nor when supper came, nor after that,—
 Nor when reluctantly I took my hat; 120
 No, nor till cordially you shook my hand
 Mid-way between our homes:—your accents bland
 Still sounded in my ears, when I no more
 Could hear your footsteps touch the grav'ly floor.
 Sometimes I lost them, and then found again;
 You chang'd the footpath for the grassy plain.
 In those still moments I have wish'd you joys
 That well you know to honour:—"Life's very toys
 "With him," said I, "will take a pleasant charm;
 "It cannot be that aught will work him harm." 130
 These thoughts now come o'er me with all their might:—
 Again I shake your hand,—friend Charles, good night.

September, 1816.

SONNETS

I

TO MY BROTHER GEORGE

MANY the wonders I this day have seen :
 The sun, when first he kist away the tears
 That fill'd the eyes of morn ;—the laurell'd peers
 Who from the feathery gold of evening lean ;—
 The ocean with its vastness, its blue green,
 Its ships, its rocks, its caves, its hopes, its fears,—
 Its voice mysterious, which whoso hears
 Must think on what will be, and what has been.
 E'en now, dear George, while this for you I write,
 Cynthia is from her silken curtains peeping 10
 So scantily, that it seems her bridal night,
 And she her half-discover'd revels keeping.
 But what, without the social thought of thee,
 Would be the wonders of the sky and sea ?

II

TO * * * * *

HAD I a man's fair form, then might my sighs
 Be echoed swiftly through that ivory shell
 Thine ear, and find thy gentle heart ; so well
 Would passion arm me for the enterprize :
 But ah ! I am no knight whose foeman dies ;
 No cuirass glistens on my bosom's swell ;
 I am no happy shepherd of the dell
 Whose lips have trembled with a maiden's eyes.
 Yet must I dote upon thee,—call thee sweet,
 Sweeter by far than Hybla's honied roses 10
 When steep'd in dew rich to intoxication.
 Ah ! I will taste that dew, for me 'tis meet,
 And when the moon her pallid face discloses,
 I'll gather some by spells, and incantation.

III

WRITTEN ON THE DAY THAT MR. LEIGH
HUNT LEFT PRISON

WHAT though, for showing truth to flatter'd state,
Kind Hunt was shut in prison, yet has he,
In his immortal spirit, been as free
As the sky-searching lark, and as elate.
Minion of grandeur! think you he did wait?
Think you he naught but prison walls did see,
Till, so unwilling, thou unturn'dst the key?
Ah, no! far happier, nobler was his fate!
In Spenser's halls he stray'd, and bowers fair,
Culling enchanted flowers; and he flew 10
With daring Milton through the fields of air:
To regions of his own his genius true
Took happy flights. Who shall his fame impair
When thou art dead, and all thy wretched crew?

IV

How many bards gild the lapses of time!
A few of them have ever been the food
Of my delighted fancy,—I could brood
Over their beauties, earthly, or sublime:
And often, when I sit me down to rhyme,
These will in throngs before my mind intrude:
But no confusion, no disturbance rude
Do they occasion; 'tis a pleasing chime.
So the unnumber'd sounds that evening store; 9
The songs of birds—the whisp'ring of the leaves—
The voice of waters—the great bell that heaves
With solemn sound,—and thousand others more,
That distance of recognizance bereaves,
Make pleasing music, and not wild uproar.

V

TO A FRIEND WHO SENT ME SOME ROSES

As late I rambled in the happy fields,
 What time the sky-lark shakes the tremulous dew
 From his lush clover covert ;—when anew
 Adventurous knights take up their dinted shields :
 I saw the sweetest flower wild nature yields,
 A fresh-blown musk-rose ; 'twas the first that threw
 Its sweets upon the summer : graceful it grew
 As is the wand that queen Titania wields.
 And, as I feasted on its fragrantcy,
 I thought the garden-rose it far excell'd : 10
 But when, O Wells! thy roses came to me
 My sense with their deliciousness was spell'd :
 Soft voices had they, that with tender plea
 Whisper'd of peace, and truth, and friendliness unquell'd.

VI

TO G. A. W.

[GEORGIANA AUGUSTA WYLIE.]

Nymph of the downward smile and sidelong glance,
 In what diviner moments of the day
 Art thou most lovely ?—when gone far astray
 Into the labyrinths of sweet utterance,
 Or when serenely wand'ring in a trance
 Of sober thought ?—or when starting away
 With careless robe to meet the morning ray
 Thou spar'st the flowers in thy mazy dance ?
 Haply 'tis when thy ruby lips part sweetly,
 And so remain, because thou listenest : 10
 But thou to please wert nurtured so completely
 That I can never tell what mood is best.
 I shall as soon pronounce which Grace more neatly
 Trips it before Apollo than the rest.

VII

O SOLITUDE! if I must with thee dwell,
 Let it not be among the jumbled heap
 Of murky buildings; climb with me the steep,—
 Nature's observatory—whence the dell,
 Its flowery slopes, its river's crystal swell,
 May seem a span; let me thy vigils keep
 'Mongst boughs pavillion'd, where the deer's swift leap
 Startles the wild bee from the fox-glove bell.
 But though I'll gladly trace these scenes with thee,
 Yet the sweet converse of an innocent mind, 10
 Whose words are images of thoughts refin'd,
 Is my soul's pleasure; and it sure must be
 Almost the highest bliss of human-kind,
 When to thy haunts two kindred spirits flee.

VIII

TO MY BROTHERS

SMALL, busy flames play through the fresh laid coals,
 And their faint cracklings o'er our silence creep
 Like whispers of the household gods that keep
 A gentle empire o'er fraternal souls.
 And while, for rhymes, I search around the poles,
 Your eyes are fix'd, as in poetic sleep,
 Upon the lore so voluble and deep,
 That aye at fall of night our care condoles.
 This is your birth-day Tom, and I rejoice
 That thus it passes smoothly, quietly. 10
 Many such eves of gently whisp'ring noise
 May we together pass, and calmly try
 What are this world's true joys,—ere the great voice,
 From its fair face, shall bid our spirits fly.

November 18, 1816.

VII. 9, 10.

Ah! fain would I frequent such scenes with thee;
 But the sweet converse of an innocent mind. Examiner.

VIII. Title] Written to his brother Tom on his Birthday.
Tom Keats's MS.

IX

KEEN, fitful gusts are whisp'ring here and there
 Among the bushes half leafless, and dry ;
 The stars look very cold about the sky,
 And I have many miles on foot to fare,
 Yet feel I little of the cool bleak air,
 Or of the dead leaves rustling drearily,
 Or of those silver lamps that burn on high,
 Or of the distance from home's pleasant lair :
 For I am brimfull of the friendliness
 That in a little cottage I have found ;
 Of fair-hair'd Milton's eloquent distress,
 And all his love for gentle Lycid drown'd ;
 Of lovely Laura in her light green dress,
 And faithful Petrarch gloriously crown'd.

To one who has been long in city pent,
 'Tis very sweet to look into the fair
 And open face of heaven,—to breathe a prayer
 Full in the smile of the blue firmament.
 Who is more happy, when, with heart's content,
 Fatigued he sinks into some pleasant lair
 Of wavy grass, and reads a debonair
 And gentle tale of love and languishment?
 Returning home at evening, with an ear
 Catching the notes of Philomel,—an eye
 Watching the sailing cloudlet's bright career,
 He mourns that day so soon has glided by :
 E'en like the passage of an angel's tear
 That falls through the clear ether silently.

IX. Clarke records that this sonnet was written on the occasion of Keats's first becoming acquainted with Leigh Hunt at the Cottage in the Vale of Health, Hampstead.

X. Written in the Fields—June 1816. George Keats's MS.

XI

ON FIRST LOOKING INTO CHAPMAN'S
HOMER

MUCH have I travell'd in the realms of gold,
 And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
 Round many western islands have I been
 Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
 Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
 That deep-brow'd Homer ruled as his demesne;
 Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
 Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:
 Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
 When a new planet swims into his ken; 10
 Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
 He star'd at the Pacific—and all his men
 Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
 Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

XII

ON LEAVING SOME FRIENDS AT AN EARLY HOUR

GIVE me a golden pen, and let me lean
 On heap'd up flowers, in regions clear, and far;
 Bring me a tablet whiter than a star,
 Or hand of hymning angel, when 'tis seen
 The silver strings of heavenly harp atween:
 And let there glide by many a pearly car,
 Pink robes, and wavy hair, and diamond jar,
 And half discovered wings, and glances keen.
 The while let music wander round my ears,
 And as it reaches each delicious ending, 10
 Let me write down a line of glorious tone,
 And full of many wonders of the spheres:
 For what a height my spirit is contending!
 'Tis not content so soon to be alone.

XIII

ADDRESSED TO HAYDON

HIGHMINDEDNESS, a jealousy for good,
 A loving-kindness for the great man's fame,
 Dwells here and there with people of no name,
 In noisome alley, and in pathless wood:
 And where we think the truth least understood,
 Oft may be found a 'singleness of aim,'
 That ought to frighten into hooded shame
 A money-mong'ring, pitiable brood.
 How glorious this affection for the cause
 Of stedfast genius, toiling gallantly! 10
 What when a stout unbending champion awes
 Envy, and Malice to their native sty?
 Unnumber'd souls breathe out a still applause,
 Proud to behold him in his country's eye.

XIV

ADDRESSED TO THE SAME

GREAT spirits now on earth are sojourning;
 He of the cloud, the cataract, the lake,
 Who on Helvellyn's summit, wide awake,
 Catches his freshness from Archangel's wing:
 He of the rose, the violet, the spring,
 The social smile, the chain for Freedom's sake:
 And lo!—whose stedfastness would never take
 A meaner sound than Raphael's whispering.
 And other spirits there are standing apart 10
 Upon the forehead of the age to come;
 These, these will give the world another heart,
 And other pulses. Hear ye not the hum
 Of mighty workings?—
 Listen awhile ye nations, and be dumb.

ON THE GRASSHOPPER AND CRICKET

THE poetry of earth is never dead :

When all the birds are faint with the hot sun,
And hide in cooling trees, a voice will run
From hedge to hedge about the new-mown mead ;
That is the Grasshopper's—he takes the lead

In summer luxury,—he has never done
With his delights ; for when tired out with fun
He rests at ease beneath some pleasant weed.

The poetry of earth is ceasing never :

On a lone winter evening, when the frost . 10
Has wrought a silence, from the stove there shrills
The Cricket's song, in warmth increasing ever,
And seems to one in drowsiness half lost,
The Grasshopper's among some grassy hills.

TO KOSCIUSKO

Good Kosciusko, thy great name alone
Is a full harvest whence to reap high feeling ;
It comes upon us like the glorious pealing
Of the wide spheres—an everlasting tone.
And now it tells me, that in worlds unknown,
The names of heroes, burst from clouds concealing,
And change to harmonies, for ever stealing
Through cloudless blue, and round each silver throne.
It tells me too, that on a happy day,
When some good spirit walks upon the earth, 10
Thy name with Alfred's, and the great of yore
Gently commingling, gives tremendous birth
To a loud hymn, that sounds far, far away
To where the great God lives for evermore.

HAPPY is England! I could be content
To see no other verdure than its own;
To feel no other breezes than are blown
Through its tall woods with high romances blent:
Yet do I sometimes feel a languishment
For skies Italian, and an inward groan
To sit upon an Alp as on a throne,
And half forget what world or worldling meant.
Happy is England, sweet her artless daughters;
Enough their simple loveliness for me, 10
Enough their whitest arms in silence clinging:
Yet do I often warmly burn to see
Beauties of deeper glance, and hear their singing,
And float with them about the summer waters.

SLEEP AND POETRY

"As I lay in my bed slepe full unmete
 "Was unto me, but why that I ne might
 "Rest I ne wist, for there n'as erthly wight
 "[As I suppose] had more of hertis ese
 "Than I, for I n'ad sicknesse nor disese."

CHAUCER.

WHAT is more gentle than a wind in summer?
 What is more soothing than the pretty hummer
 That stays one moment in an open flower,
 And buzzes cheerily from bower to bower?
 What is more tranquil than a musk-rose blowing
 In a green island, far from all men's knowing?
 More healthful than the leafiness of dales?
 More secret than a nest of nightingales?
 More serene than Cordelia's countenance?
 More full of visions than a high romance? 10
 What, but thee Sleep? Soft closer of our eyes!
 Low murmurer of tender lullabies!
 Light hoverer around our happy pillows!
 Wreather of poppy buds, and weeping willows!
 Silent entangler of a beauty's tresses!
 Most happy listener! when the morning blesses
 Thee for enlivening all the cheerful eyes
 That glance so brightly at the new sun-rise.

But what is higher beyond thought than thee?
 Fresher than berries of a mountain tree? 20
 More strange, more beautiful, more smooth, more regal,
 Than wings of swans, than doves, than dim-seen eagle?
 What is it? And to what shall I compare it?
 It has a glory, and naught else can share it:
 The thought thereof is awful, sweet, and holy,
 Chasing away all worldliness and folly;
 Coming sometimes like fearful claps of thunder,
 Or the low rumblings earth's regions under;
 And sometimes like a gentle whispering
 Of all the secrets of some wond'rous thing 30

That breathes about us in the vacant air;
 So that we look around with prying stare,
 Perhaps to see shapes of light, aerial limning,
 And catch soft floatings from a faint-heard hymning;
 To see the laurel wreath, on high suspended,
 That is to crown our name when life is ended.
 Sometimes it gives a glory to the voice,
 And from the heart up-springs, rejoice! rejoice!
 Sounds which will reach the Framers of all things,
 And die away in ardent mutterings. 40

No one who once the glorious sun has seen,
 And all the clouds, and felt his bosom clean
 For his great Maker's presence, but must know
 What 'tis I mean, and feel his being glow:
 Therefore no insult will I give his spirit,
 By telling what he sees from native merit.

O Poesy! for thee I hold my pen
 That am not yet a glorious denizen
 Of thy wide heaven—Should I rather kneel
 Upon some mountain-top until I feel 50
 A glowing splendour round about me hung,
 And echo back the voice of thine own tongue?
 O Poesy! for thee I grasp my pen
 That am not yet a glorious denizen
 Of thy wide heaven; yet, to my ardent prayer,
 Yield from thy sanctuary some clear air,
 Smooth'd for intoxication by the breath
 Of flowering bays, that I may die a death
 Of luxury, and my young spirit follow
 The morning sun-beams to the great Apollo 60
 Like a fresh sacrifice; or, if I can bear
 The o'erwhelming sweets, 'twill bring to me the fair
 Visions of all places: a bowery nook
 Will be elysium—an eternal book
 Whence I may copy many a lovely saying
 About the leaves, and flowers—about the playing
 Of nymphs in woods, and fountains; and the shade
 Keeping a silence round a sleeping maid;
 And many a verse from so strange influence

That we must ever wonder how, and whence 70
 It came. Also imaginings will hover
 Round my fire-side, and haply there discover
 Vistas of solemn beauty, where I'd wander
 ° In happy silence, like the clear Meander
 Through its lone vales; and where I found a spot
 Of awfuller shade, or an enchanted grot,
 Or a green hill o'erspread with chequer'd dress
 Of flowers, and fearful from its loveliness,
 Write on my tablets all that was permitted,
 All that was for our human senses fitted. 80
 Then the events of this wide world I'd seize
 Like a strong giant, and my spirit teaze
 Till at its shoulders it should proudly see
 Wings to find out an immortality.

Stop and consider! life is but a day;
 A fragile dew-drop on its perilous way
 From a tree's summit; a poor Indian's sleep
 While his boat hastens to the monstrous steep
 Of Montmorenci. Why so sad a moan?
 Life is the rose's hope while yet unblown; 90
 The reading of an ever-changing tale;
 The light uplifting of a maiden's veil;
 A pigeon tumbling in clear summer air;
 A laughing school-boy, without grief or care,
 Riding the springy branches of an elm.

O for ten years, that I may overwhelm
 Myself in poesy; so I may do the deed
 That my own soul has to itself decreed.
 Then will I pass the countries that I see
 In long perspective, and continually 100
 Taste their pure fountains. First the realm I'll pass
 Of Flora, and old Pan: sleep in the grass,
 Feed upon apples red, and strawberries,
 And choose each pleasure that my fancy sees;
 Catch the white-handed nymphs in shady places,
 To woo sweet kisses from averted faces,—
 Play with their fingers, touch their shoulders white
 Into a pretty shrinking with a bite

As hard as lips can make it: till agreed,
 A lovely tale of human life we'll read. 110
 And one will teach a tame dove how it best
 May fan the cool air gently o'er my rest;
 Another, bending o'er her nimble tread,
 Will set a green robe floating round her head,
 And still will dance with ever varied ease,
 Smiling upon the flowers and the trees:
 Another will entice me on, and on
 Through almond blossoms and rich cinnamon;
 Till in the bosom of a leafy world
 We rest in silence, like two gems upcurl'd 120
 In the recesses of a pearly shell.

And can I ever bid these joys farewell?
 Yes, I must pass them for a nobler life,
 Where I may find the agonies, the strife
 Of human hearts: for lo! I see afar,
 O'ersailing the blue cragginess, a car
 And steeds with creamy manes—the charioteer
 Looks out upon the winds with glorious fear:
 And now the numerous tramlings quiver lightly
 Along a huge cloud's ridge; and now with sprightly
 Wheel downward come they into fresher skies, 131
 Tipt round with silver from the sun's bright eyes.
 Still downward with capacious whirl they glide;
 And now I see them on the green-hill's side
 In breezy rest among the nodding stalks.
 The charioteer with wond'rous gesture talks
 To the trees and mountains; and there soon appear
 Shapes of delight, of mystery, and fear,
 Passing along before a dusky space
 Made by some mighty oaks: as they would chase 140
 Some ever-fleeting music on they sweep.
 Lo! how they murmur, laugh, and smile, and weep:
 Some with upholden hand and mouth severe;
 Some with their faces muffled to the ear
 Between their arms; some, clear in youthful bloom,
 Go glad and smilingly athwart the gloom;
 Some looking back, and some with upward gaze;
 Yes, thousands in a thousand different ways
 Flit onward—now a lovely wreath of girls

Dancing their sleek hair into tangled curls ; 150
 And now broad wings. Most awfully intent
 The driver of those steeds is forward bent,
 And seems to listen : O that I might know
 All that he writes with such a hurrying glow.

The visions all are fled—the car is fled
 Into the light of heaven, and in their stead
 A sense of real things comes doubly strong,
 And, like a muddy stream, would bear along
 My soul to nothingness : but I will strive
 Against all doubtings, and will keep alive 160
 The thought of that same chariot, and the strange
 Journey it went.

Is there so small a range
 In the present strength of manhood, that the high
 Imagination cannot freely fly
 As she was wont of old ? prepare her steeds,
 Paw up against the light, and do strange deeds
 Upon the clouds ? Has she not shown us all ?
 From the clear space of ether, to the small
 Breath of new buds unfolding ? From the meaning
 Of Jove's large eye-brow, to the tender greening 170
 Of April meadows ? Here her altar shone,
 E'en in this isle ; and who could paragon
 The fervid choir that lifted up a noise
 Of harmony, to where it aye will poise
 Its mighty self of convoluting sound,
 Huge as a planet, and like that roll round,
 Eternally around a dizzy void ?
 Ay, in those days the Muses were nigh cloy'd
 With honors ; nor had any other care
 Than to sing out and sooth their wavy hair. 180

Could all this be forgotten ? Yes, a schism
 Nurtured by foppery and barbarism,
 Made great Apollo blush for this his land.
 Men were thought wise who could not understand
 His glories : with a puling infant's force
 They sway'd about upon a rocking horse,
 And thought it Pegasus. Ah dismal soul'd !

The winds of heaven blew, the ocean roll'd
 Its gathering waves—ye felt it not. The blue
 Bared its eternal bosom, and the dew 190
 Of summer nights collected still to make
 The morning precious: beauty was awake!
 Why were ye not awake? But ye were dead
 To things ye knew not of,—were closely wed
 To musty laws lined out with wretched rule
 And compass vile: so that ye taught a school
 Of dolts to smooth, inlay, and clip, and fit,
 Till, like the certain wands of Jacob's wit,
 Their verses tallied. Easy was the task:
 A thousand handicraftsmen wore the mask 200
 To Poesy. Ill-fated, impious race!
 That blasphemed the bright Lyrist to his face,
 And did not know it,—no, they went about,
 Holding a poor, decrepid standard out
 Mark'd with most flimsy mottos, and in large
 The name of one Boileau!

O ye whose charge
 It is to hover round our pleasant hills!
 Whose congregated majesty so fills
 My boundly reverence, that I cannot trace
 Your hallowed names, in this unholy place, 210
 So near those common folk; did not their shames
 Affright you? Did our old lamenting Thames
 Delight you? Did ye never cluster round
 Delicious Avon, with a mournful sound,
 And weep? Or did ye wholly bid adieu
 To regions where no more the laurel grew?
 Or did ye stay to give a welcoming
 To some lone spirits who could proudly sing
 Their youth away, and die? 'Twas even so:
 But let me think away those times of woe: 220
 Now 'tis a fairer season; ye have breathed
 Rich benedictions o'er us; ye have wreathed
 Fresh garlands: for sweet music has been heard
 In many places;—some has been upstirr'd
 From out its crystal dwelling in a lake,
 By a swan's ebon bill; from a thick brake,
 Nested and quiet in a valley mild,

Bubbles a pipe ; fine sounds are floating wild
About the earth : happy are ye and glad. 229

These things are doubtless : yet in truth we've had
Strange thunders from the potency of song ;
Mingled indeed with what is sweet and strong,
From majesty : but in clear truth the themes
Are ugly cubs, the Poets Polyphemes
Disturbing the grand sea. A drainless shower
Of light is poesy ; 'tis the supreme of power ;
'Tis might half slumb'ring on its own right arm.
The very archings of her eye-lids charm
A thousand willing agents to obey,
And still she governs with the mildest sway : 240
But strength alone though of the Muses born
Is like a fallen angel : trees uptorn,
Darkness, and worms, and shrouds, and sepulchres
Delight it ; for it feeds upon the burrs,
And thorns of life ; forgetting the great end
Of poesy, that it should be a friend
To sooth the cares, and lift the thoughts of man.

Yet I rejoice : a myrtle fairer than
E'er grew in Paphos, from the bitter weeds
Lifts its sweet head into the air, and feeds 250
A silent space with ever sprouting green.
All tenderest birds there find a pleasant screen,
Creep through the shade with jaunty fluttering,
Nibble the little cupped flowers and sing.
Then let us clear away the choking thorns
From round its gentle stem ; let the young fawns,
Yeaned in after times, when we are flown,
Find a fresh sward beneath it, overgrown
With simple flowers : let there nothing be
More boisterous than a lover's bended knee ; 260
Nought more ungentle than the placid look
Of one who leans upon a closed book ;
Nought more untr tranquil than the grassy slopes
Between two hills. All hail delightful hopes !
As she was wont, th' imagination
Into most lovely labyrinths will be gone,
And they shall be accounted poet kings

Who simply tell the most heart-easing things.
O may these joys be ripe before I die.

Will not some say that I presumptuously 270
Have spoken? that from hastening disgrace
'Twere better far to hide my foolish face?
That whining boyhood should with reverence bow
Ere the dread thunderbolt could reach? How!
If I do hide myself, it sure shall be
In the very fane, the light of Poesy:
If I do fall, at least I will be laid
Beneath the silence of a poplar shade;
And over me the grass shall be smooth shaven;
And there shall be a kind memorial graven. 280
But off Despondence! miserable bane!
They should not know thee, who athirst to gain
A noble end, are thirsty every hour.
What though I am not wealthy in the dower
Of spanning wisdom; though I do not know
The shiftings of the mighty winds that blow
Hither and thither all the changing thoughts
Of man: though no great minist'ring reason sorts
Out the dark mysteries of human souls
To clear conceiving: yet there ever rolls 290
A vast idea before me, and I glean
Therefrom my liberty; thence too I've seen
The end and aim of Poesy. 'Tis clear
As anything most true; as that the year
Is made of the four seasons—manifest
As a large cross, some old cathedral's crest,
Lifted to the white clouds. Therefore should I
Be but the essence of deformity,
A coward, did my very eye-lids wink
At speaking out what I have dared to think. 300
Ah! rather let me like a madman run
Over some precipice; let the hot sun
Melt my Dedalian wings, and drive me down
Convuls'd and headlong! Stay! an inward frown
Of conscience bids me be more calm awhile.
An ocean dim, sprinkled with many an isle,
Spreads awfully before me. How much toil!
How many days! what desperate turmoil!

Ere I can have explored its widenesses.
 Ah, what a task! upon my bended knees, 310
 I could unsay those—no, impossible!
 Impossible!

For sweet relief I'll dwell
 On humbler thoughts, and let this strange assay
 Begun in gentleness die so away.
 E'en now all tumult from my bosom fades:
 I turn full hearted to the friendly aids
 That smooth the path of honour; brotherhood,
 And friendliness the nurse of mutual good.
 The hearty grasp that sends a pleasant sonnet
 Into the brain ere one can think upon it; 320
 The silence when some rhymes are coming out;
 And when they're come, the very pleasant rout:
 The message certain to be done to-morrow.
 'Tis perhaps as well that it should be to borrow
 Some precious book from out its snug retreat,
 To cluster round it when we next shall meet.
 Scarce can I scribble on; for lovely airs
 Are fluttering round the room like doves in pairs;
 Many delights of that glad day recalling,
 When first my senses caught their tender falling. 330
 And with these airs come forms of elegance
 Stooping their shoulders o'er a horse's prance,
 Careless, and grand—fingers soft and round
 Parting luxuriant curls;—and the swift bound
 Of Bacchus from his chariot, when his eye
 Made Ariadne's cheek look blushinglly.
 Thus I remember all the pleasant flow
 Of words at opening a portfolio.

Things such as these are ever harbingers
 To trains of peaceful images: the stirs 340
 Of a swan's neck unseen among the rushes:
 A linnet starting all about the bushes:
 A butterfly, with golden wings broad parted,
 Nestling a rose, convuls'd as though it smarted
 With over pleasure—many, many more,
 Might I indulge at large in all my store
 Of luxuries: yet I must not forget
 Sleep, quiet with his poppy coronet:

For what there, may be worthy in these rhymes
 I partly owe to him: and thus, the chimes 350
 Of friendly voices had just given place
 To as sweet a silence, when I 'gan retrace
 The pleasant day, upon a couch at ease.
 It was a poet's house who keeps the keys
 Of pleasure's temple. Round about were hung
 The glorious features of the bards who sung
 In other ages—cold and sacred busts
 Smiled at each other. Happy he who trusts
 To clear Futurity his darling fame!
 Then there were fauns and satyrs taking aim 360
 At swelling apples with a frisky leap
 And reaching fingers, 'mid a luscious heap
 Of vine-leaves. Then there rose to view a fane
 Of liny marble, and thereto a train
 Of nymphs approaching fairly o'er the sward:
 One, loveliest, holding her white hand toward
 The dazzling sun-rise: two sisters sweet
 Bending their graceful figures till they meet
 Over the trippings of a little child:
 And some are hearing, eagerly, the wild 370
 Thrilling liquidity of dewy piping.
 See, in another picture, nymphs are wiping
 Cherishingly Diana's timorous limbs;—
 A fold of lawny mantle dabbling swims
 At the bath's edge, and keeps a gentle motion
 With the subsiding crystal: as when ocean
 Heaves calmly its broad swelling smoothness o'er
 Its rocky marge, and balances once more
 The patient weeds; that now unshent by foam
 Feel all about their undulating home. 380

Sappho's meek head was there half smiling down
 At nothing; just as though the earnest frown
 Of over thinking had that moment gone
 From off her brow, and left her all alone.

Great Alfred's too, with anxious, pitying eyes,
 As if he always listened to the sighs
 Of the goaded world; and Kosciusko's worn
 By horrid suffrance—mightily forlorn.

Petrarch, outstepping from the shady green,
Starts at the sight of Laura; nor can wean 330
His eyes from her sweet face. Most happy they!
For over them was seen a free display
Of out-spread wings, and from between them shone
The face of Poesy: from off her throne
She overlook'd things that I scarce could tell.
The very sense of where I was might well
Keep Sleep aloof: but more than that there came
Thought after thought to nourish up the flame
Within my breast; so that the morning light
Surprised me even from a sleepless night; 400
And up I rose refresh'd, and glad, and gay,
Resolving to begin that very day
These lines; and howsoever they be done,
I leave them as a father does his son.

ENDYMION:
A POETIC ROMANCE.

INSCRIBED
TO THE MEMORY
THOMAS CHATTERTON.
1818.

PREFACE

KNOWING within myself the manner in which this Poem has been produced, it is not without a feeling of regret that I make it public.

What manner I mean, will be quite clear to the reader, who must soon perceive great inexperience, immaturity, and every error denoting a feverish attempt, rather than a deed accomplished. The two first books, and indeed the two last, I feel sensible are not of such completion as to warrant their passing the press; nor should they if I thought a year's castigation would do them any good;—it will not: the foundations are too sandy. It is just that this youngster should die away: a sad thought for me, if I had not some hope that while it is dwindling I may be plotting, and fitting myself for verses fit to live.

This may be speaking too presumptuously, and may deserve a punishment: but no feeling man will be forward to inflict it: he will leave me alone, with the conviction that there is not a fiercer hell than the failure in a great object. This is not written with the least atom of purpose to forestall criticisms of course, but from the desire I have to conciliate men who are competent to look, and who do look with a zealous eye, to the honour of English literature.

The imagination of a boy is healthy, and the mature imagination of a man is healthy; but there is a space of life between, in which the soul is in a ferment, the character undecided, the way of life uncertain, the ambition thick-sighted: thence proceeds mawkishness, and all the thousand bitters which those men I speak of must necessarily taste in going over the following pages.

I hope I have not in too late a day touched the beautiful mythology of Greece, and dulled its brightness: for I wish to try once more¹, before I bid it farewell.

TEIGNMOUTH, April 10, 1818.

¹ Woodhouse notes—This alluded to his then intention of writing a poem on the fall of Hyperion. He commenced this poem: but, thanks to the critics who fell foul of this work, he discontinued it. The fragment was published in 1820.

ENDYMION

BOOK I

A THING of beauty is a joy for ever :
Its loveliness increases ; it will never
Pass into nothingness ; but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.
Therefore, on every morrow, are we wreathing
A flowery band to bind us to the earth,
Spite of despondence, of the inhuman dearth
Of noble natures, of the gloomy days,
Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darkened ways 10
Made for our searching : yes, in spite of all,
Some shape of beauty moves away the pall
From our dark spirits. Such the sun, the moon,
Trees old, and young, sprouting a shady boon
For simple sheep ; and such are daffodils
With the green world they live in ; and clear rills
That for themselves a cooling covert make
'Gainst the hot season ; the mid forest brake,
Rich with a sprinkling of fair musk-rose blooms :
And such too is the grandeur of the dooms 20
We have imagined for the mighty dead ;
All lovely tales that we have heard or read :

1 The manuscript shows no variation in the opening line ; but the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson told me that Mr. Henry Stephens of Finchley, who was a fellow student in medicine with Keats, and lived in the same rooms with him for a time, recollected an earlier first line. Keats is said to have written in some rough draft of his intended opening

A thing of beauty is a constant joy :

Stephens, on hearing this, pronounced it 'a fine line, but wanting something.' Keats pondered it over, and at length broke out with an inspired 'I have it,' and set down the household word that now stands at the head of the poem.

13 Instead of line 13 there were originally three lines in the manuscript :

From our dark Spirits, and before us dances
Like glitter on the points of Arthur's Lances.

Of these bright powers are the Sun, and Moon . . .

An endless fountain of immortal drink,
Pouring unto us from the heaven's brink.

Nor do we merely feel these essences
For one short hour; no, even as the trees
That whisper round a temple become soon
Dear as the temple's self, so does the moon,
The passion poesy, glories infinite,
Haunt us till they become a cheering light 30
Unto our souls, and bound to us so fast,
That, whether there be shine, or gloom o'ercast,
They always must be with us, or we die.

Therefore, 'tis with full happiness that I
Will trace the story of Endymion.
The very music of the name has gone
Into my being, and each pleasant scene
Is growing fresh before me as the green
Of our own vallies: so I will begin
Now while I cannot hear the city's din; 40
Now while the early budders are just new,
And run in mazes of the youngest hue
About old forests; while the willow trails
Its delicate amber; and the dairy pails
Bring home increase of milk. And, as the year
Grows lush in juicy stalks, I'll smoothly steer
My little boat, for many quiet hours,
With streams that deepen freshly into bowers.
Many and many a verse I hope to write,
Before the daisies, vermeil rimm'd and white, 50
Hide in deep herbage; and ere yet the bees
Hum about globes of clover and sweet peas,
I must be near the middle of my story.
O may no wintry season, bare and hoary,
See it half finish'd: but let Autumn bold,
With universal tinge of sober gold,
Be all about me when I make an end.
And now at once, adventuresome, I send
My herald thought into a wilderness:
There let its trumpet blow, and quickly dress 60
My uncertain path with green, that I may speed
Easily onward, thorough flowers and weed.

Upon the sides of Latmos was outspread
A mighty forest; for the moist earth fed
So plenteously all weed-hidden roots
Into o'er-hanging boughs, and precious fruits.
And it had gloomy shades, sequestered deep,
Where no man went; and if from shepherd's keep
A lamb stray'd far a-down those inmost glens,
Never again saw he the happy pens 70
Whither his brethren, bleating with content,
Over the hills at every nightfall went.
Among the shepherds, 'twas believed ever,
That not one fleecy lamb which thus did sever
From the white flock, but pass'd unworried
By angry wolf, or pard with prying head,
Until it came to some unfooted plains
Where fed the herds of Pan: aye great his gains
Who thus one lamb did lose. Paths there were many,
Winding through palmy fern, and rushes fenny, 80
And ivy banks; all leading pleasantly
To a wide lawn, whence one could only see
Stems thronging all around between the swell
Of turf and slanting branches: who could tell
The freshness of the space of heaven above,
Edg'd round with dark tree tops? through which a dove
Would often beat its wings, and often too
A little cloud would move across the blue.

Full in the middle of this pleasantness
There stood a marble altar, with a tress 90
Of flowers budded newly; and the dew
Had taken fairy phantasies to strew
Daisies upon the sacred sward last eve,
And so the dawned light in pomp receive.
For 'twas the morn: Apollo's upward fire
Made every eastern cloud a silvery pyre
Of brightness so unsullied, that therein
A melancholy spirit well might win
Oblivion, and melt out his essence fine
Into the winds: rain-scented eglantine 100
Gave temperate sweets to that well-wooing sun;
The lark was lost in him; cold springs had run
To warm their chilliest bubbles in the grass;

Man's voice was on the mountains; and the mass
Of nature's lives and wonders puls'd tenfold,
To feel this sun-rise and its glories old.

Now while the silent workings of the dawn
Were busiest, into that self-same lawn
All suddenly, with joyful cries, there sped
A troop of little children garlanded; 110
Who gathering round the altar, seem'd to pry
Earnestly round as wishing to espy
Some folk of holiday: nor had they waited
For many moments, ere their ears were sated
With a faint breath of music, which ev'n then
Fill'd out its voice, and died away again.
Within a little space again it gave
Its airy swellings, with a gentle wave,
To light-hung leaves, in smoothest echoes breaking
Through copse-clad vallies,—ere their death, o'ertaking
The surgy murmurs of the lonely sea. 121

And now, as deep into the wood as we Might mark a lynx's eye, there glimmered light
Fair faces and a rush of garments white,
Plainer and plainer showing, till at last
Into the widest alley they all past,
Making directly for the woodland altar.
O kindly muse! let not my weak tongue faulter
In telling of this goodly company,
Of their old piety, and of their glee: 130
But let a portion of ethereal dew
Fall on my head, and presently unmew
My soul; that I may dare, in wayfaring,
To stammer where old Chaucer us'd to sing.

Leading the way, young damsels danced along,
Bearing the burden of a shepherd song;
Each having a white wicker over brimm'd
With April's tender younglings: next, well trimm'd,
A crowd of shepherds with as sunburnt looks
As may be read of in Arcadian books; 140
Such as sat listening round Apollo's pipe,
When the great deity, for earth too ripe,

Let his divinity o'erflowing die
In music, through the vales of Thessaly :
Some idly trail'd their sheep-hooks on the ground,
And some kept up a shrilly mellow sound
With ebon-tipped flutes: close after these,
Now coming from beneath the forest trees,
A venerable priest full soberly,
Begirt with ministring looks : alway his eye 150
Stedfast upon the matted turf he kept,
And after him his sacred vestments swept.
From his right hand there swung a vase, milk-white,
Of mingled wine, out-sparkling generous light ;
And in his left he held a basket full
Of all sweet herbs that searching eye could cull :
Wild thyme, and valley-lillies whiter still
Than Leda's love, and cresses from the rill.
His aged head, crowned with beechen wreath,
Seem'd like a poll of ivy in the teeth 160
Of winter hoar. Then came another crowd
Of shepherds, lifting in due time aloud
Their share of the ditty. After them appear'd,
Up-followed by a multitude that rear'd
Their voices to the clouds, a fair wrought car,
Easily rolling so as scarce to mar
The freedom of three steeds of dapple brown :
Who stood therein did seem of great renown
Among the throng. His youth was fully blown,
Showing like Ganymede to manhood grown ; 170
And, for those simple times, his garments were
A chieftain king's: beneath his breast, half bare,
Was hung a silver bugle, and between
His nervy knees there lay a boar-spear keen.
A smile was on his countenance ; he seem'd,
To common lookers on, like one who dream'd
Of idleness in groves Elysian :
But there were some who feelingly could scan
A lurking trouble in his nether lip,
And see that oftentimes the reins would slip 180
Through his forgotten hands : then would they sigh,
And think of yellow leaves, of owlets' cry,

153 From his right hand there swung a milk-white vase
Of mingled wines, outsparkling like the Stars—MS.

Of logs piled solemnly.—Ah, well-a-day,
Why should our young Endymion pine away :

Soon the assembly, in a circle rang'd,
Stood silent round the shrine : each look was chang'd
To sudden veneration : women meek
Beckon'd their sons to silence ; while each cheek
Of virgin bloom paled gently for slight fear.
Endymion too, without a forest peer, 190
Stood, wan, and pale, and with an awed face,
Among his brothers of the mountain chace.
In midst of all, the venerable priest
Eyed them with joy from greatest to the least,
And, after lifting up his aged hands,
Thus spake he : 'Men of Latmos ! shepherd bands !
Whose care it is to guard a thousand flocks :
Whether descended from beneath the rocks
That overtop your mountains ; whether come
From vallies where the pipe is never dumb ; 200
Or from your swelling downs, where sweet air stirs
Blue hare-bells lightly, and where prickly furze
Buds lavish gold ; or ye, whose precious charge
Nibble their fill at ocean's very marge,
Whose mellow reeds are touch'd with sounds forlorn
By the dim echoes of old Triton's horn :
Mothers and wives ! who day by day prepare
The scrip, with needments, for the mountain air ;
And all ye gentle girls who foster up
Udderless lambs, and in a little cup 210
Will put choice honey for a favoured youth :
Yea, every one attend ! for in good truth
Our vows are wanting to our great god Pan.
Are not our lowing heifers sleeker than
Night-swollen mushrooms ? Are not our wide plains
Speckled with countless fleeces ? Have not rains
Green'd over April's lap ? No howling sad
Sickens our fearful ewes ; and we have had Great bounty from Endymion our lord.
The earth is glad : the merry lark has pour'd 220
His early song against yon breezy sky,
That spreads so clear o'er our solemnity.'

Thus ending, on the shrine he heap'd a spire

Of teeming sweets, enkindling sacred fire ;
 Anon he stain'd the thick and spongy sod
 With wine, in honour of the shepherd-god.
 Now while the earth was drinking it, and while
 Bay leaves were crackling in the fragrant pile,
 And gummy frankincense was sparkling bright
 'Neath smothering parsley, and a hazy light 230
 Spread greyly eastward, thus a chorus sang :

"O THOU, whose mighty palace roof doth hang
 From jagged trunks, and overshadoweth
 Eternal whispers, glooms, the birth, life, death
 Of unseen flowers in heavy peacefulness ;
 Who lov'st to see the hamadryads dress
 Their ruffled locks where meeting hazels darken ;
 And through whole solemn hours dost sit, and hearken
 The dreary melody of bedded reeds—
 In desolate places, where dank moisture breeds 240
 The pipy hemlock to strange overgrowth ;
 Bethinking thee, how melancholy loth
 Thou wast to lose fair Syrinx—do thou now,
 By thy love's milky brow !
 By all the trembling mazes that she ran,
 Hear us, great Pan !

"O thou, for whose soul-soothing quiet, turtles
 Passion their voices cooingly 'mong myrtles,
 What time thou wanderest at eventide
 Through sunny meadows, that outskirt the side 250
 Of thine enmossed realms : O thou, to whom
 Broad leaved fig trees even now foredoom
 Their ripen'd fruitage ; yellow girted bees
 Their golden honeycombs ; our village leas
 Their fairest blossom'd beans and popped corn ;
 The chuckling linnet its five young unborn,
 To sing for thee ; low creeping strawberries
 Their summer coolness ; pent up butterflies
 Their freckled wings ; yea, the fresh budding year
 All its completions—be quickly near, 260
 By every wind that nods the mountain pine,
 O forester divine !

"Thou, to whom every faun and satyr flies

For willing service; whether to surprise
 The squatf'd hare while in half sleeping fit;
 Or upward ragged precipices flit
 To save poor lambkins from the eagle's maw;
 Or by mysterious enticement draw
 Bewildered shepherds to their path again;
 Or to tread breathless round the frothy main, 270
 And gather up all fancifullest shells
 For thee to tumble into Naiads' cells,
 And, being hidden, laugh at their out-peeping;
 Or to delight thee with fantastic leaping,
 The while they pelt each other on the crown
 With silvery oak apples, and fir cones brown—
 By all the echoes that about thee ring,
 Hear us, O satyr king!

"O Harkener to the loud clapping shears
 While ever and anon to his shorn peers 280
 A ram goes bleating: Winder of the horn,
 When snouted wild-boars routing tender corn
 Anger our huntsmen: Breather round our farms,
 To keep off mildews, and all weather harms:
 Strange ministrant of undescribed sounds,
 That come a swooning over hollow grounds,
 And wither drearily on barren moors:
 Dread opener of the mysterious doors
 Leading to universal knowledge—see,
 Great son of Dryope, 290
 The many that are come to pay their vows
 With leaves about their brows!

"Be still the unimaginable lodge
 For solitary thinkings; such as dodge
 Conception to the very bourne of heaven,
 Then leave the naked brain: be still the leaven,
 That spreading in this dull and clodded earth
 Gives it a touch ethereal—a new birth:
 Be still a symbol of immensity;
 A firmament reflected in a sea; 300
 An element filling the space between;
 An unknown—but no more: we humbly screen

283 Huntsmen MS. : huntsman 1818.

293 The quotation marks here are supplied from the corrected copy.

With uplift hands our foreheads, lowly bending,
 And giving out a shout most heaven rending,
 Conjure thee to receive our humble Pæan,
 Upon thy Mount Lycean!"

Even while they brought the burden to a close,
 A shout from the whole multitude arose,
 That lingered in the air like dying rolls
 Of abrupt thunder, when Ionian shoals 310
 Of dolphins bob their noses through the brine.
 Meantime, on shady levels, mossy fine,
 Young companies nimbly began dancing
 To the swift treble pipe, and humming string.
 Aye, those fair living forms swam heavenly
 To tunes forgotten—out of memory:
 Fair creatures! whose young children's children bred
 Thermopylæ its heroes—not yet dead,
 But in old marbles ever beautiful.
 High genitors, unconscious did they cull 320
 Time's sweet first-fruits—they danc'd to weariness,
 And then in quiet circles did they press
 The hillock turf, and caught the latter end
 Of some strange history, potent to send
 A young mind from its bodily tenement.
 Or they might watch the quoit-pitchers, intent
 On either side; pitying the sad death
 Of Hyacinthus, when the cruel breath
 Of Zephyr slew him,—Zephyr penitent,
 Who now, ere Phœbus mounts the firmament, 330
 Fondles the flower amid the sobbing rain.
 The archers too, upon a wider plain,
 Beside the feathery whizzing of the shaft,
 And the dull twanging bowstring, and the raft
 Branch down sweeping from a tall ash top,
 Call'd up a thousand thoughts to envelope
 Those who would watch. Perhaps, the trembling knee
 And frantic gape of lonely Niobe,
 Poor, lonely Niobe! when her lovely young
 Were dead and gone, and her caressing tongue 340
 Lay a lost thing upon her paly lip,
 And very, very deadliness did nip
 Her motherly cheeks. Arous'd from this sad mood

By one, who at a distance loud halloo'd,
 Uplifting his strong bow into the air,
 Many might after brighter visions stare :
 After the Argonauts, in blind amaze
 Tossing about on Neptune's restless ways,
 Until, from the horizon's vaulted side,
 There shot a golden splendour far and wide, 350
 Spangling those million poutings of the brine
 With quivering ore: 'twas even an awful shine
 From the exaltation of Apollo's bow ;
 A heavenly beacon in their dreary woe.
 Who thus were ripe for high contemplating.
 Might turn their steps towards the sober ring
 Where sat Endymion and the aged priest
 'Mong shepherds gone in eld, whose looks increas'd
 The silvery setting of their mortal star.
 There they discours'd upon the fragile bar 360
 That keeps us from our homes ethereal ;
 And what our duties there: to nightly call
 Vesper, the beauty-crest of summer weather ;
 To summon all the downiest clouds together
 For the sun's purple couch ; to emulate
 In ministring the potent rule of fate
 With speed of fire-tail'd exhalations ;
 To tint her pallid cheek with bloom, who cons
 Sweet poesy by moonlight: besides these,
 A world of other unguess'd offices. 370
 Anon they wander'd, by divine converse,
 Into Elysium ; vieing to rehearse
 Each one his own anticipated bliss.
 One felt heart-certain that he could not miss
 His quick gone love, among fair blossom'd boughs,
 Where every zephyr-sigh pouts, and endows
 Her lips with music for the welcoming.
 Another wish'd, mid that eternal spring,
 To meet his rosy child, with feathery sails,
 Sweeping, eye-earnestly, through almond vales: 380
 Who, suddenly, should stoop through the smooth wind,
 And with the balmiest leaves his temples bind ;
 And, ever after, through those regions be

368 pretty cheek, with pallid and waning as marginal alternatives.
 MS.

His messenger, his little Mercury.
 Some were athirst in soul to see again
 Their fellow huntsmen o'er the wide champaign
 In times long past; to sit with them, and talk
 Of all the chances in their earthly walk;
 Comparing, joyfully, their plenteous stores
 Of happiness, to when upon the moors, 390
 Benighted, close they huddled from the *cold,
 And shar'd their famish'd scrips. Thus all out-told
 Their fond imaginations,—saving him
 Whose eyelids curtain'd up their jewels dim,
 Endymion: yet hourly had he striven
 To hide the cankering venom, that had riven
 His fainting recollections. Now indeed
 His senses had swoon'd off: he did not heed
 The sudden silence, or the whispers low,
 Or the old eyes dissolving at his woe, 400
 Or anxious calls, or close of trembling palms,
 Or maiden's sigh, that grief itself embalms:
 But in the self-same fixed trance he kept,
 Like one who on the earth had never slept.
 Aye, even as dead-still as a marble man,
 Frozen in that old tale Arabian.

Who whispers him so pantingly and close?
 Peona, his sweet sister: of all those,
 His friends, the dearest. Hushing signs she made,
 And breath'd a sister's sorrow to persuade 410
 A yielding up, a cradling on her care.
 Her eloquence did breathe away the curse:

406 Frozen] Sitting MS., cancelled.

407-12 Now happily, there sitting on the grass
 Was fair Peona, a most tender Lass,
 And his sweet sister; who, uprising, went
 With stifled sobs, and o'er his shoulder leant.
 Putting her trembling hand against his cheek
 She said: 'My dear Endymion, let us seek
 A pleasant bower where thou may'st rest apart,
 And ease in slumber thine afflicted heart:
 Come my own dearest brother: these our friends
 Will joy in thinking thou dost sleep where bends
 Our freshening River through yon birchen grove:
 Do come now!' Could he gainsay her who strove,
 So soothingly, to breathe away a Curse? MS.

She led him, like some midnight spirit nurse
 Of happy changes in emphatic dreams,
 Along a path between two little streams,—
 Guarding his forehead, with her round elbow,
 From low-grown branches, and his footsteps slow
 From stumbling over stumps and hillocks small;
 Until they came to where these streamlets fall,
 With mingled bubbings and a gentle rush, 420
 Into a river, clear, brimful, and flush
 With crystal mocking of the trees and sky.
 A little shallop, floating there hard by,
 Pointed its beak over the fringed bank;
 And soon it lightly dipt, and rose, and sank,
 And dipt again, with the young couple's weight,—
 Peona guiding, through the water straight,
 Towards a bowery island opposite;
 Which gaining presently, she steered light
 Into a shady, fresh, and ripply cove, 430
 Where nested was an harbour, overwove
 By many a summer's silent fingering;
 To whose cool bosom she was used to bring
 Her playmates, with their needle broidery,
 And minstrel memories of times gone by.

So she was gently glad to see him laid
 Under her favourite bower's quiet shade,
 On her own couch, new made of flower leaves,
 Dried carefully on the cooler side of sheaves
 When last the sun his autumn tresses shook, 440

438-42 On her own couch, new made of flower leaves,
 Dry'd carefully on the cooler side of sheaves
 When last the Harvesters rich armfuls took.
 She tied a little bucket to a Crook,
 Ran some swift paces to a dark wells side,
 And in a sighing-time return'd, supplied
 With spar cold water; in which she did squeeze
 A snowy napkin, and upon her knees
 Began to cherish her poor Brother's face;
 Damping refreshfully his forehead's space,
 His eyes, his Lips: then in a cupped shell
 She brought him ruby wine; then let him smell,
 Time after time, a precious amulet,
 Which seldom took she from its cabinet.
 Thus was he quieted to slumbrous rest: MS.

And the tann'd harvesters rich armfuls took.
 Soon was he quieted to slumbrous rest :
 But, ere it crept upon him, he had prest
 Peona's busy hand against his lips,
 And still, a sleeping, held her finger-tips
 In tender pressure. And as a willow keeps
 A patient watch over the stream that creeps
 Windingly by it, so the quiet maid
 Held her in peace: so that a whispering blade
 Of grass, a wailful gnat, a bee bustling 450
 Down in the blue-bells, or a wren light rustling
 Among sere leaves and twigs, might all be heard.

O magic sleep! O comfortable bird,
 That broodest o'er the troubled sea of the mind
 Till it is hush'd and smooth! O unconfin'd
 Restraint! imprisoned liberty! great key
 To golden palaces, strange minstrelsy,
 Fountains grotesque, new trees, bespangled caves,
 Echoing grottos, full of tumbling waves
 And moonlight; aye, to all the mazy world 460
 Of silvery enchantment!—who, upfurl'd
 Beneath thy drowsy wing a triple hour,
 But renovates and lives?—Thus, in the bower,
 Endymion was calm'd to life again.
 Opening his eyelids with a healthier brain,
 He said: "I feel this thine endearing love
 All through my bosom: thou art as a dove
 Trembling its closed eyes and sleeked wings
 About me; and the pearliest dew not brings
 Such morning incense from the fields of May, 470
 As do those brighter drops that twinkling stray
 From those kind eyes,—the very home and haunt
 Of sisterly affection. Can I want

- 466 A cheerfuller resignation, and a smile
 For his fair Sister flowing like the Nile
 Through all the channels of her piety,
 He said: 'Dear Maid, may I this moment die,
 If I feel not this thine endearing Love . . . MS.
 470 From woodbine hedges such a morning feel,
 As do those brighter drops, that twinkling steal
 Through those pressed lashes, from the blossom'd plant . . . MS.

Aught else, aught nearer heaven, than such tears?
 Yet dry them up, in bidding hence all fears
 That, any longer, I will pass my days
 Alone and sad. No, I will once more raise
 My voice upon the mountain-heights; once more
 Make my horn parley from their foreheads hoar:
 Again my trooping hounds their tongues shall loll 480
 Around the breathed boar: again I'll poll
 The fair-grown yew tree, for a chosen bow:
 And, when the pleasant sun is getting low,
 Again I'll linger in a sloping mead
 To hear the speckled thrushes, and see feed
 Our idle sheep. So be thou cheered sweet,
 And, if thy lute is here, softly intreat
 My soul to keep in its resolved course."

Hereat Peona, in their silver source,
 Shut her pure sorrow drops with glad exclaim, 490
 And took a lute, from which there pulsing came
 A lively prelude, fashioning the way
 In which her voice should wander. 'Twas a lay
 More subtle cadenced, more forest wild
 Than Dryope's lone lulling of her child;
 And nothing since has floated in the air
 So mournful strange. Surely some influence rare
 Went, spiritual, through the damsel's hand;
 For still, with Delphic emphasis, she spann'd
 The quick invisible strings, even though she saw 500
 Endymion's spirit melt away and thaw
 Before the deep intoxication.
 But soon she came, with sudden burst, upon
 Her self-possession—swung the lute aside,
 And earnestly said: "Brother, 'tis vain to hide
 That thou dost know of things mysterious,
 Immortal, starry; such alone could thus
 Weigh down thy nature. Hast thou sinn'd in aught
 Offensive to the heavenly powers? Caught

494-5 More forest-wild, more subtle-cadenced
 Than can be told by mortal: even wed
 The fainting tenors of a thousand shells
 To a million whisperings of Lilly bells;
 And mingle too the Nightingale's complain
 Caught in its hundredth echo; 'twould be vain: . . . MS.

A Paphian dove upon a message sent? 510
 Thy deathful bow against some deer-herd bent
 Sacred to Dian? Haply, thou hast seen
 Her naked limbs among the alders green;
 And that, alas! is death. No, I can trace
 Something more high perplexing in thy face!"

Endymion look'd at her, and press'd her hand,
 And said, "Art thou so pale, who wast so bland
 And merry in our meadows? How is this?
 Tell me thine ailment: tell me all amiss!—
 Ah! thou hast been unhappy at the change 520
 Wrought suddenly in me. What indeed more strange?
 Or more complete to overwhelm surmise?
 Ambition is so sluggish: 'tis no prize,
 That toiling years would put within my grasp,
 That I have sighed for: with so deadly gasp
 No man e'er panted for a mortal love.
 So all have set my heavier grief above
 These things which happen. Rightly have they done:
 I, who still saw the horizontal sun
 Heave his broad shoulder o'er the edge of the world,
 Out-facing Lucifer, and then had hurl'd 531
 My spear aloft, as signal for the chace—
 I, who, for very sport of heart, would race
 With my own steed from Araby; pluck down
 A vulture from his towery perching; frown
 A lion into growling, loth retire—
 To lose, at once, all my toil-breeding fire,
 And sink thus low! but I will ease my breast
 Of secret grief, here in this bowery nest.

"This river does not see the naked sky, 540
 Till it begins to progress silverly
 Around the western border of the wood,
 Whence, from a certain spot, its winding flood
 Seems at the distance like a crescent moon:
 And in that nook, the very pride of June,
 Had I been used to pass my weary eyes;
 The rather for the sun unwilling leaves
 So dear a picture of his sovereign power,
 And I could witness his most kingly hour,

When he doth tighten up the golden reins, 550
And paces leisurely down amber plains
His snorting four. Now when his chariot last
Its beams against the zodiac-lion cast,
There blossom'd suddenly a magic bed
Of sacred ditamy, and poppies red:
At which I wondered greatly, knowing well
That but one night had wrought this flowery spell;
And, sitting down close by, began to muse
What it might mean. Perhaps, thought I, Morpheus,
In passing here, his owlet pinions shook; 560
Or, it may be, ere matron Night uptook
Her ebon urn, young Mercury, by stealth,
Had dipt his rod in it: such garland wealth
Came not by common growth. Thus on I thought,
Until my head was dizzy and distraught.
Moreover, through the dancing poppies stole
A breeze, most softly lulling to my soul;
And shaping visions all about my sight
Of colours, wings, and bursts of spangly light;
The which became more strange, and strange, and dim,
And then were gulph'd in a tumultuous swim: 571
And then I fell asleep. Ah, can I tell
The enchantment that afterwards befel?
Yet it was but a dream: yet such a dream
That never tongue, although it overteem
With mellow utterance, like a cavern spring,
Could figure out and to conception bring
All I beheld and felt. Methought I lay
Watching the zenith, where the milky way
Among the stars in virgin splendour pours; 580
And travelling my eye, until the doors
Of heaven appear'd to open for my flight,
I became loth and fearful to alight
From such high soaring by a downward glance:
So kept me stedfast in that airy trance,
Spreading imaginary pinions wide.
When, presently, the stars began to glide,
And faint away, before my eager view:
At which I sigh'd that I could not pursue,

And dropt my vision to the horizon's verge ; 590
 And lo ! from opening clouds, I saw emerge
 The loveliest moon, that ever silver'd o'er
 A shell for Neptune's goblet : she did soar
 So passionately bright, my dazzled soul
 Commingling with her argent spheres did roll
 Through clear and cloudy, even when she went
 At last into a dark and vapoury tent—
 Whereat, methought, the lidless-eyed train
 Of planets all were in the blue again.
 To commune with those orbs, once more I rais'd 600
 My sight right upward : but it was quite dazed
 By a bright something, sailing down apace,
 Making me quickly veil my eyes and face :
 Again I look'd, and, O ye deities,
 Who from Olympus watch our destinies !
 Whence that completed form of all completeness ?
 Whence came that high perfection of all sweetness ?
 Speak, stubborn earth, and tell me where, O where Hast thou a symbol of her golden hair ?
 Not oat-sheaves drooping in the western sun ; 610
 Not—thy soft hand, fair sister ! let me shun
 Such follying before thee—yet she had,
 Indeed, locks bright enough to make me mad ;
 And they were simply gordian'd up and braided,
 Leaving, in naked comeliness, unshaded,
 Her pearl round ears, white neck, and orb'd brow ;
 The which were blended in, I know not how,
 With such a paradise of lips and eyes,
 Blush-tinted cheeks, half smiles, and faintest sighs,
 That, when I think thereon, my spirit clings 620
 And plays about its fancy, till the stings
 Of human neighbourhood envenom all.
 Unto what awful power shall I call ?
 To what high fane ?—Ah ! see her hovering feet,
 More bluely vein'd, more soft, more whitely sweet
 Than those of sea-born Venus, when she rose
 From out her cradle shell. The wind out-blows
 Her scarf into a fluttering pavillion ;
 'Tis blue, and over-spangled with a million
 Of little eyes, as though thou wert to shed, 630
 Over the darkest, lushest blue-bell bed,

Handfuls of daisies."—"Endymion, how strange!
 Dream within dream!"—"She took an airy range,
 And then, towards me, like a very maid,
 Came blushing, waning, willing, and afraid,
 And press'd me by the hand: Ah! 'twas too much;
 Methought I fainted at the charmed touch,
 Yet held my recollection, even as one
 Who dives three fathoms where the waters run,
 Gurgling in beds of coral: for anon, 640
 I felt upmounted in that region
 Where falling stars dart their artillery forth,
 And eagles struggle with the buffeting north
 That ballances the heavy meteor-stone;—
 Felt too, I was not fearful, nor alone,
 But lapp'd and lull'd along the dangerous sky.
 Soon, as it seem'd, we left our journeying high,
 And straightway into frightful eddies swoop'd;
 Such as aye muster where grey time has scoop'd
 Huge dens and caverns in a mountain's side: 650
 There hollow sounds arous'd me, and I sigh'd.
 To faint once more by looking on my bliss—
 I was distracted; madly did I kiss
 The wooing arms which held me, and did give
 My eyes at once to death: but 'twas to live,
 To take in draughts of life from the gold fount
 Of kind and passionate looks; to count, and count
 The moments, by some greedy help that seem'd
 A second self, that each might be redeem'd
 And plunder'd of its load of blessedness. 660
 Ah, desperate mortal! I e'en dar'd to press
 Her very cheek against my crowned lip,
 And, at that moment, felt my body dip
 Into a warmer air: a moment more,
 Our feet were soft in flowers. There was store
 Of newest joys upon that alp. Sometimes
 A scent of violets, and blossoming limes,
 Loiter'd around us; then of honey cells,
 Made delicate from all white-flower bells;
 And once, above the edges of our nest,
 An arch face peep'd,—an Oread as I guess'd. 670

"Why did I dream that sleep o'er-power'd me
In midst of all this heaven? Why not see,
Far off, the shadows of his pinions dark,
And stare them from me? But no, like a spark
That needs must die, although its little beam
Reflects upon a diamond, my sweet dream
Fell into nothing—into stupid sleep.
And so it was, until a gentle creep,
A careful moving caught my waking ears, 680
And up I started: Ah! my sighs, my tears,
My clenched hands;—for lo! the poppies hung
Dew-dabbled on their stalks, the ouzel sung
A heavy ditty, and the sullen day
Had chidden herald Hesperus away,
With leaden looks: the solitary breeze
Bluster'd, and slept, and its wild self did tease
With wayward melancholy; and I thought,
Mark me, Peona! that sometimes it brought
Faint fare-thee-wells, and sigh-shrilled adieus!— 690
Away I wander'd—all the pleasant hues
Of heaven and earth had faded: deepest shades
Were deepest dungeons; heaths and sunny glades
Were full of pestilent light; our taintless rills
Seem'd sooty, and o'er-spread with upturn'd gills
Of dying fish; the vermeil rose had blown
In frightful scarlet, and its thorns out-grown
Like spiked aloe. If an innocent bird
Before my heedless footsteps stirr'd, and stirr'd
In little journeys, I beheld in it 700
A disguis'd demon, missioned to knit
My soul with under darkness; to entice
My stumblings down some monstrous precipice:
Therefore I eager followed, and did curse
The disappointment. Time, that aged nurse,
Rock'd me to patience. Now, thank gentle heaven!
These things, with all their comfortings, are given
To my down-sunken hours, and with thee,
Sweet sister, help to stem the ebbing sea
Of weary life."

Thus ended he, and both 710
Sat silent: for the maid was very loth
To answer; feeling well that breathed words

Would all be lost, unheard, and vain as swords
 Against the enchased crocodile, or leaps
 Of grasshoppers against the sun. She weeps,
 And wonders; struggles to devise some blame;
 To put on such a look as would say, Shame
On this poor weakness! but, for all her strife,
 She could as soon have crush'd away the life 719
 From a sick dove. At length, to break the pause,
 She said with trembling chance: "Is this the cause?
 This all? Yet it is strange, and sad, alas!
 That one who through this middle earth should pass
 Most like a sojourning demi-god, and leave
 His name upon the harp-string, should achieve
 No higher bard than simple maidenhood,
 Singing alone, and fearfully,—how the blood
 Left his young cheek; and how he used to stray
 He knew not where; and how he would say, nay,
 If any said 'twas love: and yet 'twas love; 730
 What could it be but love? How a ring-dove
 Let fall a sprig of yew tree in his path;
 And how he died: and then, that love doth scathe,
 The gentle heart, as northern blasts do roses;
 And then the ballad of his sad life closes
 With sighs, and an alas!—Endymion!
 Be rather in the trumpet's mouth,—anon
 Among the winds at large—that all may hearken!
 Although, before the crystal heavens darken,
 I watch and dote upon the silver lakes 740
 Pictur'd in western cloudiness, that takes
 The semblance of gold rocks and bright gold sands,
 Islands, and creeks, and amber-fretted strands
 With horses prancing o'er them, palaces
 And towers of amethyst,—would I so tease
 My pleasant days, because I could not mount
 Into those regions? The Morphean fount
 Of that fine element that visions, dreams,
 And fitful whims of sleep are made of, streams
 Into its airy channels with so subtle, 750
 So thin a breathing, not the spider's shuttle,
 Circled a million times within the space

Of a swallow's nest-door, could delay a trace,
 A tinting of its quality: how light
 Must dreams themselves be; seeing they're more slight
 Than the mere nothing that engenders them!
 Then wherefore sully the entrusted gem
 Of high and noble life with thoughts so sick?
 Why pierce high-fronted honour to the quick
 For nothing but a dream?" Hereat the youth 760
 Look'd up: a conflicting of shame and ruth
 Was in his plaited brow: yet, his eyelids
 Widened a little, as when Zephyr bids
 A little breeze to creep between the fans
 Of careless butterflies: amid his pains
 He seem'd to taste a drop of manna-dew,
 Full palatable; and a colour grew
 Upon his cheek, while thus he lifeful spake.

"Peona! ever have I long'd to slake
 My thirst for the world's praises: nothing base, 770
 No merely slumberous phantasm, could unlace
 The stubborn canvas for my voyage prepar'd—
 Though now 'tis tatter'd; leaving my bark bar'd
 And sullenly drifting: yet my higher hope
 Is of too wide, too rainbow-large a scope,
 To fret at myriads of earthly wrecks.
 Wherein lies happiness? In that which beck's
 Our ready minds to fellowship divine,
 A fellowship with essence; till we shine,
 Full alchemiz'd, and free of space. Behold 780
 The clear religion of heaven! Fold
 A rose leaf round thy finger's taperness,
 And soothe thy lips: hith, when the airy stress
 Of music's kiss impregnates the free winds,
 And with a sympathetic touch unbinds
 Æolian magic from their lucid wombs:
 Then old songs waken from enclouded tombs;
 Old ditties sigh above their father's grave;
 Ghosts of melodious prophecyings rave
 Round every spot where trod Apollo's foot; 790
 Bronze clarions awake, and faintly bruit,
 Where long ago a giant battle was;

And, from the turf, a lullaby doth pass
In every place where infant Orpheus slept.
Feel we these things?—that moment have we stept
Into a sort of oneness, and our state
Is like a floating spirit's. But there are Richer entanglements, enthrallments far
More self-destroying, leading, by degrees,
To the chief intensity: the crown of these 800
Is made of love and friendship, and sits high
Upon the forehead of humanity.
All its more ponderous and bulky worth
Is friendship, whence there ever issues forth
A steady splendour; but at the tip-top,
There hangs by unseen film, an orb'd drop
Of light, and that is love: its influence,
Thrown in our eyes, genders a novel sense,
At which we start and fret; till in the end,
Melting into its radiance, we blend, 810
Mingle, and so become a part of it,—
Nor with aught else can our souls interknit
So wingedly: when we combine therewith,
Life's self is nourish'd by its proper pith,
And we are nurtured like a pelican brood.
Aye, so delicious is the unsating food,
That men, who might have tower'd in the van
Of all the congregated world, to fan
And winnow from the coming step of time
All chaff of custom, wipe away all slime 820
Left by men-slugs and human serpentry,
Have been content to let occasion die,
Whilst they did sleep in love's elysium.
And, truly, I would rather be struck dumb,
Than speak against this ardent listlessness:
For I have ever thought that it might bless
The world with benefits unknowingly;
As does the nightingale, upperched high,
And cloister'd among cool and bunched leaves—
She sings but to her love, nor e'er conceives 830
How tiptoe Night holds back her dark-grey hood.
Just so may love, although 'tis understood
The mere commingling of passionate breath,
Produce more than our searching witnesseth:

What I know not: but who, of men, can tell
That flowers would bloom, or that green fruit would swell
To melting pulp, that fish would have bright mail,
The earth its dower of river, wood, and vale,
The meadows runnels, runnels pebble-stones,
The seed its harvest, or the lute its tones, 840
Tones ravishment, or ravishment its sweet
If human souls did never kiss and greet?

“Now, if this earthly love has power to make
Men’s being mortal, immortal; to shake
Ambition from their memories, and brim
Their measure of content: what merest whim,
Seems all this poor endeavour after fame,
To one, who keeps within his stedfast aim
A love immortal, an immortal too.
Look not so wilder’d; for these things are true, 850
And never can be born of atomies
That buzz about our slumbers, like brain-flies,
Leaving us fancy-sick. No, no, I’m sure,
My restless spirit never could endure
To brood so long upon one luxury,
Unless it did, though fearfully, espy
A hope beyond the shadow of a dream.
My sayings will the less obscured seem,
When I have told thee how my waking sight
Has made me scruple whether that same night 860
Was pass’d in dreaming. Hearken, sweet Peona!
Beyond the matron-temple of Latona,
Which we should see but for these darkening boughs,
Lies a deep hollow, from whose ragged brows
Bushes and trees do lean all round athwart
And meet so nearly, that with wings outraught,
And spreaded tail, a vulture could not glide
Past them, but he must brush on every side.
Some moulder’d steps lead into this cool cell,
Far as the slabbed margin of a well, 870
Whose patient level peeps its crystal eye
Right upward, through the bushes, to the sky.
Oft have I brought thee flowers, on their stalks set
Like vestal primroses, but dark velvet
Edges them round, and they have golden pits:

'Twas there I got them, from the gaps and slits
In a mossy stone, that sometimes was my seat,
When all above was faint with mid-day heat.
And there in strife no burning thoughts to heed,
I'd bubble up the water through a reed; 880
So reaching back to boy-hood: make me ships
Of moulted feathers, touchwood, alder chips,
With leaves stuck in them; and the Neptune be
Of their petty ocean. Oftener, heavily,
When love-lorn hours had left me less a child,
I sat contemplating the figures wild
Of o'er-head clouds melting the mirror through.
Upon a day, while thus I watch'd, by flew
A cloudy Cupid, with his bow and quiver;
So plainly character'd, no breeze would shiver 890
The happy chance: so happy, I was fain
To follow it upon the open plain,
And, therefore, was just going; when, behold!
A wonder, fair as any I have told—
The same bright face I tasted in my sleep.
Smiling in the clear well. My heart did leap
Through the cool depth.—It moved as if to flee—
I started up, when lo! refreshfully,
There came upon my face in plenteous showers 899
Dew-drops, and dewy buds, and leaves, and flowers,
Wrapping all objects from my smothered sight,
Bathing my spirit in a new delight.
Aye, such a breathless honey-feel of bliss
Alone preserved me from the drear abyss
Of death, for the fair form had gone again.
Pleasure is oft a visitant; but pain
Clings cruelly to us, like the gnawing sloth
On the deer's tender haunches: late, and loth,
'Tis scar'd away by slow returning pleasure.
How sickening, how dark the dreadful leisure 910
Of weary days, made deeper exquisite,
By a fore-knowledge of unslumbrous night!
Like sorrow came upon me, heavier still,
Than when I wander'd from the poppy hill:
And a whole age of lingering moments crept
Sluggishly by, ere more contentment swept Away at once the deadly yellow spleen.

Yes, thrice have I this fair enchantment seen ;
 Once more been tortured with renewed life.
 When last the wintry gusts gave over strife 920
 With the conquering sun of spring, and left the skies
 Warm and serene, but yet with moistened eyes
 In pity of the shatter'd infant buds,—
 That time thou didst adorn, with amber studs,
 My hunting cap, because I laugh'd and smil'd,
 Chatted with thee, and many days exil'd
 All torment from my breast;—'twas even then,
 Straying about, yet, coop'd up in the den
 Of helpless discontent,—hurling my lance
 From place to place, and following at chance, 930
 At last, by hap, through some young trees it struck,
 And, plashing among bedded pebbles, stuck
 In the middle of a brook,—whose silver ramble
 Down twenty little falls, through reeds and bramble,
 Tracing along, it brought me to a cave,
 Whence it ran brightly forth, and white did lave
 The nether sides of mossy stones and rock,—
 'Mong which it gurgled blythe adieus, to mock
 Its own sweet grief at parting. Overhead, 939
 Hung a lush screen of drooping weeds, and spread
 Thick, as to curtain up some wood-nymph's home.
 "Ah! impious mortal, whither do I roam?"
 Said I, low voic'd: "Ah, whither! 'Tis the grot
 "Of Proserpine, when Hell, obscure and hot,
 "Doth her resign; and where her tender hands
 "She dabbles, on the cool and sluicy sands:
 "Or 'tis the cell of Echo, where she sits,
 "And babbles thorough silence, till her wits
 "Are gone in tender madness, and anon,
 "Faints into sleep, with many a dying tone 950
 "Of sadness. O that she would take my vows,
 "And breathe them sighingly among the boughs,
 "To sue her gentle ears for whose fair head,
 "Daily, I pluck sweet flowerets from their bed,
 "And weave them dyingly—send honey-whispers
 "Round every leaf, that all those gentle lispers
 "May sigh my love unto her pitying!

940 serene MS.: scene 1818: screen 1818 corrected.

"O charitable Echo! hear, and sing
"This ditty to her!—tell her"—so I stay'd
My foolish tongue, and listening, half afraid, 960
Stood stupefied with my own empty folly,
And blushing for the freaks of melancholy.
Salt tears were coming, when I heard my name
Most fondly lipp'd, and then these accents came:
"Endymion! the cave is secreter
"Than the isle of Delos. Echo hence shall stir
"No sighs but sigh-warm kisses, or light noise
"Of thy combing hand, the while it travelling cloyes
"And trembles through my labyrinthine hair."
At that oppress'd I hurried in.—Ah! where 970
Are those swift moments? Whither are they fled?
I'll smile no more, Peona; nor will wed
Sorrow the way to death; but patiently
Bear up against it: so farewell, sad sigh;
And come instead demurest meditation,
To occupy me wholly, and to fashion
My pilgrimage for the world's dusky brink.
No more will I count over, link by link,
My chain of grief: no longer strive to find
A half-forgetfulness in mountain wind 980
Blustering about my ears: aye, thou shalt see,
Dearest of sisters, what my life shall be;
What a calm round of hours shall make my days.
There is a paly flame of hope that plays
Where'er I look: but yet, I'll say 'tis naught—
And here I bid it die. Have not I caught,
Already, a more healthy countenance?
By this the sun is setting; we may chance
Meet some of our near-dwellers with my car."

This said, he rose, faint-smiling like a star 990
Through autumn mists, and took Peona's hand:
They stept into the boat, and launch'd from land.

BOOK II

O SOVEREIGN power of love! O grief! O balm!
 All records, saving thine, come cool, and calm,
 And shadowy, through the mist of passed years:
 For others, good or bad, hatred and tears
 Have become indolent; but touching thine,
 One sigh doth echo, one poor sob doth pine,
 One kiss brings honey-dew from buried days.
 The woes of Troy, towers smothering o'er their blaze,
 Stiff-holden shields, far-piercing spears, keen blades,
 Struggling, and blood, and shrieks—all dimly fades
 Into some backward corner of the brain; 11
 Yet, in our very souls, we feel amain
 The close of Troilus and Cressid sweet.
 Hence, pageant history! hence, gilded cheat!
 Swart planet in the universe of deeds!
 Wide sea, that one continuous murmur breeds
 Along the pebbled shore of memory!
 Many old rotten-timber'd boats there be
 Upon thy vaporous bosom, magnified
 To goodly vessels; many a sail of pride, 20
 And golden keel'd, is left unlaunch'd and dry.
 But wherefore this? What care, though owl did fly
 About the great Athenian admiral's mast?
 What care, though striding Alexander past
 The Indus with his Macedonian numbers?
 Though old Ulysses tortured from his slumbers
 The glutt'd Cyclops, what care?—Juliet leaning
 Amid her window-flowers,—sighing,—weaning
 Tenderly her fancy from its maiden snow,
 Doth more avail than these: the silver flow 30
 Of Hero's tears, the swoon of Imogen,

13-14 The close of Troilus and Cressida.

Hence pageant history! away proud star. Draft.

31 The reference is of course not to the story of Hero and Leander, but to the tears of Hero in Much Ado about Nothing, shed when she was falsely accused; and Imogen must, equally of course, be Shakespeare's heroine in Cymbeline, though she is not the only Imogen of fiction who has swooned. For Pastorella see Faerie Queene, Book VI, Canto ii, stanza 1 et seq.

Fair Pastorella in the bandit's den,
 Are things to brood on with more ardency
 Than the death-day of empires. Fearfully
 Must such conviction come upon his head,
 Who, thus far, discontent, has dared to tread,
 Without one muse's smile, or kind behest,
 The path of love and poesy. But rest,
 In chaffing restlessness, is yet more drear
 Than to be crush'd, in striving to uprear 40
 Love's standard on the battlements of song.
 So once more days and nights aid me along,
 Like legion'd soldiers.

Brain-sick shepherd prince,
 What promise hast thou faithful guarded since
 The day of sacrifice? Or, have new sorrows
 Come with the constant dawn upon thy morrows?
 Alas! 'tis his old grief. For many days,
 Has he been wandering in uncertain ways:
 Through wilderness, and woods of mossed oaks;
 Counting his woe-worn minutes, by the strokes 50
 Of the lone woodcutter; and listening still,
 Hour after hour, to each lush-leav'd rill.
 Now he is sitting by a shady spring,
 And elbow-deep with feverous fingering
 Stems the upbursting cold: a wild rose tree
 Pavillions him in bloom, and he doth see
 A bud which snares his fancy: lo! but now
 He plucks it, dips its stalk in the water: how!
 It swells, it buds, it flowers beneath his sight;
 And, in the middle, there is softly pight 60
 A golden butterfly; upon whose wings
 There must be surely character'd strange things,
 For with wide eye he wonders, and smiles oft.

Lightly this little herald flew aloft,
 Follow'd by glad Endymion's clasped hands:
 Onward it flies. From languor's sullen bands
 His limbs are loos'd, and eager, on he hies

38-9 The draft affords here a curious comment on the precise value of the word rest as employed on this occasion. What was originally written was To rest In chaffing discontent.

Dazzled to trace it in the sunny skies.
It seem'd he flew, the way so easy was ;
And like a new-born spirit did he pass 70
Through the green evening quiet in the sun,
O'er many a heath, through many a woodland dun,
Through buried paths, where sleepy twilight dreams
The summer time away. One track unseams
A wooded cleft, and, far away, the blue
Of ocean fades upon him ; then, anew,
He sinks adown a solitary glen,
Where there was never sound of mortal men,
Saving, perhaps, some snow-light cadences
Melting to silence, when upon the breeze 80
Some holy bark let forth an anthem sweet,
To cheer itself to Delphi. Still his feet
Went swift beneath the merry-winged guide,
Until it reach'd a splashing fountain's side
That, near a cavern's mouth, for ever pour'd
Unto the temperate air: then high it soar'd,
And, downward, suddenly began to dip,
As if, athirst with so much toil, 'twould sip
The crystal spout-head: so it did, with touch
Most delicate, as though afraid to smutch 90
Even with mealy gold the waters clear.
But, at that very touch, to disappear
So fairy-quick, was strange! Bewildered,
Endymion sought around, and shook each bed
Of covert flowers in vain; and then he flung
Himself along the grass. What gentle tongue,
What whisperer disturb'd his gloomy rest?
It was a nymph uprisen to the breast
In the fountain's pebbly margin, and she stood
'Mong lillies, like the youngest of the brood. 100
To him her dripping hand she softly kist,
And anxiously began to plait and twist
Her ringlets round her fingers, saying: "Youth!
Too long, alas, hast thou starv'd on the ruth,
The bitterness of love: too long indeed,
Seeing thou art so gentle. Could I weed
Thy soul of care, by heavens, I would offer
All the bright riches of my crystal coffer
To Amphitrite; all my clear-eyed fish,

Golden, or rainbow-sided, or purplish, 110
 Vermilion-tail'd, or finn'd with silvery gauze;
 Yea, or my veined pebble-floor, that draws
 A virgin light to the deep; my grotto-sands
 Tawny and gold, ooz'd slowly from far lands
 By my diligent springs; my level lillies, shells,
 My charming rod, my potent river spells;
 Yes, every thing, even to the pearly cup
 Meander gave me,—for I bubbled up
 To fainting creatures in a desert wild.
 But woe is me, I am but as a child 120
 To gladden thee; and all I dare to say,
 Is, that I pity thee; that on this day
 I've been thy guide; that thou must wander far
 In other regions, past the scanty bar
 To mortal steps, before thou can'st be ta'en
 From every wasting sigh, from every pain,
 Into the gentle bosom of thy love.
 Why it is thus, one knows in heaven above:
 But, a poor Naiad, I guess not. Farewell!
 I have a ditty for my hollow cell." 130

Hereat, she vanished from Endymion's gaze,
 Who brooded o'er the water in amaze:
 The dashing fount pour'd on, and where its pool
 Lay, half asleep, in grass and rushes cool,
 Quick waterflies and gnats were sporting still,
 And fish were dimpling, as if good nor ill
 Had fallen out that hour. The wanderer,
 Holding his forehead, to keep off the burr
 Of smothering fancies, patiently sat down;
 And, while beneath the evening's sleepy frown 140
 Glow-worms began to trim their starry lamps,
 Thus breath'd he to himself: "Whoso encamps
 To take a fancied city of delight,

131-4 Hereat, she vanish'd from the listener's gaze,
 Whose soul kept o'er the water in amaze;
 The dashing fall pour'd on, and where the pool
 Crept smoothly by fresh grass and rushes cool,...

Draft.

143 The manner in which the rhyme to this line was lost appears from the draft, where the passage originally stood thus:

O what a wretch is he! and when 'tis his,
 After long toil and travelling, to miss
 The kernel of his hopes, how more than vile:
 Yet, for him there's refreshment even in toil;
 Another city doth he set about,
 Free from the smallest pebble-bead of doubt
 That he will seize on trickling honey-combs: 150
 Alas, he finds them dry; and then he foams,
 And onward to another city speeds.
 But this is human life: the war, the deeds,
 The disappointment, the anxiety,
 Imagination's struggles, far and nigh,
 All human; bearing in themselves this good,
 That they are still the air, the subtle food,
 To make us feel existence, and to show
 How quiet death is. Where soil is men grow,
 Whether to weeds or flowers; but for me, 160
 There is no depth to strike in: I can see
 Naught earthly worth my compassing; so stand
 Upon a misty, jutting head of land—
 Alone? No, no; and by the Orphean lute,
 When mad Eurydice is listening to't;
 I'd rather stand upon this misty peak,
 With not a thing to sigh for, or to seek,
 But the soft shadow of my thrice-seen love,
 Than be—I care not what. O meekest dove
 Of heaven! O Cynthia, ten-times bright and fair!
 From thy blue throne, now filling all the air, 171
 Glance but one little beam of temper'd light
 Into my bosom, that the dreadful might
 And tyranny of love be somewhat scar'd!
 Yet do not so, sweet queen; one torment spar'd,
 Would give a pang to jealous misery,
 Worse than the torment's self: but rather tie
 Large wings upon my shoulders, and point out

Whoso encamps

His soul to take a city of delight

O what a wretch is he: 'tis in his sight...

Then 'tis in his sight was struck out in favour of and when 'tis his; but nothing was done, in transcribing for the press, to remedy the defect thus produced.

149 pebble-bead MS. and 1818 corrected: pebble-head 1818.

My love's far dwelling. Though the playful rout
Of Cupids shun thee, too divine art thou, 180
Too keen in beauty, for thy silver prow
Not to have dipp'd in love's most gentle stream.
O be propitious, nor severely deem
My madness impious; for, by all the stars
That tend thy bidding, I do think the bars
That kept my spirit in are burst—that I
Am sailing with thee through the dizzy sky!
How beautiful thou art! The world how deep!
How tremulous-dazzlingly the wheels sweep
Around their axle! Then these gleaming reins, 190
How lithe! When this thy chariot attains
Its airy goal, haply some bower veils
Those twilight eyes? Those eyes!—my spirit fails—
Dear goddess, help! or the wide-gaping air
Will gulph me—help!”—At this with madden'd stare,

And lifted hands, and trembling lips he stood;
Like old Deucalion mountain'd o'er the flood,
Or blind Orion hungry for the morn.
And, but from the deep cavern there was borne
A voice, he had been froze to senseless stone; 200
Nor sigh of his, nor plaint, nor passion'd moan
Had more been heard. Thus swell'd it forth: “Descend,
Young mountaineer! descend where alleys bend
Into the sparry hollows of the world!
Oft hast thou seen bolts of the thunder hurl'd
As from thy threshold; day by day hast been
A little lower than the chilly sheen
Of icy pinnacles, and dipp'dst thine arms
Into the deadening ether that still charms
Their marble being: now, as deep profound 210
As those are high, descend! He ne'er is crown'd
With immortality, who fears to follow
Where airy voices lead: so through the hollow,
The silent mysteries of earth, descend!”

He heard but the last words, nor could contend
One moment in reflection: for he fled

Into the fearful deep, to hide his head
From the clear moon, the trees, and coming madness.

'Twas far too strange, and wonderful for sadness ;
Sharpening, by degrees, his appetite 220
To dive into the deepest. Dark, nor light,
The region ; nor bright, nor sombre wholly,
But mingled up ; a gleaming melancholy ;
A dusky empire and its diadems ;
One faint eternal eventide of gems.
Aye, millions sparkled on a vein of gold,
Along whose track the prince quick footsteps told,
With all its lines abrupt and angular :
Out-shooting sometimes, like a meteor-star,
Through a vast antre ; then the metal woof, 230
Like Vulcan's rainbow, with some monstrous roof
Curves hugely : now, far in the deep abyss,
It seems an angry lightning, and doth hiss
Fancy into belief : anon it leads
Through winding passages, where sameness breeds
Vexing conceptions of some sudden change ;
Whether to silver grot, or giant range
Of sapphire columns, or fantastic bridge
Athwart a flood of crystal. On a ridge
Now fareth he, that o'er the vast beneath 240
Towers like an ocean-cliff, and whence he seeth
A hundred waterfalls, whose voices come
But as the murmuring surge. Chilly and numb
His bosom grew, when first he, far away
Descried an orb'd diamond, set to fray
Old darkness from his throne : 'twas like the sun
Uprisen o'er chaos : and with such a stun
Came the amazement, that, absorb'd in it,
He saw not fiercer wonders—past the wit
Of any spirit to tell, but one of those 250
Who, when this planet's sphering time doth close,
Will be its high remembrancers : who they ?

227-30 Whose track the venturous Latmian follows bold
Thro' all its lines abrupt and angular :
And sometimes like a shooting meteor star
Past a vast antre's gloom. Draft.

The mighty ones who have made eternal day
 For Greece and England. While astonishment
 With deep-drawn sighs was quieting, he went
 Into a marble gallery, passing through
 A mimic temple, so complete and true
 In sacred custom, that he well nigh fear'd
 To search it inwards; whence far off appear'd,
 Through a long pillar'd vista, a fair shrine, 260
 And just beyond, on light tiptoe divine,
 A quiver'd Dian. Stepping awfully,
 The youth approach'd; oft turning his veil'd eye
 Down sidelong aisles, and into niches old.
 And when, more near against the marble cold
 He had touch'd his forehead, he began to thread
 All courts and passages, where silence dead
 Rous'd by his whispering footsteps murmured faint:
 And long he travers'd to and fro, to acquaint
 Himself with every mystery, and awe; 270
 Till, weary, he sat down before the maw
 Of a wide outlet, fathomless and dim,
 To wild uncertainty and shadows grim.
 There, when new wonders ceas'd to float before,
 And thoughts of self came on, how crude and sore
 The journey homeward to habitual self!
 A mad-pursuing of the fog-born elf,
 Whose flitting lantern, through rude nettle-briar,
 Cheats us into a swamp, into a fire,
 Into the bosom of a hated thing. 280

The grotesque imagery reminds us, in its rude vigour, that Keats had actually witnessed, and forcibly described to Clarke, a bear-baiting.

The goal of consciousness? Ah, 'tis the thought,
 The deadly feel of solitude: for lo!
 He cannot see the heavens, nor the flow
 Of rivers, nor hill-flowers running wild
 In pink and purple chequer, nor, up-pil'd,
 The cloudy rack slow journeying in the west,
 Like herded elephants; nor felt, nor prest
 Cool grass, nor tasted the fresh slumberous air; 290
 But far from such companionship to wear
 An unknown time, surcharg'd with grief, away,
 Was now his lot. And must he patient stay,
 Tracing fantastic figures with his spear?
 "No!" exclaim'd he, "why should I tarry here?"
 No! loudly echoed times innumerable.
 At which he straightway started, and 'gan tell
 His paces back into the temple's chief;
 Warming and glowing strong in the belief
 Of help from Dian: so that when again 300
 He caught her airy form, thus did he plain,
 Moving more near the while: "O Haunter chaste
 Of river sides, and woods, and heathy waste,
 Where with thy silver bow and arrows keen
 Art thou now forested? O woodland Queen,
 What smoothest air thy smoother forehead woos?
 Where dost thou listen to the wide halloos
 Of thy disparted nymphs? Through what dark tree
 Glimmers thy crescent? Wheresoe'er it be,
 'Tis in the breath of heaven: thou dost taste 310
 Freedom as none can taste it, nor dost waste
 Thy loveliness in dismal elements;
 But, finding in our green earth sweet contents,
 There livest blissfully. Ah, if to thee
 It feels Elysian, how rich to me,
 An exil'd mortal, sounds its pleasant name!
 Within my breast there lives a choking flame—

O let me cool't the zephyr-boughs among!
 A homeward fever parches up my tongue—
 O let me slake it at the running springs! 320
 Upon my ear a noisy nothing rings—
 O let me once more hear the linnet's note!
 Before mine eyes thick films and shadows float—
 O let me 'noint them with the heaven's light!
 Dost thou now lave thy feet and ankles white?
 O think how sweet to me the freshening sluice!
 Dost thou now please thy thirst with berry-juice?
 O think how this dry palate would rejoice!
 If in soft slumber thou dost hear my voice,
 O think how I should love a bed of flowers!— 330
 Young goddess! let me see my native bowers!
 Deliver me from this rapacious deep!"

Thus ending loudly, as he would o'erleap
 His destiny, alert he stood: but when
 Obstinate silence came heavily again,
 Feeling about for its old couch of space
 And airy cradle, lowly bow'd his face
 Desponding, o'er the marble floor's cold thrill.
 But 'twas not long; for, sweeter than the rill
 To its old channel, or a swollen tide 340
 To margin shallows, were the leaves he spied,
 And flowers, and wreaths, and ready myrtle crowns
 Up heaping through the slab: refreshment drowns
 Itself, and strives its own delights to hide—
 Nor in one spot alone; the floral pride

O let me cool it among the zephyr-boughs!
But it seems absolutely certain that among was meant to be at the end, to rhyme with tongue,—an assurance made doubly sure by the fact that the line was originally written in the draft—

O let me cool't among the waving boughs!

In a long whispering birth enchanted grew
 Before his footsteps; as when heav'd anew
 Old ocean rolls a lengthened wave to the shore,
 Down whose green back the short-liv'd foam, all hoar,
 Bursts gradual, with a wayward indolence. 250

Increasing still in heart, and pleasant sense,
 Upon his fairy journey on he hastes;
 So anxious for the end, he scarcely wastes
 One moment with his hand among the sweets:
 Onward he goes—he stops—his bosom beats
 As plainly in his ear, as the faint charm
 Of which the throbs were born. This still alarm,
 This sleepy music, forc'd him walk tiptoe:
 For it came more softly than the east could blow
 Arion's magic to the Atlantic isles; 360
 Or than the west, made jealous by the smiles
 Of thron'd Apollo, could breathe back the lyre
 To seas Ionian and Tyrian.

O did he ever live, that lonely man,
 Who lov'd—and music slew not? 'Tis the pest
 Of love, that fairest joys give most unrest;
 That things of delicate and tenderest worth
 Are swallow'd all, and made a seared dearth,
 By one consuming flame: it doth immerse
 And suffocate true blessings in a curse. 370
 Half-happy, by comparison of bliss,
 Is miserable. 'Twas even so with this
 Dew-dropping melody, in the Carian's ear;
 First heaven, then hell, and then forgotten clear,
 Vanish'd in elemental passion.

353 wastes 1818: waits MS.

363 The draft supplies the history of the loss of a rhyme to this line.
The passage was left thus:

To seas Ionian and Tyrian. Dire
 Was the love lorn despair to which it wrought
 Endymion—for dire is the bare thought
 That among lovers things of tenderest worth
 Are swallow'd all, and made a blank—a dearth
 By one devouring flame: and far far worse
 Blessing to them become a heavy curse
 Half happy till comparisons of bliss
 To misery lead them. 'Twas even so with this...

And down some swart abysm he had gone,
 Had not a heavenly guide benignant led
 To where thick myrtle branches, 'gainst his head
 Brushing, awakened: then the sounds again
 Went noiseless as a passing noontide rain 380
 Over a bower, where little space he stood;
 For as the sunset peeps into a wood
 So saw he panting light, and towards it went
 Through winding alleys; and lo, wonderment!
 Upon soft verdure saw, one here, one there,
 Cupids a slumbering on their pinions fair.

After a thousand mazes overgone,
 At last, with sudden step, he came upon
 A chamber, myrtle wall'd, embowered high,
 Full of light, incense, tender minstrelsy, 390
 And more of beautiful and strange beside:
 For on a silken couch of rosy pride,
 In midst of all, there lay a sleeping youth
 Of fondest beauty; fonder, in fair sooth,
 Than sighs could fathom, or contentment reach:
 And coverlids gold-tinted like the peach,
 Or ripe October's faded marigolds,
 Fell sleek about him in a thousand folds—
 Not hiding up an Apollonian curve
 Of neck and shoulder, nor the tenting swerve 400
 Of knee from knee, nor ankles pointing light;
 But rather, giving them to the filled sight
 Officiously. Sideway his face repos'd
 On one white arm, and tenderly unclos'd,
 By tenderest pressure, a faint damask mouth
 To slumb'ry pout; just as the morning south
 Disparts a dew-lipp'd rose. Above his head,
 Four lilly stalks did their white honours wed
 To make a coronal; and round him grew

379-83 Brushing awaken'd him: the sounds again
 Came softly as a gentle evening rain,
 Around a bower, where he stay'd harkening
 And through whose tufted shrubby darkening
 Bright starry glimmers came, towards which he went... Draft.

All tendrils green, of every bloom and hue, 410
 Together intertwi'd and trammel'd fresh :
 The vine of glossy sprout; the ivy mesh,
 Shading its Ethiop berries; and woodbine,
 Of velvet leaves and bugle-blooms divine;
 Convolvulus in streaked vases flush;
 The creeper, mellowing for an autumn blush;
 And virgin's bower, trailing airily;
 With others of the sisterhood. Hard by,
 Stood serene Cupids watching silently.
 One, kneeling to a lyre, touch'd the strings, 420
 Muffling to death the pathos with his wings;
 And, ever and anon, uprose to look
 At the youth's slumber; while another took
 A willow-bough, distilling odorous dew,
 And shook it on his hair; another flew
 In through the woven roof, and fluttering-wise
 Rain'd violets upon his sleeping eyes.

At these enchantments, and yet many more,
 The breathless Latmian wonder'd o'er and o'er;
 Until, impatient in embarrassment, 430
 He forthright pass'd, and lightly treading went
 To that same feather'd lyrist, who straightway,
 Smiling, thus whisper'd: "Though from upper day
 Thou art a wanderer, and thy presence here
 Might seem unholy, be of happy cheer!
 For 'tis the nicest touch of human honour,
 When some ethereal and high-favouring donor
 Presents immortal bowers to mortal sense;
 As now 'tis done to thee, Endymion. Hence
 Was I in no wise startled. So recline 440

Alive with sparkles—never, I aver,
 Since Ariadne was a vintager,
 So cool a purple: taste these juicy pears,
 Sent me by sad Vertumnus, when his fears
 Were high about Pomona: here is cream,
 Deepening to richness from a snowy gleam;
 Sweeter than that nurse Amalthea skimm'd
 For the boy Jupiter: and here, undimm'd
 By any touch, a bunch of blooming plums
 Ready to melt between an infant's gums: 450
 And here is manna pick'd from Syrian trees,
 In starlight, by the three Hesperides.
 Feast on, and meanwhile I will let thee know
 Of all these things around us." He did so,
 Still brooding o'er the cadence of his lyre;
 And thus: "I need not any hearing tire
 By telling how the sea-born goddess pin'd
 For a mortal youth, and how she strove to bind
 Him all in all unto her doting self. 460
 Who would not be so prison'd? but, fond elf,
 He was content to let her amorous plea
 Faint through his careless arms; content to see
 An unseiz'd heaven dying at his feet;
 Content, O fool! to make a cold retreat,
 When on the pleasant grass such love, lovelorn,
 Lay sorrowing; when every tear was born
 Of diverse passion; when her lips and eyes
 Were clos'd in sullen moisture, and quick sighs
 Came vex'd and pettish through her nostrils small.
 Hush! no exclaim—yet, justly mightst thou call
 Curses upon his head.—I was half glad, 472

Immortal tear-drops down the thunderer's beard;
 Whereon, it was decreed he should be rear'd
 Each summer time to life. Lo! this is he,
 That same Adonis, safe in the privacy
 Of this still region all his winter-sleep. 480
 Aye, sleep; for when our love-sick queen did weep
 Over his waned corse, the tremulous shower
 Heal'd up the wound, and, with a balmy power,
 Medicined death to a lengthened drowsiness:
 The which she fills with visions, and doth dress
 In all this quiet luxury; and hath set
 Us young immortals, without any let,
 To watch his slumber through. 'Tis well nigh pass'd,
 Even to a moment's filling up, and fast
 She scuds with summer breezes, to pant through 490
 The first long kiss, warm firstling, to renew
 Embower'd sports in Cytherea's isle.
 Look! how those winged listeners all this while
 Stand anxious: see! behold!"—This clamant word
 Broke through the careful silence; for they heard
 A rustling noise of leaves, and out there flutter'd
 Pigeons and doves: Adonis something mutter'd
 The while one hand, that erst upon his thigh
 Lay dormant, mov'd convuls'd and gradually
 Up to his forehead. Then there was a hum 500
 Of sudden voices, echoing, "Come! come!
 Arise! awake! Clear summer has forth walk'd
 Unto the clover-sward, and she has talk'd
 Full soothingly to every nested finch:
 Rise, Cupids! or we'll give the blue-bell pinch
 To your dimpled arms. Once more sweet life begin!"
 At this, from every side they hurried in,
 Rubbing their sleepy eyes with lazy wrists,
 And doubling over head their little fists
 In backward yawns. But all were soon alive: 510

For as delicious wine doth, sparkling, dive
 In nectar'd clouds and curls through water fair,
 So from the arbour roof down swell'd an air
 Odorous and enlivening; making all
 To laugh, and play, and sing, and loudly call
 For their sweet queen: when lo! the wreathed green
 Disparted, and far upward could be seen
 Blue heaven, and a silver car, air-borne,
 Whose silent wheels, fresh wet from clouds of morn,
 Spun off a drizzling dew,—which falling chill 520
 On soft Adonis' shoulders, made him still Nestle and turn uneasily about.
 Soon were the white doves plain, with neck stretch'd out,
 And silken traces lighten'd in descent;
 And soon, returning from love's banishment,
 Queen Venus leaning downward open arm'd:
 Her shadow fell upon his breast, and charm'd
 A tumult to his heart, and a new life
 Into his eyes. Ah, miserable strife,
 But for her comforting! unhappy sight, 530
 But meeting her blue orbs! Who, who can write
 Of these first minutes? The unchariest muse
 To embracements warm as theirs makes coy excuse.

O it has ruffled every spirit there,
 Saving Love's self, who stands superb to share

526 Queen Venus bending downward, so o'ertaken,
 So suffering sweet, so blushing mad, so shaken
 That the wild warmth prob'd the young sleeper's heart
 Enchantingly; and with a sudden start
 His trembling arms were out in instant time
 To catch his fainting love.—O foolish rhyme
 What mighty power is in thee that so often
 Thou strivest rugged syllables to soften
 Even to the telling of a sweet like this.
 Away! let them embrace alone! that kiss
 Was far too rich for thee to talk upon.
 Poor wretch! mind not those sobs and sighs! begone!
 Speak not one atom of thy paltry stuff,
 That they are met is poetry enough.

535 Love's MS. : love's 1818.

The general gladness: awfully he stands;
 A sovereign quell is in his waving hands;
 No sight can bear the lightning of his bow;
 His quiver is mysterious, none can know 539
 What themselves think of it; from forth his eyes
 There darts strange light of varied hues and dies:
 A scowl is sometimes on his brow, but who Look full upon it feel anon the blue
 Of his fair eyes run liquid through their souls.
 Endymion feels it, and no more controls
 The burning prayer within him; so, bent low,
 He had begun a plaining of his woe.
 But Venus, bending forward, said: "My child,
 Favour this gentle youth; his days are wild
 With love—he—but alas! too well I see 550
 Thou know'st the deepness of his misery.
 Ah, smile not so, my son: I tell thee true,
 That when through heavy hours I used to rue
 The endless sleep of this new-born Adon',
 This stranger aye I pitied. For upon
 A dreary morning once I fled away
 Into the breezy clouds, to weep and pray
 For this my love: for vexing Mars had teaz'd
 Me even to tears: thence, when a little eas'd,
 Down-looking, vacant, through a hazy wood, 560
 I saw this youth as he despairing stood:
 Those same dark curls blown vagrant in the wind;
 Those same full fringed lids a constant blind
 Over his sullen eyes: I saw him throw
 Himself on wither'd leaves, even as though
 Death had come sudden; for no jot he mov'd,
 Yet mutter'd wildly. I could hear he lov'd
 Some fair immortal, and that his embrace
 Had zoned her through the night. There is no trace
 Of this in heaven: I have mark'd each cheek, 570
 And find it is the vainest thing to seek;
 And that of all things 'tis kept secretest.
 Endymion! one day thou wilt be blest:

So still obey the guiding hand that fends
 Thee safely through these wonders for sweet ends.
 'Tis a concealment needful in extreme;
 And if I guess'd not so, the sunny beam
 Thou shouldst mount up to with me. Now adieu!
 Here must we leave thee."—At these words upflew
 The impatient doves, uprose the floating car, 580
 Up went the hum celestial. High afar
 The Latmian saw them minish into naught;
 And, when all were clear vanish'd, still he caught
 A vivid lightning from that dreadful bow.
 When all was darkened, with Ætnean throe
 The earth clos'd—gave a solitary moan—
 And left him once again in twilight lone.

He did not rave, he did not stare aghast,
 For all those visions were o'ergone, and past,
 And he in loneliness: he felt assur'd 590
 Of happy times, when all he had endur'd
 Would seem a feather to the mighty prize.
 So, with unusual gladness, on he hies
 Through caves, and palaces of mottled ore,
 Gold dome, and crystal wall, and turquoise floor,
 Black polish'd porticos of awful shade,
 And, at the last, a diamond balustrade,
 Leading afar past wild magnificence,
 Spiral through ruggedest loopholes, and thence Stretching across a void, then guiding o'er 600
 Enormous chasms, where, all foam and roar,
 Streams subterranean tease their granite beds;
 Then heighten'd just above the silvery heads
 Of a thousand fountains, so that he could dash
 The waters with his spear; but at the splash,
 Done heedlessly, those spouting columns rose
 Sudden a poplar's height, and 'gan to enclose
 His diamond path with fretwork, streaming round

Alive, and dazzling cool, and with a sound,
 Haply, like dolphin tumults, when sweet shells 610
 Welcome the float of Thetis. Long he dwells
 On this delight; for, every minute's space,
 The streams with changed magic interlace:
 Sometimes like delicatest lattices,
 Cover'd with crystal vines; then weeping trees.
 Moving about as in a gentle wind,
 Which, in a wink, to watery gauze refin'd,
 Pour'd into shapes of curtain'd canopies,
 Spangled, and rich with liquid broideries
 Of flowers, peacocks, swans, and naiads fair. 620
 Swifter than lightning went these wonders rare;
 And then the water, into stubborn streams
 Collecting, mimick'd the wrought oaken beams,
 Pillars, and frieze, and high fantastic roof,
 Of those dusk places in times far aloof
 Cathedrals call'd. He bade a loth farewell
 To these founts Protean, passing gulph, and dell,
 And torrent, and ten thousand jutting shapes,
 Half seen through deepest gloom, and griesly gapes,
 Blackening on every side, and overhead 630
 A vaulted dome like Heaven's, far bespread
 With starlight gems: aye, all so huge and strange,
 The solitary felt a hurried change
 Working within him into something dreary,—
 Vex'd like a morning eagle, lost, and weary,
 And purblind amid foggy, midnight wolds.
 But he revives at once: for who beholds
 New sudden things, nor casts his mental slough?
 Forth from a rugged arch, in the dusk below,
 Came mother Cybele! alone—alone— 640
 In sombre chariot; dark foldings thrown
 About her majesty, and front death-pale,

 Drooping about their paws, and nerry tails
 Cowering their tufted brushes to the dust. Draft.

 Their surly eyes brow-hidden, heavy paws

Wherefore delay,
 Young traveller, in such a mournful place ? 650
 Art thou wayworn, or canst not further trace
 The diamond path ? And does it indeed end
 Abrupt in middle air ? Yet earthward bend
 Thy forehead, and to Jupiter cloud-borne
 Call ardently ! He was indeed wayworn ;
 Abrupt, in middle air, his way was lost ;
 To cloud-borne Jove he bowed, and there crost
 Towards him a large eagle, 'twixt whose wings,
 Without one impious word, himself he flings,
 Committed to the darkness and the gloom : 660
 Down, down, uncertain to what pleasant doom,
 Swift as a fathoming plummet down he fell
 Through unknown things ; till exhaled asphodel,
 And rose, with spicy fannings interbreath'd,
 Came swelling forth where little caves were wreath'd
 So thick with leaves and mosses, that they seem'd
 Large honey-combs of green, and freshly teem'd
 With airs delicious. In the greenest nook
 The eagle landed him, and farewell took.

It was a jasmine bower, all bestrown 670
 With golden moss. His every sense had grown

657-62 To cloudborne Jove he bent : and there was tost

Ethereal for pleasure ; 'bove his head
 Flew a delight half-graspable ; his tread

 Silence was music from the holy spheres ;

 The little flowers felt his pleasant sighs
 And stirr'd them faintly. Verdant cave and cell
 He wander'd through, oft wondering at such swell
 Of sudden exaltation : but, "Alas!" 680
 Said he, "will all this gush of feeling pass
 Away in solitude ? And must they wane,
 Like melodies upon a sandy plain,
 Without an echo ? Then shall I be left
 So sad, so melancholy, so bereft !
 Yet still I feel immortal ! O my love,
 My breath of life, where art thou ? High above,
 Dancing before the morning gates of heaven ?
 Or keeping watch among those starry seven,
 Old Atlas' children ? Art a maid of the waters, 690
 One of shell-winding Triton's bright-hair'd daughters ?
 Or art, impossible ! a nymph of Dian's,
 Weaving a coronal of tender scions
 For very idleness ? Where'er thou art,
 Methinks it now is at my will to start
 Into thine arms ; to scare Aurora's train,
 And snatch thee from the morning ; o'er the main
 To scud like a wild bird, and take thee off
 From thy sea-foamy cradle ; or to doff
 Thy shepherd vest, and woo thee mid fresh leaves. 700
 No, no, too eagerly my soul deceives
 Its powerless self : I know this cannot be.
 O let me then by some sweet dreaming flee

Through a dim passage, searching till he found
 The smoothest mossy bed and deepest, where 710
 He threw himself, and just into the air
 Stretching his indolent arms, he took, O bliss!
 A naked waist: "Fair Cupid, whence is this?"
 A well-known voice sigh'd, "Sweetest, here am I!"
 At which soft ravishment, with doting cry
 They trembled to each other.—Helicon!
 O fountain'd hill! Old Homer's Helicon!
 That thou wouldst spout a little streamlet o'er
 These sorry pages; then the verse would soar
 And sing above this gentle pair, like lark 720

 Exhales in mists to heaven. Aye, the count

 Is folded by the Muses; the bright roll
 Is in Apollo's hand: our dazed eyes
 Have seen a new tinge in the western skies:
 The world has done its duty. Yet, oh yet,
 Although the sun of poesy is set,
 These lovers did embrace, and we must weep 730
 That there is no old power left to steep
 A quill immortal in their joyous tears.
 Long time ere silence did their anxious fears
 Question that thus it was; long time they lay
 Fondling and kissing every doubt away;
 Long time ere soft caressing sobs began
 To mellow into words, and then there ran
 Two bubbling springs of talk from their sweet lips.

Ye who have yearn'd

With too much passion, will here stay and pity,
 For the mere sake of truth; as 'tis a ditty
 Not of these days, but long ago 'twas told 830
 By a cavern wind unto a forest old;
 And then the forest told it in a dream
 To a sleeping lake, whose cool and level gleam
 A poet caught as he was journeying
 To Phœbus' shrine; and in it he did fling
 His weary limbs, bathing an hour's space,
 And after, straight in that inspired place
 He sang the story up into the air,
 Giving it universal freedom. There
 Has it been ever sounding for those ears 840
 Whose tips are glowing hot. The legend cheers
 Yon centinel stars; and he who listens to it
 Must surely be self-doom'd or he will rue it:
 For quenchless burnings come upon the heart,
 Made fiercer by a fear lest any part
 Should be engulfed in the eddying wind.
 As much as here is penn'd doth always find
 A resting place, thus much comes clear and plain;

Lispings immortal will I sometime teach
 Thine honied tongue—Gold-breathings, which I gasp
 To have thee understand, now while I clasp
 Thee thus, and shed these { tears } —I am pain'd, { drops }
 Endymion. There is a grief contain'd
 In the very shrine of pleasure, O my life!"
 Hereat with fainting sobs her gentle strife
 Died into passive languor—he return'd
 No answer, saving tears. Draft.

Anon the strange voice is upon the wane—
 And 'tis but echo'd from departing sound, 850
 That the fair visitant at last unwound
 Her gentle limbs, and left the youth asleep.—
 Thus the tradition of the gusty deep.

Now turn we to our former chroniclers.—
 Endymion awoke, that grief of hers
 Sweet paining on his ear: he sickly guess'd
 How lone he was once more, and sadly press'd
 His empty arms together, hung his head,
 And most forlorn upon that widow'd bed
 Sat silently. Love's madness he had known: 860
 Often with more than tortured lion's groan
 Moanings had burst from him; but now that rage
 Had pass'd away: no longer did he wage
 A rough-voic'd war against the dooming stars.
 No, he had felt too much for such harsh jars:
 The lyre of his soul Æolian tun'd
 Forgot all violence, and but commun'd
 With melancholy thought: O he had swoon'd
 Drunken from pleasure's nipple; and his love
 Henceforth was dove-like.—Loth was he to move 870
 From the imprinted couch, and when he did,
 'Twas with slow, languid paces, and face hid
 In muffling hands. So temper'd, out he stray'd
 Half seeing visions that might have dismay'd
 Alecto's serpents; ravishments more keen
 Than Hermes' pipe, when anxious he did lean
 Over eclipsing eyes: and at the last
 It was a sounding grotto, vaulted, vast,
 O'er studded with a thousand, thousand pearls,
 And crimson mouthed shells with stubborn curls, 880
 Of every shape and size, even to the bulk
 In which whales harbour close, to brood and sulk
 Against an endless storm. Moreover too,

849-50 But after the strange voice is on the wane—
 And 'tis but guess'd from the departing sound, Draft.

Fish-semblances, of green and azure hue,
 Ready to snort their streams. In this cool wonder
 Endymion sat down, and 'gan to ponder
 On all his life: his youth, up to the day
 When 'mid acclaim, and feasts, and garlands gay,
 He stept upon his shepherd throne: the look
 Of his white palace in wild forest nook, 890
 And all the revels he had lorded there:
 Each tender maiden whom he once thought fair,
 With every friend and fellow-woodlander—
 Pass'd like a dream before him. Then the spur
 Of the old bards to mighty deeds: his plans
 To nurse the golden age 'mong shepherd clans:
 That wondrous night: the great Pan-festival:
 His sister's sorrow; and his wanderings all,
 Until into the earth's deep maw he rush'd:
 Then all its buried magic, till it flush'd 900
 High with excessive love. "And now," thought he,
 "How long must I remain in jeopardy
 Of blank amazements that amaze no more?
 Now I have tasted her sweet soul to the core
 All other depths are shallow: essences,
 Once spiritual, are like muddy lees,
 Meant but to fertilize my earthly root,
 And make my branches lift a golden fruit
 Into the bloom of heaven: other light,
 Though it be quick and sharp enough to blight 910
 The Olympian eagle's vision, is dark,
 Dark as the parentage of chaos. Hark!
 My silent thoughts are echoing from these shells;
 Or they are but the ghosts, the dying swells
 Of noises far away?—list!"—Hereupon
 He kept an anxious ear. The humming tone
 Came louder, and behold, there as he lay,
 On either side outgush'd, with misty spray,
 A copious spring; and both together dash'd
 Swift, mad, fantastic round the rocks, and lash'd 920
 Among the conchs and shells of the lofty grot,
 Leaving a trickling dew. At last they shot
 Down from the ceiling's height, pouring a noise

914 Or they are subtlest and dying swells Draft.

As of some breathless racers whose hopes poize
 Upon the last few steps, and with spent force
 Along the ground they took a winding course.
 Endymion follow'd—for it seem'd that one
 Ever pursued, the other strove to shun—
 Follow'd their languid mazes, till well nigh
 He had left thinking of the mystery,— 930
 And was now rapt in tender hoverings
 Over the vanish'd bliss. Ah! what is it sings
 His dream away? What melodies are these?
 They sound as through the whispering of trees,
 Not native in such barren vaults. Give ear!

“O Arethusa, peerless nymph! why fear
 Such tenderness as mine? Great Dian, why,
 Why didst thou hear her prayer? O that I
 Were rippling round her dainty fairness now,
 Circling about her waist, and striving how 940
 To entice her to a dive! then stealing in Between her luscious lips and eyelids thin.
 O that her shining hair was in the sun,
 And I distilling from it thence to run
 In amorous rillets down her shrinking form!
 To linger on her lilly shoulders, warm
 Between her kissing breasts, and every charm
 Touch raptur'd!—See how painfully I flow:
 Fair maid, be pitiful to my great woe.
 Stay, stay thy weary course, and let me lead, 950
 A happy wooer, to the flowery mead
 Where all that beauty snar'd me.”—“Cruel god,
 Desist! or my offended mistress' nod
 Will stagnate all thy fountains:—tease me not
 With syren words—Ah, have I really got
 Such power to madden thee? And is it true—
 Away, away, or I shall dearly rue
 My very thoughts: in mercy then away,
 Kindest Alpheus, for should I obey
 My own dear will, 'twould be a deadly bane. 960
 O, Oread-Queen! would that thou hadst a pain

960-75 “Cruel god . . . cruel thing.” All one speech MS. and 1818 corrected: “O, Oread-Queen . . . criminal” separated as if spoken by Alpheus 1818.

Like this of mine, then would I fearless turn
 And be a criminal. Alas, I burn,
 I shudder—gentle river, get thee hence.
 Alpheus! thou enchanter! every sense
 Of mine was once made perfect in these woods.
 Fresh breezes, bowery lawns, and innocent floods,
 Ripe fruits, and lonely couch, contentment gave;
 But ever since I heedlessly did lave
 In thy deceitful stream, a panting glow 970
 Grew strong within me: wherefore serve me so,
 And call it love? Alas, 'twas cruelty.
 Not once more did I close my happy eye
 Amid the thrushes' song. Away! Avaunt!
 O 'twas a cruel thing.—"Now thou dost taunt
 So softly, Arethusa, that I think
 If thou wast playing on my shady brink,
 Thou wouldst bathe once again. Innocent maid!
 Stifle thine heart no more; nor be afraid
 Of angry powers: there are deities 980
 Will shade us with their wings. Those fitful sighs
 'Tis almost death to hear: O let me pour
 A dewy balm upon them!—fear no more,
 Sweet Arethusa! Dian's self must feel
 Sometime these very pangs. Dear maiden, steal
 Blushing into my soul, and let us fly
 These dreary caverns for the open sky.
 I will delight thee all my winding course,
 From the green sea up to my hidden source
 About Arcadian forests; and will show 990
 The channels where my coolest waters flow
 Through mossy rocks; where, 'mid exuberant green,
 I roam in pleasant darkness, more unseen
 Than Saturn in his exile; where I brim
 Round flowery islands, and take thence a skim
 Of mealy sweets, which myriads of bees
 Buzz from their honey'd wings: and thou shouldst please
 Thyself to choose the richest, where we might
 Be incense-pillow'd every summer night.

Doff all sad fears, thou white deliciousness, 1000
 And let us be thus comforted; unless
 Thou couldst rejoice to see my hopeless stream
 Hurry distracted from Sol's temperate beam,
 And pour to death along some hungry sands."—
 "What can I do, Alpheus? Dian stands
 Severe before me: persecuting fate!
 Unhappy Arethusa! thou wast late
 A huntress free in"—At this, sudden fell
 Those two sad streams adown a fearful dell.
 The Latmian listen'd, but he heard no more, 1010
 Save echo, faint repeating o'er and o'er
 The name of Arethusa. On the verge
 Of that dark gulph he wept, and said: "I urge
 Thee, gentle Goddess of my pilgrimage,
 By our eternal hopes, to soothe, to assuage,
 If thou art powerful, these lovers' pains;
 And make them happy in some happy plains."

He turn'd—there was a whelming sound—he stept,
 There was a cooler light; and so he kept
 Towards it by a sandy path, and lo! 1020
 More suddenly than doth a moment go,
 The visions of the earth were gone and fled—
 He saw the giant sea above his head.

THERE are who lord it o'er their fellow-men
 With most prevailing tinsel: who unpen
 Their baaing vanities, to browse away
 The comfortable green and juicy hay
 From human pastures; or, O torturing fact!
 Who, through an idiot blink, will see unpack'd
 Fire-branded foxes to sear up and singe
 Our gold and ripe-ear'd hopes. With not one tinge
 Of sanctuary splendour, not a sight
 Able to face an owl's, they still are dight 10

By the blear-eyed nations in empurpled vests,
 And crowns, and turbans. With unladen breasts,
 Save of blown self-applause, they proudly mount
 To their spirit's perch, their being's high account,
 Their tiptop nothings, their dull skies, their thrones—
 Amid the fierce intoxicating tones
 Of trumpets, shoutings, and belabour'd drums,
 And sudden cannon. Ah! how all this hums,
 In wakeful ears, like uproar past and gone—
 Like thunder clouds that spake to Babylon, 20
 And set those old Chaldeans to their tasks.—
 Are then regalities all gilded masks?
 No, there are throned seats unscalable
 But by a patient wing, a constant spell,
 Or by ethereal things that, unconfin'd,
 Can make a ladder of the eternal wind,
 And poize about in cloudy thunder-tents
 To watch the abysm-birth of elements.
 Aye, 'bove the withering of old-lipp'd Fate
 A thousand Powers keep religious state, 30
 In water, fiery realm, and airy bourne;
 And, silent as a consecrated urn,
 Hold sphery sessions for a season due.
 Yet few of these far majesties, ah, few!
 Have bared their operations to this globe—
 Few, who with gorgeous pageantry enrobe
 Our piece of heaven—whose benevolence
 Shakes hand with our own Ceres; every sense
 Filling with spiritual sweets to plenitude,
 As bees gorge full their cells. And, by the feud 40
 Twixt Nothing and Creation, I here swear,
 Eterne Apollo! that thy Sister fair
 Is of all these the gentlier-mightiest.
 When thy gold breath is misting in the west,
 She unobserved steals unto her throne,
 And there she sits most meek and most alone;
 As if she had not pomp subservient;

- 21-3 And set these old Chaldeans to their work.—
 Are then all regal things so gone, so murk?
 No there are other thrones to mount. Draft.

 And silent, as a corpse upon a pyre. Draft.

As if thine eye, high Poet! was not bent
 Towards her with the Muses in thine heart;
 As if the ministring stars kept not apart, 50
 Waiting for silver-footed messages.
 O Moon! the oldest shades 'mong oldest trees
 Feel palpitations when thou lookest in:
 O Moon! old boughs lisp forth a holier din
 The while they feel thine airy fellowship.
 Thou dost bless every where, with silver lip
 Kissing dead things to life. The sleeping kine,
 Couch'd in thy brightness, dream of fields divine:
 Innumerable mountains rise, and rise,
 Ambitious for the hallowing of thine eyes; 60
 And yet thy benediction passeth not
 One obscure hiding-place, one little spot
 Where pleasure may be sent: the nested wren
 Has thy fair face within its tranquil ken,
 And from beneath a sheltering ivy leaf
 Takes glimpses of thee; thou art a relief
 To the poor patient oyster, where it sleeps
 Within its pearly house.—The mighty deeps,
 The monstrous sea is thine—the myriad sea!
 O Moon! far-spooning Ocean bows to thee, 70
 And Tellus feels his forehead's cumbrous load.

Cynthia! where art thou now? What far abode
 Of green or silvery bower doth enshrine
 Such utmost beauty? Alas, thou dost pine
 For one as sorrowful: thy cheek is pale
 For one whose cheek is pale: thou dost bewail
 His tears, who weeps for thee. Where dost thou sigh?
 Ah! surely that light peeps from Vesper's eye,
 Or what a thing is love! 'Tis She, but lo!
 How chang'd, how full of ache, how gone in woe!
 She dies at the thinnest cloud; her loveliness 81
 Is wan on Neptune's blue: yet there's a stress
 Of love-spangles, just off yon cape of trees,
 Dancing upon the waves, as if to please
 The curly foam with amorous influence.

Where art thou Ah

Surely that light is from the Evening star... Draft.

O, not so idle: for down-glancing thence
 She fathoms eddies, and runs wild about
 O'erwhelming water-courses; scaring out
 The thorny sharks from hiding-holes, and fright'ning
 Their savage eyes with unaccustom'd lightning. 90
 Where will the splendour be content to reach?
 O love! how potent hast thou been to teach
 Strange journeyings! Wherever beauty dwells,
 In gulph or aerie, mountains or deep dells,
 In light, in gloom, in star or blazing sun,
 Thou pointest out the way, and straight 'tis won.
 Amid his toil thou gav'st Leander breath;
 Thou leddest Orpheus through the gleams of death;
 Thou madest Pluto bear thin element;
 And now, O winged Chieftain! thou hast sent 100
 A moon-beam to the deep, deep water-world,
 To find Endymion.

On gold sand impearl'd
 With lilly shells, and pebbles milky white,
 Poor Cynthia greeted him, and sooth'd her light
 Against his pallid face: he felt the charm
 To breathlessness, and suddenly a warm
 Of his heart's blood: 'twas very sweet; he stay'd
 His wandering steps, and half-entranced laid
 His head upon a tuft of straggling weeds,
 To taste the gentle moon, and freshening beads, 110
 Lash'd from the crystal roof by fishes' tails.
 And so he kept, until the rosy veils
 Mantling the east, by Aurora's peering hand
 Were lifted from the water's breast, and fann'd
 Into sweet air; and sober'd morning came
 Meekly through billows:—when like taper-flame
 Left sudden by a dallying breath of air,
 He rose in silence, and once more 'gan fare
 Along his fated way.

Far had he roam'd,
 With nothing save the hollow vast, that foam'd, 120
 Above, around, and at his feet; save things
 More dead than Morpheus' imaginings:
 Old rusted anchors, helmets, breast-plates large

Of gone sea-warriors; brazen beaks and targe;
 Rudders that for a hundred years had lost
 The sway of human hand; gold vase emboss'd
 With long-forgotten story, and wherein
 No reveller had ever dipp'd a chin
 But those of Saturn's vintage; mouldering scrolls,
 Writ in the tongue of heaven, by those souls ¹³⁰
 Who first were on the earth; and sculptures rude
 In ponderous stone, developing the mood
 Of ancient Nox;—then skeletons of man,
 Of beast, behemoth, and leviathan,
 And elephant, and eagle, and huge jaw
 Of nameless monster. A cold leaden awe
 These secrets struck into him; and unless
 Dian had chased away that heaviness,
 He might have died: but now, with cheered feel,
 He onward kept; wooing these thoughts to steal ¹⁴⁰
 About the labyrinth in his soul of love.

“What is there in thee, Moon! that thou shouldst move

My heart so potently? When yet a child
 I oft have dried my tears when thou hast smil'd.
 Thou seem'dst my sister: hand in hand we went
 From eve to morn across the firmament.
 No apples would I gather from the tree,
 Till thou hadst cool'd their cheeks deliciously:
 No tumbling water ever spake romance,
 But when my eyes with thine thereon could dance:
 No woods were green enough, no bower divine, ¹⁵¹
 Until thou liftedst up thine eyelids fine:
 In sowing time ne'er would I dibble take,
 Or drop a seed, till thou wast wide awake;
 And, in the summer tide of blossoming,
 No one but thee hath heard me blythly sing
 And mesh my dewy flowers all the night.
 No melody was like a passing spright
 If it went not to solemnize thy reign.
 Yes, in my boyhood, every joy and pain ¹⁶⁰
 By thee were fashion'd to the self-same end;
 And as I grew in years, still didst thou blend

156 blythly MS. : blithly 1818.

With all my ardours: thou wast the deep glen:
 Thou wast the mountain-top—the sage's pen—
 The poet's harp—the voice of friends—the sun:
 Thou wast the river—thou wast glory won;
 Thou wast my clarion's blast—thou wast my steed—
 My goblet full of wine—my topmost deed:—
 Thou wast the charm of women, lovely Moon!
 O what a wild and harmonized tune 170
 My spirit struck from all the beautiful!
 On some bright essence could I lean, and lull
 Myself to immortality: I prest
 Nature's soft pillow in a wakeful rest.
 But, gentle Orb! there came a nearer bliss—
 My strange love came—Felicity's abyss!
 She came, and thou didst fade, and fade away—
 Yet not entirely; no, thy starry sway
 Has been an under-passion to this hour.
 Now I begin to feel thine orby power 180
 Is coming fresh upon me: O be kind,
 Keep back thine influence, and do not blind
 My sovereign vision.—Dearest love, forgive
 That I can think away from thee and live!—
 Pardon me, airy planet, that I prize
 One thought beyond thine argent luxuries!
 How far beyond!" At this a surpris'd start
 Frosted the springing verdure of his heart;
 For as he lifted up his eyes to swear
 How his own goddess was past all things fair, 190
 He saw far in the concave green of the sea
 An old man sitting calm and peacefully.
 Upon a weeded rock this old man sat,
 And his white hair was awful, and a mat
 Of weeds were cold beneath his cold thin feet;
 And, ample as the largest winding-sheet,
 A cloak of blue wrapp'd up his aged bones,
 O'erwrought with symbols by the deepest groans
 Of ambitious magic: every ocean-form
 Was woven in with black distinctness; storm, 200
 And calm, and whispering, and hideous roar,
 Quicksand, and whirlpool, and deserted shore,

Were emblem'd in the woof; with every shape
 That skims, or dives, or sleeps, 'twixt cape and cape.
 The gulphing whale was like a dot in the spell,
 Yet look upon it, and 'twould size and swell
 To its huge self; and the minutest fish
 Would pass the very hardest gazer's wish,
 And show his little eye's anatomy.
 Then there was pictur'd the regality 210
 Of Neptune; and the sea nymphs round his state,
 In beauteous vassalage, look up and wait.
 Beside this old man lay a pearly wand,
 And in his lap a book, the which he conn'd
 So stedfastly, that the new denizen
 Had time to keep him in amazed ken,
 To mark these shadowings, and stand in awe.

The old man rais'd his hoary head and saw
 The wilder'd stranger—seeming not to see,
 His features were so lifeless. Suddenly 220
 He woke as from a trance; his snow-white brows
 Went arching up, and like two magic ploughs
 Furrow'd deep wrinkles in his forehead large,
 Which kept as fixedly as rocky marge,
 Till round his wither'd lips had gone a smile.
 Then up he rose, like one whose tedious toil
 Had watch'd for years in forlorn hermitage,
 Who had not from mid-life to utmost age
 Eas'd in one accent his o'er-burden'd soul,
 Even to the trees. He rose: he grasp'd his stole,
 With convuls'd clenches waving it abroad, 231
 And in a voice of solemn joy, that aw'd
 Echo into oblivion, he said:—

“Thou art the man! Now shall I lay my head
 In peace upon my watery pillow: now
 Sleep will come smoothly to my weary brow.
 O Jove! I shall be young again, be young!
 O shell-borne Neptune, I am pierc'd and stung
 With new-born life! What shall I do? Where go,
 When I have cast this serpent-skin of woe?— 240
 I'll swim to the syrens, and one moment listen
 Their melodies, and see their long hair glisten;

Anon upon that giant's arm I'll be,
 That writhes about the roots of Sicily:
 To northern seas I'll in a twinkling sail,
 And mount upon the snortings of a whale
 To some black cloud; thence down I'll madly sweep
 On forked lightning, to the deepest deep,
 Where through some sucking pool I will be hurl'd
 With rapture to the other side of the world! 250
 O, I am full of gladness! Sisters three,
 I bow full hearted to your old decree!
 Yes, every god be thank'd, and power benign,
 For I no more shall wither, droop, and pine.
 Thou art the man!" Endymion started back
 Dismay'd; and, like a wretch from whom the rack
 Tortures hot breath, and speech of agony,
 Mutter'd: "What lonely death am I to die
 In this cold region? Will he let me freeze,
 And float my brittle limbs o'er polar seas? 260
 Or will he touch me with his searing hand,
 And leave a black memorial on the sand?
 Or tear me piece-meal with a bony saw,
 And keep me as a chosen food to draw
 His magian fish through hated fire and flame?
 O misery of hell! resistless, tame,
 Am I to be burnt up? No, I will shout,
 Until the gods through heaven's blue look out!—
 O Tartarus! but some few days ago
 Her soft arms were entwining me, and on 270
 Her voice I hung like fruit among green leaves:
 Her lips were all my own, and—ah, ripe sheaves
 Of happiness! ye on the stubble droop,
 But never may be garner'd. I must stoop
 My head, and kiss death's foot. Love! love, farewell!
 Is there no hope from thee? This horrid spell
 Would melt at thy sweet breath.—By Dian's hind
 Feeding from her white fingers, on the wind
 I see thy streaming hair! and now, by Pan,
 I care not for this old mysterious man!" 280

He spake, and walking to that aged form,
 Look'd high defiance. Lo! his heart 'gan warm
 With pity, for the grey-hair'd creature wept.

Had he then wrong'd a heart where sorrow kept?
 Had he, though blindly contumelious, brought
 Rheum to kind eyes, a sting to humane thought,
 Convulsion to a mouth of many years?
 He had in truth; and he was ripe for tears.
 The penitent shower fell, as down he knelt
 Before that care-worn sage, who trembling felt 290
 About his large dark locks, and faltering spake:

"Arise, good youth, for sacred Phœbus' sake!
 I know thine inmost bosom, and I feel
 A very brother's yearning for thee steal
 Into mine own: for why? thou openest
 The prison gates that have so long oppress
 My weary watching. Though thou know'st it not,
 Thou art commission'd to this fated spot
 For great enfranchisement. O weep no more;
 I am a friend to love, to loves of yore: 300
 Aye, hadst thou never lov'd an unknown power,
 I had been grieving at this joyous hour.
 But even now most miserable old,
 I saw thee, and my blood no longer cold
 Gave mighty pulses: in this tottering case
 Grew a new heart, which at this moment plays
 As dancingly as thine. Be not afraid,
 For thou shalt hear this secret all display'd,
 Now as we speed towards our joyous task."

So saying, this young soul in age's mask 310
 Went forward with the Carian side by side:
 Resuming quickly thus; while ocean's tide
 Hung swollen at their backs, and jewel'd sands
 Took silently their foot-prints.

"My soul stands
 Now past the midway from mortality,
 And so I can prepare without a sigh
 To tell thee briefly all my joy and pain.
 I was a fisher once, upon this main,
 And my boat danc'd in every creek and bay;

Rough billows were my home by night and day,—
 The sea-gulls not more constant; for I had 321
 No housing from the storm and tempests mad,
 But hollow rocks,—and they were palaces
 Of silent happiness, of slumberous ease:
 Long years of misery have told me so.
 Aye, thus it was one thousand years ago.
 One thousand years!—Is it then possible
 To look so plainly through them? to dispel
 A thousand years with backward glance sublime?
 To breathe away as 'twere all scummy slime 330
 From off a crystal pool, to see its deep,
 And one's own image from the bottom peep?
 Yes: now I am no longer wretched thrall,
 My long captivity and moanings all
 Are but a slime, a thin-pervading scum,
 The which I breathe away, and thronging come
 Like things of yesterday my youthful pleasures.

"I touch'd no lute, I sang not, trod no measures:
 I was a lonely youth on desert shores.
 My sports were lonely, 'mid continuous roars, 340
 And craggy isles, and sea-mew's plaintive cry
 Plaining discrepant between sea and sky.
 Dolphins were still my playmates; shapes unseen
 Would let me feel their scales of gold and green,
 Nor be my desolation; and, full oft,
 When a dread waterspout had rear'd aloft
 Its hungry hugeness, seeming ready ripe
 To burst with hoarsest thunderings, and wipe
 My life away like a vast sponge of fate,
 Some friendly monster, pitying my sad state, 350
 Has dived to its foundations, gulph'd it down,
 And left me tossing safely. But the crown
 Of all my life was utmost quietude:
 More did I love to lie in cavern rude,
 Keeping in wait whole days for Neptune's voice,
 And if it came at last, hark, and rejoice!
 There blush'd no summer eve but I would steer
 My skiff along green shelving coasts, to hear

The shepherd's pipe come clear from aery steep,
 Mingled with ceaseless bleatings of his sheep: 360
 And never was a day of summer shine,
 But I beheld its birth upon the brine:
 For I would watch all night to see unfold
 Heaven's gates, and Æthon snort his morning gold
 Wide o'er the swelling streams: and constantly
 At brim of day-tide, on some grassy lea,
 My nets would be spread out, and I at rest.
 The poor folk of the sea-country I blest
 With daily boon of fish most delicate:
 They knew not whence this bounty, and elate 370
 Would strew sweet flowers on a sterile beach.

"Why was I not contented? Wherefore reach
 At things which, but for thee, O Latmian!
 Had been my dreary death? Fool! I began
 To feel distemper'd longings: to desire
 The utmost privilege that ocean's sire
 Could grant in benediction: to be free
 Of all his kingdom. Long in misery
 I wasted, ere in one extremest fit
 I plung'd for life or death. To interknit 380
 One's senses with so dense a breathing stuff
 Might seem a work of pain; so not enough
 Can I admire how crystal-smooth it felt,
 And buoyant round my limbs. At first I dwelt
 Whole days and days in sheer astonishment;
 Forgetful utterly of self-intent;
 Moving but with the mighty ebb and flow.
 Then, like a new fledg'd bird that first doth show
 His spreaded feathers to the morrow chill,
 I tried in fear the pinions of my will. 390
 'Twas freedom! and at once I visited
 The ceaseless wonders of this ocean-bed.
 No need to tell thee of them, for I see
 That thou hast been a witness—it must be—
 For these I know thou canst not feel a drouth,
 By the melancholy corners of that mouth.
 So I will in my story straightway pass

To more immediate matter. Woe, alas!
 That love should be my bane! Ah, Scylla fair!
 Why did poor Glaucus ever—ever dare 400
 To sue thee to his heart? Kind stranger-youth!
 I lov'd her to the very white of truth,
 And she would not conceive it. Timid thing!
 She fled me swift as sea-bird on the wing,
 Round every isle, and point, and promontory,
 From where large Hercules wound up his story
 Far as Egyptian Nile. My passion grew
 The more, the more I saw her dainty hue
 Gleam delicately through the azure clear:
 Until 'twas too fierce agony to bear; 410
 And in that agony, across my grief
 It flash'd, that Circe might find some relief—
 Cruel enchantress! So above the water
 I rear'd my head, and look'd for Phœbus' daughter.
 Ææa's isle was wondering at the moon:—
 It seem'd to whirl around me, and a swoon
 Left me dead-drifting to that fatal power.

"When I awoke, 'twas in a twilight bower;
 Just when the light of morn, with hum of bees,
 Stole through its verdurous matting of fresh trees.
 How sweet, and sweeter! for I heard a lyre, 421
 And over it a sighing voice expire.
 It ceased—I caught light footsteps; and anon
 The fairest face that morn e'er look'd upon
 Push'd through a screen of roses. Starry Jove!
 With tears, and smiles, and honey-words she wove
 A net whose thralldom was more bliss than all
 The range of flower'd Elysium. Thus did fall
 The dew of her rich speech: "Ah! Art awake?
 "O let me hear thee speak, for Cupid's sake! 430
 "I am so oppress'd with joy! Why, I have shed
 "An urn of tears, as though thou wert cold dead;
 "And now I find thee living, I will pour
 "From these devoted eyes their silver store,
 "Until exhausted of the latest drop,
 "So it will pleasure thee, and force thee stop

 "If thou art ripe to taste a long love dream; 440
 "If smiles, if dimples, tongues for ardour mute,
 "Hang in thy vision like a tempting fruit,
 "O let me pluck it for thee." Thus she link'd
 Her charming syllables, till indistinct
 Their music came to my o'er-sweeten'd soul;
 And then she hover'd over me, and stole
 So near, that if no nearer it had been
 This furrow'd visage thou hadst never seen.

 This fierce temptation went: and thou may'st not

"Who could resist? Who in this universe?
 She did so breathe ambrosia; so immerse
 My fine existence in a golden clime.
 She took me like a child of suckling time,
 And cradled me in roses. Thus condemn'd,
 The current of my former life was stemm'd,
 And to this arbitrary queen of sense
 I bow'd a tranced vassal: nor would thence 460
 Have mov'd, even though Amphion's harp had woo'd
 Me back to Scylla o'er the billows rude.
 For as Apollo each eve doth devise
 A new appareling for western skies;
 So every eve, nay every spendthrift hour
 Shed balmy consciousness within that bower.
 And I was free of haunts umbrageous;
 Could wander in the mazy forest-house
 Of squirrels, foxes shy, and antler'd deer,
 And birds from coverts innermost and drear 470
 Warbling for very joy mellifluous sorrow—
 To me new born delights!

“Now let me borrow,
For moments few, a temperament as stern
As Pluto's sceptre, that my words not burn
These uttering lips, while I in calm speech tell
How specious heaven was changed to real hell.

“One morn she left me sleeping: half awake
I sought for her smooth arms and lips, to slake
My greedy thirst with nectarous camel-draughts;
But she was gone. Whereat the barbed shafts 480
Of disappointment stuck in me so sore,
That out I ran and search'd the forest o'er.
Wandering about in pine and cedar gloom
Damp awe assail'd me; for there 'gan to boom
A sound of moan, an agony of sound,
Sepulchral from the distance all around.
Then came a conquering earth-thunder, and rumbled
That fierce complain to silence: while I stumbled
Down a precipitous path, as if impell'd.
I came to a dark valley.—Groanings swell'd 490
Poisonous about my ears, and louder grew,
The nearer I approach'd a flame's gaunt blue,
That glar'd before me through a thorny brake.
This fire, like the eye of gordian snake,
Bewitch'd me towards; and I soon was near
A sight too fearful for the feel of fear:
In thicket hid I curs'd the haggard scene—
The banquet of my arms, my arbour queen,
Seated upon an uptorn forest root;
And all around her shapes, wizzard and brute, 500
Laughing, and wailing, groveling, serpentine,
Showing tooth, tusk, and venom-bag, and sting!
O such deformities! Old Charon's self,
Should he give up awhile his penny pelf,
And take a dream 'mong rushes Stygian,
It could not be so phantasied. Fierce, wan,
And tyrannizing was the lady's look,
As over them a gnarled staff she shook.
Oft-times upon the sudden she laugh'd out,
And from a basket emptied to the rout 510

Clusters of grapes, the which they raven'd quick
 And roar'd for more; with many a hungry lick
 About their shaggy jaws. Avenging, slow,
 Anon she took a branch of mistletoe,
 And emptied on't a black dull-gurgling phial:
 Groan'd one and all, as if some piercing trial
 Was sharpening for their pitiable bones.
 She lifted up the charm: appealing groans
 From their poor breasts went sueing to her ear 520
 In vain; remorseless as an infant's bier
 She whisk'd against their eyes the sooty oil.
 Whereat was heard a noise of painful toil,
 Increasing gradual to a tempest rage,
 Shrieks, yells, and groans of torture-pilgrimage;
 Until their griev'd bodies 'gan to bloat
 And puff from the tail's end to stifled throat:
 Then was appalling silence: then a sight
 More wildering than all that hoarse affright;
 For the whole herd, as by a whirlwind writhen,
 Went through the dismal air like one huge Python
 Antagonizing Boreas,—and so vanish'd. 531
 Yet there was not a breath of wind: she banish'd
 These phantoms with a nod. Lo! from the dark
 Came waggish fauns, and nymphs, and satyrs stark,
 With dancing and loud revelry,—and went
 Swifter than centaurs after rapine bent.—
 Sighing an elephant appear'd and bow'd
 Before the fierce witch, speaking thus aloud
 In human accent: "Potent goddess! chief
 "Of pains resistless! make my being brief, 540
 "Or let me from this heavy prison fly:
 "Or give me to the air, or let me die!
 "I sue not for my happy crown again;

 Think, my deliverer, how desolate
 My waking must have been! disgust, and hate,
 And terrors manifold divided me
 A spoil amongst them. I prepar'd to flee

 I fled three days—when lo! before me stood
 Glaring the angry witch. O Dis, even now,

 A war-song of defiance 'gainst all hell.
 A hand was at my shoulder to compel
 My sullen steps; another 'fore my eyes

 Enforced, at the last by ocean's foam
 I found me; by my fresh, my native home.
 Its tempering coolness, to my life akin,
 Came salutary as I waded in; 610

 Battle to the swollen billow-ridge, and drave

But thou must nip this tender innocent
 Because I lov'd her?— Cold, O cold indeed

 Ribb'd and inlaid with coral, pebble, and pearl. 630
 Headlong I darted; at one eager swirl

In perilous bustle; while upon the deck
 Stood trembling creatures. I beheld the wreck;
 The final gulping; the poor struggling souls:
 I heard their cries amid loud thunder-rolls. 660
 O they had all been sav'd but crazed eld
 Annull'd my vigorous cravings: and thus quell'd
 And curb'd, think on't, O Latmian! did I sit
 Writhing with pity, and a cursing fit
 Against that hell-born Circe. The crew had gone,
 By one and one, to pale oblivion;
 And I was gazing on the surges prone,
 With many a scalding tear and many a groan,
 When at my feet emerg'd an old man's hand,
 Grasping this scroll, and this same slender wand. 670
 I knelt with pain—reach'd out my hand—had grasp'd
 These treasures—touch'd the knuckles—they un-clasp'd—

I caught a finger: but the downward weight
 O'erpowered me—it sank. Then 'gan abate
 The storm, and through chill aguish gloom outburst
 The comfortable sun. I was athirst
 To search the book, and in the warming air
 Parted its dripping leaves with eager care.
 Strange matters did it treat of, and drew on
 My soul page after page, till well-nigh won 680
 Into forgetfulness; when, stupefied,
 I read these words, and read again, and tried
 My eyes against the heavens, and read again.
 O what a load of misery and pain
 Each Atlas-line bore off!—a shine of hope
 Came gold around me, cheering me to cope
 Strenuous with hellish tyranny. Attend!
 For thou hast brought their promise to an end.

 Most piously ;—all lovers tempest-tost,
 And in the savage overwhelming lost,
 He shall deposit side by side, until

 Which done, and all these labours ripened,
 A youth, by heavenly power lov'd and led,
 Shall stand before him ; whom he shall direct

"Then," cried the young Endymion, overjoy'd,
 "We are twin brothers in this destiny!
 Say, I intreat thee, what achievement high
 Is, in this restless world, for me reserv'd.
 What! if from thee my wandering feet had swerv'd,
 Had we both perish'd?"—"Look!" the sage replied,
 "Dost thou not mark a gleaming through the tide,
 Of diverse brilliances? 'tis the edifice
 I told thee of, where lovely Scylla lies ;" 720
 And where I have enshrined piously
 All lovers, whom fell storms have doom'd to die
 Throughout my bondage." Thus discoursing, on
 They went till unobscur'd the porches shone ;
 Which hurryingly they gain'd, and enter'd straight.
 Sure never since king Neptune held his state
 Was seen such wonder underneath the stars.
 Turn to some level plain where haughty Mars
 Has legion'd all his battle ; and behold
 How every soldier, with firm foot, doth hold 730
 His even breast: see, many steeled squares,
 And rigid ranks of iron—whence who dares
 One step? Imagine further, line by line,

These warrior thousands on the field supine:—
 So in that crystal place, in silent rows,
 Poor lovers lay at rest from joys and woes.—
 The stranger from the mountains, breathless, trac'd
 Such thousands of shut eyes in order plac'd;
 Such ranges of white feet, and patient lips
 All ruddy,—for here death no blossom nips. 740
 He mark'd their brows and foreheads; saw their hair
 Put sleekly on one side with nicest care;
 And each one's gentle wrists, with reverence,
 Put cross-wise to its heart.

“Let us commence,”

Whisper'd the guide, stuttering with joy, “even now.”
 He spake, and, trembling like an aspen-bough,
 Began to tear his scroll in pieces small,
 Uttering the while some mumblings funeral.
 He tore it into pieces small as snow
 That drifts unfeather'd when bleak northerns blow;
 And having done it, took his dark blue cloak 751
 And bound it round Endymion: then struck
 His wand against the empty air times nine.—
 “What more there is to do, young man, is thine:
 But first a little patience; first undo
 This tangled thread, and wind it to a clue.
 Ah, gentle! 'tis as weak as spider's skein;
 And shouldst thou break it—What, is it done so clean?
 A power overshadows thee! O, brave!
 The spite of hell is tumbling to its grave. 760
 Here is a shell; 'tis pearly blank to me,
 Nor mark'd with any sign or charactery—
 Canst thou read aught? O read for pity's sake!
 Olympus! we are safe! Now, Carian, break
 This wand against yon lyre on the pedestal.”

’Twas done: and straight with sudden swell and fall
 Sweet music breath'd her soul away, and sigh'd
 A lullaby to silence.—“Youth! now strew

Those files of dead, scatter the same around, 770
 And thou wilt see the issue."—'Mid the sound
 Of flutes and viols, ravishing his heart,
 Endymion from Glaucus stood apart,
 And scatter'd in his face some fragments light.
 How lightning-swift the change! a youthful wight
 Smiling beneath a coral diadem,
 Out-sparkling sudden like an upturn'd gem,
 Appear'd, and, stepping to a beauteous corse,
 Kneel'd down beside it, and with tenderest force
 Press'd its cold hand, and wept,—and Scylla sigh'd!
 Endymion, with quick hand, the charm applied— 781
 The nymph arose: he left them to their joy,
 And onward went upon his high employ,
 Showering those powerful fragments on the dead.
 And, as he pass'd, each lifted up his head,
 As doth a flower at Apollo's touch.
 Death felt it to his inwards: 'twas too much:
 Death fell a weeping in his charnel-house.
 The Latmian persever'd along, and thus
 All were re-animated. There arose 790
 A noise of harmony, pulses and throes
 Of gladness in the air—while many, who
 Had died in mutual arms devout and true,
 Sprang to each other madly; and the rest
 Felt a high certainty of being blest.
 They gaz'd upon Endymion. Enchantment
 Grew drunken, and would have its head and bent.
 Delicious symphonies, like airy flowers,
 Budded, and swell'd, and, full-blown, shed full showers
 Of light, soft, unseen leaves of sounds divine. 800
 The two deliverers tasted a pure wine
 Of happiness, from fairy-press ooz'd out.
 Speechless they eyed each other, and about
 The fair assembly wander'd to and fro,
 Distracted with the richest overflow
 Of joy that ever pour'd from heaven.

—"Away!"

Shouted the new born god; "Follow, and pay
 Our piety to Neptunus supreme!"—

Then Scylla, blushing sweetly from her dream,
 They led on first, bent to her meek surprise, 810
 Through portal columns of a giant size,
 Into the vaulted, boundless emerald.
 Joyous all follow'd as the leader call'd,
 Down marble steps; pouring as easily
 As hour-glass sand,—and fast, as you might see
 Swallows obeying the south summer's call,
 Or swans upon a gentle waterfall.

Thus went that beautiful multitude, nor far,
 Ere from among some rocks of glittering spar.
 Just within ken, they saw descending thick 820
 Another multitude. Whereat more quick
 Moved either host. On a wide sand they met,
 And of those numbers every eye was wet;
 For each their old love found. A murmuring rose,
 Like what was never heard in all the throes
 Of wind and waters: 'tis past human wit
 To tell; 'tis dizziness to think of it.

This mighty consummation made, the host
 Mov'd on for many a league; and gain'd, and lost
 Huge sea-marks; vanward swelling in array, 830
 And from the rear diminishing away,—
 Till a faint dawn surpris'd them. Glaucus cried,
 "Behold! behold, the palace of his pride!
 God Neptune's palaces!" With noise increas'd,
 They shoulder'd on towards that brightening east.
 At every onward step proud domes arose
 In prospect,—diamond gleams, and golden glows
 Of amber 'gainst their faces levelling.
 Joyous, and many as the leaves in spring,

Rich opal domes were seen, on high upheld
 By jasper pillars, letting through their shafts
 A blush of coral. Copious wonder-draughts
 Each gazer drank; and deeper drank more near:
 For what poor mortals fragment up, as mere
 As marble was there lavish, to the vast
 Of one fair palace, that far far surpass'd,
 Even for common bulk, those olden three,
 Memphis, and Babylon, and Nineveh.

As large, as bright, as colour'd as the bow 850
 Of Iris, when unfading it doth show
 Beyond a silvery shower, was the arch
 Through which this Paphian army took its march,
 Into the outer courts of Neptune's state:
 Whence could be seen, direct, a golden gate,
 To which the leaders sped; but not half raught
 Ere it burst open swift as fairy thought,
 And made those dazzled thousands veil their eyes
 Like callow eagles at the first sunrise.
 Soon with an eagle nativeness their gaze 860
 Ripe from hue-golden swoons took all the blaze,
 And then, behold! large Neptune on his throne
 Of emerald deep: yet not exalt alone;
 At his right hand stood winged Love, and on
 His left sat smiling Beauty's paragon.

Far as the mariner on highest mast
 Can see all round upon the calmed vast,
 So wide was Neptune's hall: and as the blue
 Doth vault the waters, so the waters drew
 Their doming curtains, high, magnificent, 870
 Aw'd from the throne aloof;—and when storm-rent
 Disclos'd the thunder-gloomings in Jove's air;
 But sooth'd as now, flash'd sudden everywhere,
 Noiseless, sub-marine cloudlets, glittering
 Death to a human eye: for there did spring
 From natural west, and east, and south, and north,
 A light as of four sunsets, blazing forth

Till Triton blew his horn. The palace rang;
 The Nereids danc'd; the Syrens faintly sang;
 And the great Sea-King bow'd his dripping head. 890
 Then Love took wing, and from his pinions shed
 On all the multitude a nectarous dew.
 The ooze-born Goddess beckoned and drew
 Fair Scylla and her guides to conference;
 And when they reach'd the throned eminence
 She kist the sea-nymph's cheek,—who sat her down
 A toying with the doves. Then,—“Mighty crown

 “Thy vows were on a time to Nais paid:

 “Endymion! Ah! still wandering in the bands
 Of love? Now this is cruel. Since the hour
 I met thee in earth's bosom, all my power
 Have I put forth to serve thee. What, not yet
 Escap'd from dull mortality's harsh net?
 A little patience, youth! 'twill not be long,

 Where these are new and strange, are ominous.
 Aye, I have seen these signs in one of heaven,
 When others were all blind: and were I given
 To utter secrets, haply I might say

 So wait awhile expectant. Prythee soon,
 Even in the passing of thine honey-moon,

Visit thou my Cythera: thou wilt find
 Cupid well-natured, my Adonis kind;
 And pray persuade with thee—Ah, I have done,
 All blisses be upon thee, my sweet son!"— 921
 Thus the fair goddess: While Endymion
 Knelt to receive those accents halcyon.

Meantime a glorious revelry began
 Before the Water-Monarch. Nectar ran
 In courteous fountains to all cups outreach'd;
 And plunder'd vines, teeming exhaustless, pleach'd
 New growth about each shell and pendent lyre;
 The which, in disentangling for their fire,
 Pull'd down fresh foliage and coverture 920
 For dainty toying. Cupid, empire-sure,
 Flutter'd and laugh'd, and oft-times through the throng
 Made a delighted way. Then dance, and song,
 And garlanding grew wild; and pleasure reign'd.
 In harmless tendril they each other chain'd,
 And strove who should be smother'd deepest in Fresh crush of leaves.

O 'tis a very sin
 For one so weak to venture his poor verse
 In such a place as this. O do not curse,
 High Muses! let him hurry to the ending. 940

All suddenly were silent. A soft blending
 Of dulcet instruments came charmingly;
 And then a hymn.

"KING of the stormy sea!

 Skulks to his cavern, 'mid the gruff complaint

 Can mingle music fit for the soft ear
 Of goddess Cytherea!
 Yet deign, white Queen of Beauty, thy fair eyes
 On our souls' sacrifice.

“Bright-winged Child!
 Who has another care when thou hast smil'd?
 Unfortunates on earth, we see at last 980
 All death-shadows, and glooms that overcast
 Our spirits, fann'd away by thy light pinions.
 O sweetest essence! sweetest of all minions!
 God of warm pulses, and dishevell'd hair,
 And panting bosoms bare!
 Dear unseen light in darkness! eclipser
 Of light in light! delicious poisoner!

954-6 When thy bright diadem a silver gleam
 O'er blue dominion starts. Thy finny team
 Snorts in the morning light, and sends along... Draft.

Thy venom'd goblet will we quaff until
 We fill—we fill!
 And by thy Mother's lips——”

Was heard no more 990

For clamour, when the golden palace door
 Opened again, and from without, in shone
 A new magnificence. On oozy throne
 Smooth-moving came Oceanus the old,
 To take a latest glimpse at his sheep-fold,
 Before he went into his quiet cave
 To muse for ever—Then a lucid wave,
 Scoop'd from its trembling sisters of mid-sea,
 Afloat, and pillowing up the majesty
 Of Doris, and the Ægean seer, her spouse— 1000
 Next, on a dolphin, clad in laurel boughs,
 Theban Amphion leaning on his lute:
 His fingers went across it—All were mute
 To gaze on Amphitrite, queen of pearls,
 And Thetis pearly too.—

The palace whirls

Around giddy Endymion; seeing he
 Was there far strayed from mortality.
 He could not bear it—shut his eyes in vain;
 Imagination gave a dizzier pain.
 “O I shall die! sweet Venus, be my stay! 1010
 Where is my lovely mistress? Well-away!
 I die—I hear her voice—I feel my wing—”
 At Neptune's feet he sank. A sudden ring
 Of Nereids were about him, in kind strife
 To usher back his spirit into life:
 But still he slept. At last they interwove
 Their cradling arms, and purpos'd to convey
 Towards a crystal bower far away.

Lo! while slow carried through the pitying crowd,

1007 Was there, a stray lamb from mortality. Draft.
 1012 I die—love calls me hence”—thus muttering... Draft.
 1016-18 They gave him nectar—shed bright drops, and strove
 Long time in vain. At last they interwove
 Their cradling arms, and carefully conveyed
 His body towards a quiet bowery shade. Draft.

To his inward senses these words spake aloud; 1020
 Written in star-light on the dark above:
Dearest Endymion! my entire love!
How have I dwelt in fear of fate: 'tis done—
Immortal bliss for me too hast thou won.
Arise then! for the hen-dove shall not hatch
Her ready eggs, before I'll kissing snatch
Thee into endless heaven. Awake! awake!

The youth at once arose: a placid lake
 Came quiet to his eyes; and forest green,
 Cooler than all the wonders he had seen,
 Lull'd with its simple song his fluttering breast. 1030
 How happy once again in grassy nest!

BOOK IV

MUSE of my native land! loftiest Muse!
 O first-born on the mountains! by the hues
 Of heaven on the spiritual air begot:
 Long didst thou sit alone in northern grot,
 While yet our England was a wolfish den;
 Before our forests heard the talk of men;
 Before the first of Druids was a child;—
 Long didst thou sit amid our regions wild
 Rapt in a deep prophetic solitude.
 There came an eastern voice of solemn mood:— 10
 Yet wast thou patient. Then sang forth the Nine,
 Apollo's garland:—yet didst thou divine
 Such home-bred glory, that they cry'd in vain,
 "Come hither, Sister of the Island!" Plain
 Spake fair Ausonia; and once more she spake
 A higher summons:—still didst thou betake
 Thee to thy native hopes. O thou hast won
 A full accomplishment! The thing is done,
 Which undone, these our latter days had risen
 On barren souls. Great Muse, thou know'st what prison,

16 In self surpassing summons Draft.

Of flesh and bone, curbs, and confines, and frets 21
 Our spirit's wings: despondency besets
 Our pillows; and the fresh to-morrow morn
 Seems to give forth its light in very scorn
 Of our dull, uninspired, snail-paced lives.
 Long have I said, how happy he who shrives
 To thee! But then I thought on poets gone,
 And could not pray:—nor could I now—so on
 I move to the end in lowliness of heart.—

“Ah, woe is me! that I should fondly part 20
 From my dear native land! Ah, foolish maid!
 Glad was the hour, when, with thee, myriads bade
 Adieu to Ganges and their pleasant fields!
 To one so friendless the clear freshet yields
 A bitter coolness; the ripe grape is sour:
 Yet I would have, great gods! but one short hour
 Of native air—let me but die at home.”

Endymion to heaven's airy dome
 Was offering up a hecatomb of vows,
 When these words reach'd him. Whereupon he bows
 His head through thorny-green entanglement 41
 Of underwood, and to the sound is bent,
 Anxious as hind towards her hidden fawn.

“Is no one near to help me? No fair dawn
 Of life from charitable voice? No sweet saying
 To set my dull and sadden'd spirit playing?
 No hand to toy with mine? No lips so sweet
 That I may worship them? No eyelids meet
 To twinkle on my bosom? No one dies
 Before me, till from these enslaving eyes 50
 Redemption sparkles!—I am sad and lost.”

34 Where no friends are, the very freshet yields Draft.

36 Then take my life, great Gods! for one short hour Draft.

49-54 To twinkle on my bosom! false! 'twas false
 They said how beautiful I was! who calls
 Me now divine? Who now kneels down and dies
 Before me till from these enslaving eyes
 Redemption sparkles. Ah me how sad I am!

Thou, Carian lord, hadst better have been tost
 Into a whirlpool. Vanish into air,
 Warm mountaineer! for canst thou only bear
 A woman's sigh alone and in distress?
 See not her charms! Is Phœbe passionless?
 Phœbe is fairer far—O gaze no more:—
 Yet if thou wilt behold all beauty's store,
 Behold her panting in the forest grass!
 Do not those curls of glossy jet surpass 60
 For tenderness the arms so idly lain
 Amongst them? Feelest not a kindred pain,
 To see such lovely eyes in swimming search
 After some warm delight, that seems to perch
 Dovelike in the dim cell lying beyond
 Their upper lids?—Hist!

“O for Hermes' wand,
 To touch this flower into human shape!
 That woodland Hyacinthus could escape
 From his green prison, and here kneeling down
 Call me his queen, his second life's fair crown! 70
 Ah me, how I could love!—My soul doth melt
 For the unhappy youth—Love! I have felt
 So faint a kindness, such a meek surrender
 To what my own full thoughts had made too tender,
 That but for tears my life had fled away!—
 Ye deaf and senseless minutes of the day,
 And thou, old forest, hold ye this for true,
 There is no lightning, no authentic dew
 But in the eye of love: there's not a sound,
 Melodious howsoever, can confound 80
 The heavens and earth in one to such a death
 As doth the voice of love: there's not a breath
 Will mingle kindly with the meadow air,

Of all the poisons sent to make us mad
 Of all death's overwhelmings”—Stay Beware
 Young Mountaineer! Draft.

 72-3 After some beauteous youth—Who, who hath felt
 So warm a faintness, such a meek surrender Draft.
 76-7 Sweet shadow, be distinct awhile and stay
 While I speak to thee—trust me it is true... Draft.

Who stolen hast away the wings wherewith
 I was to top the heavens. Dear maid, sith 110
 Thou art my executioner, and I feel
 Loving and hatred, misery and weal,
 Will in a few short hours be nothing to me,
 And all my story that much passion slew me;
 Do smile upon the evening of my days:
 And, for my tortur'd brain begins to craze,
 Be thou my nurse; and let me understand
 How dying I shall kiss that lilly hand.—
 Dost weep for me? Then should I be content.
 Scowl on, ye fates! until the firmament 120
 Outblackens Erebus, and the full-cavern'd earth
 Crumbles into itself. By the cloud girth
 Of Jove, those tears have given me a thirst
 To meet oblivion."—As her heart would burst
 The maiden sobb'd awhile, and then replied:
 "Why must such desolation betide
 As that thou speak'st of? Are not these green nooks
 Empty of all misfortune? Do the brooks
 Utter a gorgon voice? Does yonder thrush,
 Schooling its half-fledg'd little ones to brush 130
 About the dewy forest, whisper tales?—
 Speak not of grief, young stranger, or cold snails
 Will slime the rose to night. Though if thou wilt,
 Methinks 'twould be a guilt—a very guilt—
 Not to companion thee, and sigh away
 The light—the dusk—the dark—till break of day!"
 "Dear lady," said Endymion, "'tis past:

127 speakst MS. : speakest 1818.

137-45 Canst thou do so? Is there no balm, no cure
 Could not a beckoning Hebe soon allure
 Thee into Paradise? What sorrowing
 So weighs thee down what utmost woe could bring
 This madness—Sit thee down by me, and ease
 Thine heart in whispers—haply by degrees
 I may find out some soothing medicine."—
 "Dear Lady," said Endymion, "I pine
 I die—the tender accents thou hast spoken
 Have finish'd all—my heart is lost and broken.
 That I may pass in patience still speak:
 Let me have music dying, and I seek
 No more delight—I bid adieu to all.
 Didst thou not after other climates call

I love thee! and my days can never last.
 That I may pass in patience still speak:
 Let me have music dying, and I seek 140
 No more delight—I bid adieu to all.
 Didst thou not after other climates call,
 And murmur about Indian streams?"—Then she,
 Sitting beneath the midmost forest tree,
 For pity sang this roundelay——

“O Sorrow,
 Why dost borrow
 The natural hue of health, from vermeil lips?—
 To give maiden blushes
 To the white rose bushes? 150
 Or is't thy dewy hand the daisy tips?

“O Sorrow,
 Why dost borrow
 The lustrous passion from a falcon-eye?—
 To give the glow-worm light?
 Or, on a moonless night,
 To tinge, on syren shores, the salt sea-spry?

“O Sorrow,
 Why dost borrow
 The mellow ditties from a mourning tongue?— 160
 To give at evening pale
 Unto the nightingale,
 That thou mayst listen the cold dews among?

“O Sorrow,
 Why dost borrow
 Heart's lightness from the merriment of May?—
 A lover would not tread
 A cowslip on the head,
 Though he should dance from eve till peep of day—
 Nor any drooping flower 170
 Held sacred for thy bower,
 Wherever he may sport himself and play.

And murmur about Indian streams—now, now—
 I listen, it may save me—O my vow—
 Let me have music dying!" The ladye
 Sitting beneath the midmost forest tree
 With tears of pity sang this roundelay— Draft.

"To Sorrow,
 I bade good-morrow,
 And thought to leave her far away behind;
 But cheerly, cheerly,
 She loves me dearly;
 She is so constant to me, and so kind:
 I would deceive her
 And so leave her,
 But ah! she is so constant and so kind.

180

"Beneath my palm trees, by the river side,
 I sat a weeping: in the whole world wide
 There was no one to ask me why I wept,—
 And so I kept
 Brimming the water-lilly cups with tears
 Cold as my fears.

"Beneath my palm trees, by the river side,
 I sat a weeping: what enamour'd bride,
 Cheated by shadowy wooer from the clouds,
 But hides and shrouds
 Beneath dark palm trees by a river side?

190

"And as I sat, over the light blue hills
 There came a noise of revellers: the rills
 Into the wide stream came of purple hue—
 'Twas Bacchus and his crew!

The earnest trumpet spake, and silver thrills
 From kissing cymbals made a merry din—
 'Twas Bacchus and his kin!

Like to a moving vintage down they came, 200
 Crown'd with green leaves, and faces all on flame;
 All madly dancing through the pleasant valley,

To scare thee, Melancholy!
 O then, O then, thou wast a simple name!
 And I forgot thee, as the berried holly
 By shepherds is forgotten, when, in June,
 Tall chesnuts keep away the sun and moon:—
 I rush'd into the folly!

"Within his car, aloft, young Bacchus stood,
 Trifling his ivy-dart, in dancing mood,
 With sidelong laughing;

210

And little rills of crimson wine imbrued
 His plump white arms, and shoulders, enough white
 For Venus' pearly bite:
 And near him rode Silenus on his ass,
 Pelted with flowers as he on did pass
 Tipsily quaffing.

"Whence came ye, merry Damsels! whence came ye!
 So many, and so many, and such glee?
 Why have ye left your bowers desolate, 220
 Your lutes, and gentler fate?—
 'We follow Bacchus! Bacchus on the wing,
 A conquering!
 Bacchus, young Bacchus! good or ill betide,
 We dance before him thorough kingdoms wide:—
 Come hither, lady fair, and joined be
 To our wild minstrelsy!'

"Whence came ye, jolly Satyrs! whence came ye!
 So many, and so many, and such glee?
 Why have ye left your forest haunts, why left 230
 Your nuts in oak-tree cleft?—
 'For wine, for wine we left our kernel tree;
 For wine we left our heath, and yellow brooms,
 And cold mushrooms;
 For wine we follow Bacchus through the earth;
 Great God of breathless cups and chirping mirth!—
 Come hither, lady fair, and joined be
 To our mad minstrelsy!'

"Over wide streams and mountains great we went,
 And, save when Bacchus kept his ivy tent, 240
 Onward the tiger and the leopard pants,
 With Asian elephants:
 Onward these myriads—with song and dance,
 With zebras striped, and sleek Arabians' prance,
 Web-footed alligators, crocodiles,
 Bearing upon their scaly backs, in files,
 Plump infant laughers mimicking the coil
 Of seamen, and stout galley-rowers' toil:
 With toying oars and silken sails they glide,
 Nor care for wind and tide. 250

"Mounted on panthers' furs and lions' manes,
 From rear to van they scour about the plains;
 A three days' journey in a moment done:
 And always, at the rising of the sun,
 About the wilds they hunt with spear and horn,
 On spleenful unicorn.

"I saw Osirian Egypt kneel adown
 Before the vine-wreath crown!
 I saw parch'd Abyssinia rouse and sing
 To the silver cymbals' ring! 260
 I saw the whelming vintage hotly pierce
 Old Tartary the fierce!
 The kings of Inde their jewel-sceptres vail,
 And from their treasures scatter pearly hail;
 Great Brahma from his mystic heaven groans,
 And all his priesthood moans;
 Before young Bacchus' eye-wink turning pale.—
 Into these regions came I following him,
 Sick hearted, weary—so I took a whim
 To stray away into these forests drear 270
 Alone, without a peer:
 And I have told thee all thou mayest hear.

"Young stranger!
 I've been a ranger
 In search of pleasure throughout every clime:
 Alas, 'tis not for me!
 Bewitch'd I sure must be,
 To lose in grieving all my maiden prime.

"Come then, Sorrow!
 Sweetest Sorrow! 280
 Like an own babe I nurse thee on my breast:
 I thought to leave thee
 And deceive thee,
 But now of all the world I love thee best.

"There is not one,
 No, no, not one
 But thee to comfort a poor lonely maid;
 Thou art her mother,
 And her brother,
 Her playmate, and her wooer in the shade." 290

O what a sigh she gave in finishing,
 And look, quite dead to every worldly thing!
 Endymion could not speak, but gazed on her;
 And listened to the wind that now did stir
 About the crisped oaks full drearily,
 Yet with as sweet a softness as might be
 Remember'd from its velvet summer song.
 At last he said: "Poor lady, how thus long
 Have I been able to endure that voice?
 Fair Melody! kind Syren! I've no choice; 300
 I must be thy sad servant evermore:
 I cannot choose but kneel here and adore.
 Alas, I must not think—by Phoebe, no!
 Let me not think, soft Angel! shall it be so?
 Say, beautifullest, shall I never think?
 O thou could'st foster me beyond the brink
 Of recollection! make my watchful care
 Close up its bloodshot eyes, nor see despair!
 Do gently murder half my soul, and I
 Shall feel the other half so utterly!— 310
 I'm giddy at that cheek so fair and smooth;
 O let it blush so ever! let it soothe
 My madness! let it mantle rosy-warm
 With the tinge of love, panting in safe alarm.—
 This cannot be thy hand, and yet it is;
 And this is sure thine other softling—this
 Thine own fair bosom, and I am so near!
 Wilt fall asleep? O let me sip that tear!
 And whisper one sweet word that I may know
 This is this world—sweet dewy blossom!"—Woe! 320
Woe! Woe to that Endymion! Where is he?—
 Even these words went echoing dismally
 Through the wide forest—a most fearful tone,
 Like one repenting in his latest moan;
 And while it died away a shade pass'd by,
 As of a thunder cloud. When arrows fly
 Through the thick branches, poor ring-doves sleek forth
 Their timid necks and tremble; so these both
 Leant to each other trembling, and sat so
 Waiting for some destruction—when lo, 330
 Foot-feather'd Mercury appear'd sublime
 Beyond the tall tree tops; and in less time

Than shoots the slanted hail-storm, down he dropt
 Towards the ground; but rested not, nor stopt
 One moment from his home: only the sward
 He with his wand light touch'd, and heavenward
 Swifter than sight was gone—even before
 The teeming earth a sudden witness bore
 Of his swift magic. Diving swans appear
 Above the crystal circlings white and clear; 340
 And catch the cheated eye in wide surprise,
 How they can dive in sight and unseen rise—
 So from the turf outsprang two steeds jet-black,
 Each with large dark blue wings upon his back.
 The youth of Caria plac'd the lovely dame
 On one, and felt himself in spleen to tame
 The other's fierceness. Through the air they flew,
 High as the eagles. Like two drops of dew
 Exhal'd to Phœbus' lips, away they are gone,
 Far from the earth away—unseen, alone, 350
 Among cool clouds and winds, but that the free,
 The buoyant life of song can floating be
 Above their heads, and follow them untir'd.—
 Muse of my native land, am I inspir'd?
 This is the giddy air, and I must spread
 Wide pinions to keep here; nor do I dread
 Or height, or depth, or width, or any chance
 Precipitous: I have beneath my glance
 Those towering horses and their mournful freight.
 Could I thus sail, and see, and thus await 360
 Fearless for power of thought, without thine aid?—

There is a sleepy dusk, an odorous shade
 From some approaching wonder, and behold
 Those winged steeds, with snorting nostrils bold
 Snuff at its faint extreme, and seem to tire,
 Dying to embers from their native fire!

There curl'd a purple mist around them; soon,
 It seem'd as when around the pale new moon
 Sad Zephyr droops the clouds like weeping willow:
 'Twas Sleep slow journeying with head on pillow. 370

341 wide surprise Draft and MS.: wild surprise 1818.

366 Seeming but embers to their former fire. Draft.

For the first time, since he came nigh dead born.
 From the old womb of night, his cave forlorn
 Had he left more forlorn; for the first time,
 He felt aloof the day and morning's prime—
 Because into his depth Cimmerian
 There came a dream, showing how a young man,
 Ere a lean bat could plump its wintry skin,
 Would at high Jove's empyreal footstool win
 An immortality, and how espouse
 Jove's daughter, and be reckon'd of his house. 380
 Now was he slumbering towards heaven's gate,
 That he might at the threshold one hour wait
 To hear the marriage melodies, and then
 Sink downward to his dusky cave again.
 His litter of smooth semiluculent mist,
 Diversely ting'd with rose and amethyst,
 Puzzled those eyes that for the centre sought;
 And scarcely for one moment could be caught
 His sluggish form reposing motionless.
 Those two on winged steeds, with all the stress 390
 Of vision search'd for him, as one would look
 Athwart the sallows of a river nook
 To catch a glance at silver-throated eels,—
 Or from old Skiddaw's top, when fog conceals
 His rugged forehead in a mantle pale,
 With an eye-guess towards some pleasant vale
 Descry a favourite hamlet faint and far.

These raven horses, though they foster'd are
 Of earth's splenetic fire, dully drop
 Their full-vein'd ears, nostrils blood wide, and stop; 400
 Upon the spiritless mist have they outspread
 Their ample feathers, are in slumber dead,—
 And on those pinions, level in mid air,
 Endymion sleepeth and the lady fair.
 Slowly they sail, slowly as icy isle
 Upon a calm sea drifting: and meanwhile
 The mournful wanderer dreams. Behold! he walks
 On heaven's pavement; brotherly he talks
 To divine powers: from his hand full fain
 Juno's proud birds are pecking pearly grain: 410
 He tries the nerve of Phœbus' golden bow,

And asketh where the golden apples grow :
 Upon his arm he braces Pallas' shield,
 And strives in vain to unsettle and wield
 A Jovian thunderbolt : arch Hebe brings
 A full-brimm'd goblet, dances lightly, sings
 And tantalizes long ; at last he drinks,
 And lost in pleasure at her feet he sinks,
 Touching with dazzled lips her starlight hand.
 He blows a bugle,—an ethereal band 420
 Are visible above : the Seasons four,—
 Green-kyrtled Spring, flush Summer, golden store
 In Autumn's sickle, Winter frosty hoar,
 Join dance with shadowy Hours ; while still the blast,
 In swells unmitigated, still doth last
 To sway their floating morris. "Whose is this?
 Whose bugle?" he inquires ; they smile—"O Dis!
 Why is this mortal here? Dost thou not know
 Its mistress' lips? Not thou?—'Tis Dian's : lo!
 She rises crescented!" He looks, 'tis she, 430
 His very goddess : good-bye earth, and sea,
 And air, and pains, and care, and suffering ;
 Good-bye to all but love ! Then doth he spring
 Towards her, and awakes—and, strange, o'erhead,
 Of those same fragrant exhalations bred,
 Beheld awake his very dream : the gods
 Stood smiling ; merry Hebe laughs and nods ;
 And Phœbe bends towards him crescented.
 O state perplexing ! On the pinion bed,
 Too well awake, he feels the panting side 440
 Of his delicious lady. He who died
 For soaring too audacious in the sun,
 When that same treacherous wax began to run,

418 With pleasure at her knees he swoons and sinks, Draft.

429-30 In both manuscripts the preceding line stands rhymeless, and these two stand thus—

Its Mistress' Lips? Not thou? Ah, Ah, Ah, Ah!
 'Tis Dian's, here she comes, look out afar,

so that by compression two very noticeable flaws were remedied.

442-4 Because in sunshine treacherous wax would melt,
 Even at the fatal melting thereof, felt
 Not more tongue-tied than did Endymion. Draft.

443 When MS. : Where 1818.

Felt not more tongue-tied than Endymion.
 His heart leapt up as to its rightful throne,
 To that fair shadow'd passion puls'd its way—
 Ah, what perplexity! Ah, well a day!
 So fond, so beauteous was his bed-fellow,
 He could not help but kiss her: then he grew
 Awhile forgetful of all beauty save 450
 Young Phœbe's, golden hair'd; and so 'gan crave
 Forgiveness: yet he turn'd once more to look
 At the sweet sleeper,—all his soul was shook,—
 She press'd his hand in slumber; so once more
 He could not help but kiss her and adore.
 At this the shadow wept, melting away.
 The Latmian started up: "Bright goddess, stay!
 Search my most hidden breast! By truth's own tongue,
 I have no dædale heart: why is it wrung
 To desperation? Is there nought for me, 460
 Upon the bourne of bliss, but misery?"

These words awoke the stranger of dark tresses:
 Her dawning love-look rapt Endymion blesses
 With 'haviour soft. Sleep yawn'd from underneath.
 "Thou swan of Ganges, let us no more breathe
 This murky phantasm! thou contented seem'st
 Pillow'd in lovely idleness, nor dream'st
 What horrors may discomfort thee and me.
 Ah, shouldst thou die from my heart-treachery!—
 Yet did she merely weep—her gentle soul 470
 Hath no revenge in it: as it is whole
 In tenderness, would I were whole in love!
 Can I prize thee, fair maid, all price above,
 Even when I feel as true as innocence?
 I do, I do.—What is this soul then? Whence Came it? It does not seem my own, and I
 Have no self-passion or identity.
 Some fearful end must be: where, where is it?
 By Nemesis, I see my spirit flit
 Alone about the dark—Forgive me, sweet: 480
 Shall we away?" He rous'd the steeds: they beat
 Their wings chivalrous into the clear air,
 Leaving old Sleep within his vapoury lair.

The good-night blush of eve was waning slow.

And Vesper, risen star, began to throe
 In the dusk heavens silverly, when they
 Thus sprang direct towards the Galaxy.
 Nor did speed hinder converse soft and strange—
 Eternal oaths and vows they interchange,
 In such wise, in such temper, so aloof 450
 Up in the winds, beneath a starry roof,
 So witless of their doom, that verily
 'Tis well nigh past man's search their hearts to see;
 Whether they wept, or laugh'd, or griev'd, or toy'd—
 Most like with joy gone mad, with sorrow cloy'd.

Full facing their swift flight, from ebon streak,
 The moon put forth a little diamond peak,
 No bigger than an unobserved star,
 Or tiny point of fairy seymetar;
 Bright signal that she only stoop'd to tie 500
 Her silver sandals, ere deliciously
 She bow'd into the heavens her timid head.
 Slowly she rose, as though she would have fled,
 While to his lady meek the Carian turn'd,
 To mark if her dark eyes had yet discern'd
 This beauty in its birth—Despair! despair!
 He saw her body fading gaunt and spare
 In the cold moonshine. Straight he seiz'd her wrist;
 It melted from his grasp: her hand he kiss'd,
 And, horror! kiss'd his own—he was alone. 510
 Her steed a little higher soar'd, and then
 Dropt hawkwise to the earth.

There lies a den,
 Beyond the seeming confines of the space
 Made for the soul to wander in and trace
 Its own existence, of remotest glooms.
 Dark regions are around it, where the tombs
 Of buried griefs the spirit sees, but scarce
 One hour doth linger weeping, for the pierce
 Of new-born woe it feels more inly smart:
 And in these regions many a venom'd dart 520
 At random flies; they are the proper home
 Of every ill: the man is yet to come
 Who hath not journeyed in this native hell.
 But few have ever felt how calm and well

Sleep may be had in that deep den of all.
 There anguish does not sting; nor pleasure pall:
 Woe-hurricanes beat ever at the gate,
 Yet all is still within and desolate.
 Beset with plainful gusts, within ye hear
 No sound so loud as when on curtain'd bier 530
 The death-watch tick is stifled. Enter none
 Who strive therefore: on the sudden it is won.
 Just when the sufferer begins to burn,
 Then it is free to him; and from an urn,
 Still fed by melting ice, he takes a draught—
 Young Semele such richness never quaff
 In her maternal longing! Happy gloom!
 Dark Paradise! where pale becomes the bloom
 Of health by due; where silence dreariest 540
 Is most articulate; where hopes infest;
 Where those eyes are the brightest far that keep
 Their lids shut longest in a dreamless sleep.
 O happy spirit-home! O wondrous soul!
 Pregnant with such a den to save the whole
 In thine own depth. Hail, gentle Carian!
 For, never since thy griefs and woes began,
 Hast thou felt so content: a grievous feud
 Hath led thee to this Cave of Quietude.
 Aye, his lull'd soul was there, although upborne
 With dangerous speed: and so he did not mourn
 Because he knew not whither he was going. 551
 So happy was he, not the aerial blowing
 Of trumpets at clear parley from the east
 Could rouse from that fine relish, that high feast.
 They stung the feather'd horse: with fierce alarm
 He flapp'd towards the sound. Alas, no charm
 Could lift Endymion's head, or he had view'd
 A skye mask, a pinion'd multitude,—

'Twas like a gift of Prophecy—alert

The feather'd horse he snorted with alarm

And towards it flapp'd away—Alas no charm... Draft.

And silvery was its passing: voices sweet
 Warbling the while as if to lull and greet 560
 The wanderer in his path. Thus warbled they,
 While past the vision went in bright array.

"Who, who from Dian's feast would be away?
 For all the golden bowers of the day
 Are empty left? Who, who away would be
 From Cynthia's wedding and festivity?
 Not Hesperus: lo! upon his silver wings
 He leans away for highest heaven and sings,
 Snapping his lucid fingers merrily!—
 Ah, Zephyrus! art here, and Flora too! 570
 Ye tender bibbers of the rain and dew,
 Young playmates of the rose and daffodil,
 Be careful, ere ye enter in, to fill

Your baskets high
 With fennel green, and balm, and golden pines,
 Savory, latter-mint, and columbines,
 Cool parsley, basil sweet, and sunny thyme;
 Yea, every flower and leaf of every clime,
 All gather'd in the dewy morning: hie

Away! fly, fly!— 580
 Crystalline brother of the belt of heaven,
 Aquarius! to whom king Jove has given
 Two liquid pulse streams 'stead of feather'd wings,
 Two fan-like fountains,—thine illuminings

For Dian play:
 Dissolve the frozen purity of air;
 Let thy white shoulders silvery and bare
 Show cold through watery pinions; make more bright
 The Star-Queen's crescent on her marriage night:

 Are empty left? Who, who away would be
 From Cynthia's wedding and festivity?

Castor has tamed the planet Lion, see!
And of the Bear has Pollux mastery:
A third is in the race! who is the third
Speeding away swift as the eagle bird?

The ramping Centaur!

The Lion's mane's on end: the Bear how fierce!
The Centaur's arrow ready seems to pierce
Some enemy: far forth his bow is bent
Into the blue of heaven. He'll be shent,

Pale unrelentor,

When he shall hear the wedding lutes a playing.—
Andromeda! sweet woman! why delaying
So timidly among the stars: come hither!
Join this bright throng, and nimbly follow whither

They all are going.

Danae's Son, before Jove newly bow'd,
Has wept for thee, calling to Jove aloud.
Thee, gentle lady, did he disenthral:
Ye shall for ever live and love, for all

Thy tears are flowing.—

By Daphne's fright, behold Apollo!—”

Endymion heard not: down his steed him bore,
Prone to the green head of a misty hill.

His first touch of the earth went nigh to kill.
“Alas!” said he, “were I but always borne
Through dangerous winds, had but my footsteps worn
A path in hell, for ever would I bless
Horrors which nourish an uneasiness
For my own sullen conquering: to him
Who lives beyond earth's boundary, grief is dim,
Sorrow is but a shadow: now I see
The grass; I feel the solid ground—Ah, me!
It is thy voice—divinest! Where?—who? who Left thee so quiet on this bed of dew?
Behold upon this happy earth we are;
Let us aye love each other; let us fare

On forest-fruits, and never, never go
 Among the abodes of mortals here below,
 Or be by phantoms duped. O destiny!
 Into a labyrinth now my soul would fly, 630
 But with thy beauty will I deaden it.
 Where didst thou melt to? By thee will I sit
 For ever: let our fate stop here—a kid
 I on this spot will offer: Pan will bid
 Us live in peace, in love and peace among
 His forest wildernesses. I have clung
 To nothing, lov'd a nothing, nothing seen
 Or felt but a great dream! O I have been
 Presumptuous against love, against the sky,
 Against all elements, against the tie 640
 Of mortals each to each, against the blooms
 Of flowers, rush of rivers, and the tombs
 Of heroes gone! Against his proper glory
 Has my own soul conspired: so my story
 Will I to children utter, and repent.
 There never liv'd a mortal man, who bent
 His appetite beyond his natural sphere,
 But starv'd and died. My sweetest Indian, here,
 Here will I kneel, for thou redeemed hast
 My life from too thin breathing: gone and past 650
 Are cloudy phantasms. Caverns lone, farewell!
 And air of visions, and the monstrous swell
 Of visionary seas! No, never more
 Shall airy voices cheat me to the shore
 Of tangled wonder, breathless and aghast.
 Adieu, my daintiest Dream! although so vast
 My love is still for thee. The hour may come
 When we shall meet in pure elysium.
 On earth I may not love thee; and therefore
 Doves will I offer up, and sweetest store 660
 All through the teeming year: so thou wilt shine
 On me, and on this damsel fair of mine,
 And bless our silver lives. My Indian bliss!
 My river-lilly bud! one human kiss!
 One sign of real breath—one gentle squeeze,

632 The finished manuscript and the first edition read too for to;
but as the question is repeated in line 668 in the words Whither didst
melt, there can be no doubt as to the right reading.

Warm as a dove's nest among summer trees,
 And warm with dew at ooze from living blood!
 Whither didst melt? Ah, what of that!—all good
 We'll talk about—no more of dreaming.—Now,
 Where shall our dwelling be? Under the brow 670
 Of some steep mossy hill, where ivy dun
 Would hide us up, although spring leaves were none;
 And where dark yew trees, as we rustle through,
 Will drop their scarlet berry cups of dew?
 O thou wouldst joy to live in such a place;
 Dusk for our loves, yet light enough to grace
 Those gentle limbs on mossy bed reclin'd:
 For by one step the blue sky shouldst thou find,
 And by another, in deep dell below,
 See, through the trees, a little river go 680
 All in its mid-day gold and glimmering.
 Honey from out the gnarled hive I'll bring,
 And apples, wan with sweetness, gather thee,—
 Cresses that grow where no man may them see,
 And sorrel untorn by the dew-claw'd stag:
 Pipes will I fashion of the syrinx flag,
 That thou mayst always know whither I roam,
 When it shall please thee in our quiet home
 To listen and think of love. Still let me speak;
 Still let me dive into the joy I seek,— 690
 For yet the past doth prison me. The rill,
 Thou haply mayst delight in, will I fill
 With fairy fishes from the mountain tarn,
 And thou shalt feed them from the squirrel's barn.
 Its bottom will I strew with amber shells,
 And pebbles blue from deep enchanted wells.
 Its sides I'll plant with dew-sweet eglantine,
 And honeysuckles full of clear bee-wine.
 I will entice this crystal rill to trace
 Love's silver name upon the meadow's face. 700
 I'll kneel to Vesta, for a flame of fire;
 And to god Phœbus, for a golden lyre;
 To Empress Dian, for a hunting spear;

700 After this line there is a couplet in the MS., which does not appear in the printed book:—

And by it shalt thou sit and sing, hey nonny!
 While doves coo to thee for a little honey.

To Vesper, for a taper silver-clear,
 That I may see thy beauty through the night;
 To Flora, and a nightingale shall light
 Tame on thy finger; to the River-gods,
 And they shall bring thee taper fishing-rods
 Of gold, and lines of Naiads' long bright tress.
 Heaven shield thee for thine utter loveliness! 710
 Thy mossy footstool shall the altar be
 'Fore which I'll bend, bending, dear love, to thee:
 Those lips shall be my Delphos, and shall speak
 Laws to my footsteps, colour to my cheek,
 Trembling or stedfastness to this same voice,
 And of three sweetest pleasurings the choice:
 And that affectionate light, those diamond things,
 Those eyes, those passions, those supreme pearl springs,
 Shall be my grief, or twinkle me to pleasure.
 Say, is not bliss within our perfect seisure? 720
 O that I could not doubt!"

The mountaineer

Thus strove by fancies vain and crude to clear
 His briar'd path to some tranquillity.
 It gave bright gladness to his lady's eye,
 And yet the tears she wept were tears of sorrow;
 Answering thus, just as the golden morrow
 Beam'd upward from the vallies of the east:
 "O that the flutter of this heart had ceas'd,
 Or the sweet name of love had pass'd away.
 Young feather'd tyrant! by a swift decay 730
 Wilt thou devote this body to the earth:
 And I do think that at my very birth
 I lisp'd thy blooming titles inwardly;
 For at the first, first dawn and thought of thee,
 With uplift hands I blest the stars of heaven.
 Art thou not cruel? Ever have I striven
 To think thee kind, but ah, it will not do!
 When yet a child, I heard that kisses drew Favour from thee, and so I kisses gave
 To the void air, bidding them find out love: 740
 But when I came to feel how far above

739 so I kisses gave margin of MS. and 1818 corrected: so I gave gave MS.: so I gave and gave 1818.

All fancy, pride, and fickle maidenhood,
 All earthly pleasure, all imagin'd good,
 Was the warm tremble of a devout kiss,—
 Even then, that moment, at the thought of this,
 Fainting I fell into a bed of flowers,
 And languish'd there three days. Ye milder powers,
 Am I not cruelly wrong'd? Believe, believe
 Me, dear Endymion, were I to weave
 With my own fancies garlands of sweet life. 750
 Thou shouldst be one of all. Ah, bitter strife!
 I may not be thy love: I am forbidden—
 Indeed I am—thwarted, affrighted, chidden,
 By things I trembled at, and gorgon wrath.
 Twice hast thou ask'd whither I went: henceforth
 Ask me no more! I may not utter it,
 Nor may I be thy love. We might commit
 Ourselves at once to vengeance; we might die;
 We might embrace and die: voluptuous thought!
 Enlarge not to my hunger, or I'm caught 760
 In trammels of perverse deliciousness.
 No, no, that shall not be: thee will I bless,
 And bid a long adieu."

The Carian

No word return'd: both lovelorn, silent, wan,
 Into the vallies green together went.
 Far wandering, they were perforce content
 To sit beneath a fair lone beechen tree;
 Nor at each other gaz'd, but heavily
 Por'd on its hazle cirque of shedded leaves.

Endymion! unhappy! it nigh grieves 770
 Me to behold thee thus in last extreme:
 Ensky'd ere this, but truly that I deem
 Truth the best music in a first-born song.
 Thy lute-voic'd brother will I sing ere long,
 And thou shalt aid—hast thou not aided me?
 Yes, moonlight Emperor! felicity

780

He did not stir
 His eyes from the dead leaves, or one small pulse
 Of joy he might have felt. The spirit culls
 Unfaded amaranth, when wild it strays
 Through the old garden-ground of boyish days.
 A little onward ran the very stream
 By which he took his first soft poppy dream;
 And on the very bark 'gainst which he leant
 A crescent he had carv'd, and round it spent
 His skill in little stars. The teeming tree
 Had swollen and green'd the pious character, 790
 But not ta'en out. Why, there was not a slope
 Up which he had not fear'd the antelope;
 And not a tree, beneath whose rooty shade
 He had not with his tamed leopards play'd:
 Nor could an arrow light, or javelin,
 Fly in the air where his had never been—
 And yet he knew it not.

O treachery!

Why does his lady smile, pleasing her eye
 With all his sorrowing? He sees her not.
 But who so stares on him? His sister sure! 800
 Peona of the woods!—Can she endure—
 Impossible—how dearly they embrace!
 His lady smiles; delight is in her face;
 It is no treachery.

“Dear brother mine!

Endymion, weep not so! Why shouldst thou pine
 When all great Latmos so exalt will be?
 Thank the great gods, and look not bitterly;
 And speak not one pale word, and sigh no more.
 Sure I will not believe thou hast such store

805 Woodhouse notes the variation Dear Endy: weep, etc., which I should not like to accept literally without seeing the original.

Of grief, to last thee to my kiss again. 810
 Thou surely canst not bear a mind in pain,
 Come hand in hand with one so beautiful.
 Be happy both of you! for I will pull
 The flowers of autumn for your coronals.
 Pan's holy priest for young Endymion calls;
 And when he is restor'd, thou, fairest dame,
 Shalt be our queen. Now, is it not a shame
 To see ye thus,—not very, very sad?
 Perhaps ye are too happy to be glad:
 O feel as if it were a common day; 820
 Free-voic'd as one who never was away.
 No tongue shall ask, whence come ye? but ye shall
 Be gods of your own rest imperial.
 Not even I, for one whole month, will pry
 Into the hours that have pass'd us by,
 Since in my arbour I did sing to thee.
 O Hermes! on this very night will be
 A hymning up to Cynthia, queen of light;
 For the soothsayers old saw yesternight
 Good visions in the air,—whence will befall, 830
 As say these sages, health perpetual
 To shepherds and their flocks; and furthermore,
 In Dian's face they read the gentle lore:
 Therefore for her these vesper-carols are.
 Our friends will all be there from nigh and far.
 Many upon thy death have ditties made;
 And many, even now, their foreheads shade

811 At this point Woodhouse gives the following passage, which is doubtless from the draft:—

Were this sweet damsel like a long neck'd crane
 Or an old rocking barn owl half asleep
 Some reason would there be for thee to keep
 So dull-eyed—but thou knowst she's beautiful
 Yes, Yes! and thou dost love her well—I'll pull...

815 Woodhouse notes here the variation Great Pan's high priest, and for the next line—

This Shepherd Prince restor'd, thou, fairest dame,...

and for line 819 the following two variants—one expressly and the other presumably from the draft:—

(1) Perhaps ye feel too much joy—too overglad:

(2) Perhaps ye are too glad—too overglad:

827 Why! hark ye! on this very eve will be... Draft.

With cypress, on a day of sacrifice.
 New singing for our maids shalt thou devise,
 And pluck the sorrow from our huntsmen's brows. 840
 Tell me, my lady-queen, how to espouse
 This wayward brother to his rightful joys!
 His eyes are on thee bent, as thou didst poize
 His fate most goddess-like. Help me, I pray,
 To lure—Endymion, dear brother, say
 What ails thee?" He could bear no more, and so
 Bent his soul fiercely like a spiritual bow,
 And twang'd it inwardly, and calmly said:
 "I would have thee my only friend, sweet maid!
 My only visitor! not ignorant though, 850
 That those deceptions which for pleasure go
 'Mong men, are pleasures real as real may be:
 But there are higher ones I may not see,
 If impiously an earthly realm I take.
 Since I saw thee, I have been wide awake
 Night after night, and day by day, until
 Of the empyrean I have drunk my fill.
 Let it content thee, Sister, seeing me
 More happy than betides mortality.
 A hermit young, I'll live in mossy cave, 860
 Where thou alone shalt come to me, and lave
 Thy spirit in the wonders I shall tell.
 Through me the shepherd realm shall prosper well;
 For to thy tongue will I all health confide.
 And, for my sake, let this young maid abide
 With thee as a dear sister. Thou alone,
 Peona, mayst return to me. I own
 This may sound strangely: but when, dearest girl,
 Thou seest it for my happiness, no pearl
 Will trespass down those cheeks. Companion fair! 870
 Wilt be content to dwell with her, to share
 This sister's love with me?" Like one resign'd
 And bent by circumstance, and thereby blind
 In self-commitment, thus that meek unknown:
 "Aye, but a buzzing by my ears has flown,
 Of jubilee to Dian:—truth I heard?
 Well then, I see there is no little bird,

840 cypress for sorrow *Draft.*876 heard? MS. and 1818 corrected: heard! 1818.

Tender soever, but is Jove's own care.
 Long have I sought for rest, and, unaware,
 Behold I find it! so exalted too! 880
 So after my own heart! I knew, I knew
 There was a place untenanted in it:
 In that same void white Chastity shall sit,
 And monitor me nightly to lone slumber.
 With sanest lips I vow me to the number
 Of Dian's sisterhood; and, kind lady,
 With thy good help, this very night shall see
 My future days to her fane consecrate."

As feels a dreamer what doth most create
 His own particular fright, so these three felt: 890
 Or like one who, in after ages, knelt
 To Lucifer or Baal, when he'd pine
 After a little sleep: or when in mine
 Far under-ground, a sleeper meets his friends
 Who know him not. Each diligently bends Towards common thoughts and things for very fear;

Striving their ghastly malady to cheer,
 By thinking it a thing of yes and no,
 That housewives talk of. But the spirit-blow
 Was struck, and all were dreamers. At the last 900
 Endymion said: "Are not our fates all cast?
 Why stand we here? Adieu, ye tender pair!
 Adieu!" Whereat those maidens, with wild stare,
 Walk'd dizzily away. Pained and hot
 His eyes went after them, until they got
 Near to a cypress grove, whose deadly maw,
 In one swift moment, would what then he saw
 Engulph for ever. "Stay!" he cried, "ah, stay!
 Turn, damsels! hist! one word I have to say.
 Sweet Indian, I would see thee once again. 910
 It is a thing I dote on: so I'd fain,
 Peona, ye should hand in hand repair
 Into those holy groves, that silent are Behind great Dian's temple. I'll be yon,
 At vesper's earliest twinkle—they are gone—
 But once, once, once again—" At this he press'd
 His hands against his face, and then did rest

His head upon a mossy hillock green,
 And so remain'd as he a corpse had been
 All the long day; save when he scantly lifted 920
 His eyes abroad, to see how shadows shifted
 With the slow move of time,—sluggish and weary
 Until the poplar tops, in journey dreary,
 Had reach'd the river's brim. Then up he rose,
 And, slowly as that very river flows,
 Walk'd towards the temple grove with this lament:
 "Why such a golden eve? The breeze is sent
 Careful and soft, that not a leaf may fall
 Before the serene father of them all
 Bows down his summer head below the west. 930
 Now am I of breath, speech, and speed possess,
 But at the setting I must bid adieu
 To her for the last time. Night will strew
 On the damp grass myriads of lingering leaves,
 And with them shall I die; nor much it grieves
 To die, when summer dies on the cold sward.
 Why, I have been a butterfly, a lord
 Of flowers, garlands, love-knots, silly posies,
 Groves, meadows, melodies, and arbour roses;
 My kingdom's at its death, and just it is 940
 That I should die with it: so in all this
 We miscall grief, bale, sorrow, heartbreak, woe,
 What is there to plain of? By Titan's foe
 I am but rightly serv'd." So saying, he
 Tripp'd lightly on, in sort of deathful glee;
 Laughing at the clear stream and setting sun,
 As though they jests had been: nor had he done
 His laugh at nature's holy countenance,

918-22 His hands upon a pillow of green moss
 And so remained without impatient toss
 All the day long—save when he scantly lifted
 His eyes abroad, to see how shadows shifted,
 And note the weary time.—Ah weary, weary,...Draft.

The word hands in line 918 was probably a mere slip.

926-7 Woodhouse gives, presumably from the draft, the couplet:—

Walk'd towards the temple grove lamenting "O
 "Why such a golden eve? The breezes blow...

933 This line, though possibly corrupt, stands thus in the finished manuscript and in Keats's edition. Woodhouse does not bring the draft in evidence. Perhaps To should be Unto.

Until that grove appear'd, as if perchance,
 And then his tongue with sober seemlihed 950
 Gave utterance as he enter'd: "Ha! I said,
 King of the butterflies; but by this gloom,
 And by old Rhadamanthus' tongue of doom,
 This dusk religion, pomp of solitude,
 And the Promethean clay by thief endued,
 By old Saturnus' forelock, by his head
 Shook with eternal palsy, I did wed
 Myself to things of light from infancy;
 And thus to be cast out, thus lorn to die,
 Is sure enough to make a mortal man 960
 Grow impious." So he inwardly began
 On things for which no wording can be found;
 Deeper and deeper sinking, until drown'd
 Beyond the reach of music: for the choir
 Of Cynthia he heard not, though rough briar
 Nor muffling thicket interpos'd to dull
 The vesper hymn, far swollen, soft and full,
 Through the dark pillars of those sylvan aisles.
 He saw not the two maidens, nor their smiles,
 Wan as primroses gather'd at midnight 970
 By chilly finger'd spring. "Unhappy wight!
 Endymion!" said Peona, "we are here!
 What wouldst thou ere we all are laid on bier?"
 Then he embrac'd her, and his lady's hand
 Press'd, saying: "Sister, I would have command,
 If it were heaven's will, on our sad fate."
 At which that dark-eyed stranger stood elate
 And said, in a new voice, but sweet as love,
 To Endymion's amaze: "By Cupid's dove,
 And so thou shalt! and by the lilly truth 980
 Of my own breast thou shalt, beloved youth!"
 And as she spake, into her face there came
 Light, as reflected from a silver flame:

 And then his soul was changed... Draft.

Her long black hair swell'd ampler, in display
 Full golden; in her eyes a brighter day
 Dawn'd blue and full of love. Aye, he beheld
 Phœbe, his passion! joyous she upheld
 Her lucid bow, continuing thus: "Drear, drear
 Has our delaying been; but foolish fear
 Withheld me first; and then decrees of fate; 990
 And then 'twas fit that from this mortal state
 Thou shouldst, my love, by some unlook'd for change
 Be spiritualiz'd. Peona, we shall range
 These forests, and to thee they safe shall be
 As was thy cradle; hither shalt thou flee
 To meet us many a time." Next Cynthia bright
 Peona kiss'd, and bless'd with fair good night:
 Her brother kiss'd her too, and knelt adown
 Before his goddess, in a blissful swoon.
 She gave her fair hands to him, and behold, 1000
 Before three swiftest kisses he had told,
 They vanish'd far away!—Peona went
 Home through the gloomy wood in wonderment.

LAMIA

PART I

UPON a time, before the faery broods
Drove Nymph and Satyr from the prosperous woods,
Before king Oberon's bright diadem,
Sceptre, and mantle, clasp'd with dewy gem,
Frighted away the Dryads and the Fauns
From rushes green, and brakes, and cowslip'd lawns,
The ever-smitten Hermes empty left
His golden throne, bent warm on amorous theft :
From high Olympus had he stolen light,
On this side of Jove's clouds, to escape the sight 10
Of his great summoner, and made retreat
Into a forest on the shores of Crete.
For somewhere in that sacred island dwelt
A nymph, to whom all hoofed Satyrs knelt ;
At whose white feet the languid Tritons poured
Pearls, while on land they wither'd and adored.
Fast by the springs where she to bathe was wont,
And in those meads where sometime she might haunt,
Were strewn rich gifts, unknown to any Muse,
Though Fancy's casket were unlock'd to choose 20
Ah, what a world of love was at her feet !
So Hermes thought, and a celestial heat
Burnt from his winged heels to either ear,
That from a whiteness, as the lilly clear,
Blush'd into roses 'mid his golden hair,
Fallen in jealous curls about his shoulders bare.

From vale to vale, from wood to wood, he flew,
Breathing upon the flowers his passion new,
And wound with many a river to its head, 20
To find where this sweet nymph prepar'd her secret bed:
In vain ; the sweet nymph might nowhere be found,
And so he rested, on the lonely ground,

15 And at whose feet MS., cancelled.

Pensive, and full of painful jealousies
 Of the Wood-Gods, and even the very trees.
 There as he stood, he heard a mournful voice,
 Such as once heard, in gentle heart, destroys
 All pain but pity: thus the lone voice spake:
 "When from this wreathed tomb shall I awake!
 "When move in a sweet body fit for life,
 "And love, and pleasure, and the ruddy strife 40
 "Of hearts and lips! Ah, miserable me!"
 The God, dove-footed, glided silently
 Round bush and tree, soft-brushing, in his speed,
 The taller grasses and full-flowering weed,
 Until he found a palpitating snake,
 Bright, and cirque-couchant in a dusky brake.

She was a gordian shape of dazzling hue,
 Vermilion-spotted, golden, green, and blue;
 Striped like a zebra, freckled like a pard,
 Eyed like a peacock, and all crimson barr'd; 50
 And full of silver moons, that, as she breathed,
 Dissolv'd, or brighter shone, or interwreathed
 Their lustres with the gloomier tapestries—
 So rainbow-sided, touch'd with miseries,
 She seem'd, at once, some penanced lady elf,
 Some demon's mistress, or the demon's self.
 Upon her crest she wore a wannish fire
 Sprinkled with stars, like Ariadne's tiar:
 Her head was serpent, but ah, bitter-sweet! 59
 She had a woman's mouth with all its pearls complete:
 And for her eyes: what could such eyes do there
 But weep, and weep, that they were born so fair?
 As Proserpine still weeps for her Sicilian air.
 Her throat was serpent, but the words she spake
 Came, as through bubbling honey, for Love's sake,
 And thus; while Hermes on his pinions lay,
 Like a stoop'd falcon ere he takes his prey.

"Fair Hermes, crown'd with feathers, fluttering light,
 "I had a splendid dream of thee last night:
 "I saw thee sitting, on a throne of gold, 70
 "Among the Gods, upon Olympus old,

"The only sad one; for thou didst not hear
 "The soft, lute-finger'd Muses chaunting clear,
 "Nor even Apollo when he sang alone,
 "Deaf to his throbbing throat's long, long melodious moan.

"I dreamt I saw thee, robed in purple flakes,
 "Break amorous through the clouds, as morning breaks,
 "And, swiftly as a bright Phœbean dart,
 "Strike for the Cretan isle; and here thou art!
 "Too gentle Hermes, hast thou found the maid?"
 Whereat the star of Lethe not delay'd 81

His rosy eloquence, and thus inquired:
 "Thou smooth-lipp'd serpent, surely high inspired!
 "Thou beauteous wreath, with melancholy eyes,
 "Possess whatever bliss thou canst devise,
 "Telling me only where my nymph is fled,—
 "Where she doth breathe!" "Bright planet, thou hast said,"

Return'd the snake, "but seal with oaths, fair God!"
 "I swear," said Hermes, "by my serpent rod,
 "And by thine eyes, and by thy starry crown!" 90
 Light flew his earnest words, among the blossoms blown.

Then thus again the brilliance feminine:
 "Too frail of heart! for this lost nymph of thine,
 "Free as the air, invisibly, she strays
 "About these thornless wilds; her pleasant days
 "She tastes unseen; unseen her nimble feet
 "Leave traces in the grass and flowers sweet;
 "From weary tendrils, and bow'd branches green,
 "She plucks the fruit unseen, she bathes unseen:
 "And by my power is her beauty veil'd 100
 "To keep it unaffronted, unassail'd
 "By the love-glances of unlovely eyes,
 "Of Satyrs, Fauns, and blear'd Silenus' sighs.
 "Pale grew her immortality, for woe
 "Of all these lovers, and she grieved so
 "I took compassion on her, bade her steep

"Her loveliness invisible, yet free
 "To wander as she loves, in liberty.
 "Thou shalt behold her, Hermes, thou alone, 110
 "If thou wilt, as thou swearest, grant my boon!"
 Then, once again, the charmed God began
 An oath, and through the serpent's ears it ran
 Warm, tremulous, devout, psalterian.
 Ravish'd, she lifted her Circean head,
 Blush'd a live damask, and swift-lipping said,
 "I was a woman, let me have once more
 "A woman's shape, and charming as before.
 "I love a youth of Corinth—O the bliss!
 "Give me my woman's form, and place me where he is.
 "Stoop, Hermes, let me breathe upon thy brow, 121
 "And thou shalt see thy sweet nymph even now."
 The God on half-shut feathers sank serene,
 She breath'd upon his eyes, and swift was seen
 Of both the guarded nymph near-smiling on the green.
 It was no dream; or say a dream it was,
 Real are the dreams of Gods, and smoothly pass
 Their pleasures in a long immortal dream.
 One warm, flush'd moment, hovering, it might seem
 Dash'd by the wood-nymph's beauty, so he burn'd; 130
 Then, lighting on the printless verdure, turn'd
 To the swoon'd serpent, and with languid arm,
 Delicate, put to proof the lythe Caducean charm.
 So done, upon the nymph his eyes he bent
 Full of adoring tears and blandishment,
 And towards her stept: she, like a moon in wane,
 Faded before him, cower'd, nor could restrain
 Her fearful sobs, self-folding like a flower
 That faints into itself at evening hour:
 But the God fostering her chilled hand, 140
 She felt the warmth, her eyelids open'd bland,
 And, like new flowers at morning song of bees,
 Bloom'd, and gave up her honey to the lees.

Into the green-recessed woods they flew ;
Nor grew they pale, as mortal lovers do.

Left to herself, the serpent now began
To change; her elfin blood in madness ran,
Her mouth foam'd, and the grass, therewith besprent,
Wither'd at dew so sweet and virulent;
Her eyes in torture fix'd, and anguish drear, 150
Hot, glaz'd, and wide, with lid-lashes all sear,
Flash'd phosphor and sharp sparks, without one cooling tear.

The colours all inflam'd throughout her train,
She writh'd about, convuls'd with scarlet pain:
A deep volcanian yellow took the place
Of all her milder-mooned body's grace;
And, as the lava ravishes the mead,
Spoilt all her silver mail, and golden brede;
Made gloom of all her frecklings, streaks and bars,
Eclips'd her crescents, and lick'd up her stars: 160
So that, in moments few, she was undrest
Of all her sapphires, greens, and amethyst,
And rubious-argent: of all these bereft,
Nothing but pain and ugliness were left.
Still shone her crown; that vanish'd, also she
Melted and disappear'd as suddenly;
And in the air, her new voice luting soft,
Cried, "Lycius! gentle Lycius!"—Borne aloft
With the bright mists about the mountains hoar
These words dissolv'd: Crete's forests heard no more.

Whither fled Lamia, now a lady bright, 171
A full-born beauty new and exquisite?
She fled into that valley they pass o'er
Who go to Corinth from Cenchreas' shore;
And rested at the foot of those wild hills,
The rugged founts of the Peræan rills,

And of that other ridge whose barren back
 Stretches, with all its mist and cloudy rack,
 South-westward to Cleone. There she stood
 About a young bird's flutter from a wood, 180
 Fair, on a sloping green of mossy tread,
 By a clear pool, wherein she passion'd
 To see herself escap'd from so sore ills,
 While her robes flaunted with the daffodils.

Ah, happy Lycius!—for she was a maid
 More beautiful than ever twisted braid,
 Or sigh'd, or blush'd, or on spring-flowered lea
 Spread a green kirtle to the minstrelsy:
 A virgin purest lipp'd, yet in the lore
 Of love deep learned to the red heart's core: 190
 Not one hour old, yet of sciential brain
 To unperplex bliss from its neighbour pain;
 Define their pettish limits, and estrange
 Their points of contact, and swift counterchange;
 Intrigue with the specious chaos, and dispart
 Its most ambiguous atoms with sure art;
 As though in Cupid's college she had spent
 Sweet days a lovely graduate, still unshent,
 And kept his rosy terms in idle languishment.

Why this fair creature chose so faerily 200
 By the wayside to linger, we shall see;
 But first 'tis fit to tell how she could muse
 And dream, when in the serpent prison-house,
 Of all she list, strange or magnificent:
 How, ever, where she will'd, her spirit went;
 Whether to faint Elysium, or where
 Down through tress-lifting waves the Nereids fair
 Wind into Thetis' bower by many a pearly stair;
 Or where God Bacchus drains his cups divine,
 Stretch'd out, at ease, beneath a glutinous pine; 210
 Or where in Pluto's gardens palatine

Mulciber's columns gleam in far piazzian line.
And sometimes into cities she would send
Her dream, with feast and rioting to blend;
And once, while among mortals dreaming thus,
She saw the young Corinthian Lycius
Charioting foremost in the envious race.
Like a young Jove with calm uneager face,
And fell into a swooning love of him.
Now on the moth-time of that evening dim 220
He would return that way, as well she knew,
To Corinth from the shore; for freshly blew
The eastern soft wind, and his galley now
Grated the quaystones with her brazen prow
In port Cenchreas, from Egina isle
Fresh anchor'd; whither he had been awhile
To sacrifice to Jove, whose temple there
Waits with high marble doors for blood and incense rare.

Jove heard his vows, and better'd his desire;
For by some freakful chance he made retire 230
From his companions, and set forth to walk,
Perhaps grown wearied of their Corinth talk:
Over the solitary hills he fared,
Thoughtless at first, but ere eve's star appeared
His phantasy was lost, where reason fades,
In the calm'd twilight of Platonic shades.
Lamia beheld him coming, near, more near—
Close to her passing, in indifference drear,
His silent sandals swept the mossy green;
So neighbour'd to him, and yet so unseen 240
She stood: he pass'd, shut up in mysteries,
His mind wrapp'd like his mantle, while her eyes
Follow'd his steps, and her neck regal white
Turn'd—syllabbling thus, "Ah, Lycius bright,
"And will you leave me on the hills alone?
"Lycius, look back! and be some pity shown."
He did; not with cold wonder fearingly,
But Orpheus-like at an Eurydice;
For so delicious were the words she sung,

225 In harbour Cenchreas, *MS.*236 Platonic] platonian MS.

It seem'd he had lov'd them a whole summer long: 250
 And soon his eyes had drunk her beauty up,
 Leaving no drop in the bewildering cup,

And still the cup was full,—while he, afraid
 Lest she should vanish ere his lip had paid
 Due adoration, thus began to adore;

Her soft look growing coy, she saw his chain so sure:
 "Leave thee alone! Look back! Ah, Goddess, see
 "Whether my eyes can ever turn from thee!

"For pity do not this sad heart belie— 260
 "Even as thou vanishest so shall I die.

"Stay! though a Naiad of the rivers, stay!
 "To thy far wishes will thy streams obey:

"Stay! though the greenest woods be thy domain,
 "Alone they can drink up the morning rain:
 "Though a descended Pleiad, will not one
 "Of thine harmonious sisters keep in tune

"Thy spheres, and as thy silver proxy shine?
 "So sweetly to these ravish'd ears of mine
 "Came thy sweet greeting, that if thou shouldst fade 270

"Thy memory will waste me to a shade:—
 "For pity do not melt!"—"If I should stay,"

Said Lamia, "here, upon this floor of clay,
 "And pain my steps upon these flowers too rough,

"What canst thou say or do of charm enough?
 "To dull the nice remembrance of my home?
 "Thou canst not ask me with thee here to roam

"Over these hills and vales, where no joy is,—
 "Empty of immortality and bliss!

"Thou art a scholar, Lycius, and must know 280
 "That finer spirits cannot breathe below

"In human climes, and live: Alas! poor youth,
 "What taste of purer air hast thou to soothe
 "My essence? What serener palaces,

"Where I may all my many senses please,
 "And by mysterious sleights a hundred thirsts appease?
 "It cannot be—Adieu!" So said, she rose

260 After this line, the manuscript has an additional one, an Alexandrine—
 Thou to Elysium gone, here for the vultures I.

272 In the manuscript the word here does not occur in this line.

Tiptoe with white arms spread. He, sick to lose
 The amorous promise of her lone complain,
 Swoon'd, murmuring of love, and pale with pain.
 The cruel lady, without any show 290
 Of sorrow for her tender favourite's woe,
 But rather, if her eyes could brighter be,
 With brighter eyes and slow amenity,
 Put her new lips to his, and gave afresh
 The life she had so tangled in her mesh:
 And as he from one trance was wakening
 Into another, she began to sing,
 Happy in beauty, life, and love, and every thing,
 A song of love, too sweet for earthly lyres,
 While, like held breath, the stars drew in their panting
 fires. 300

And then she whisper'd in such trembling tone,
 As those who, safe together met alone
 For the first time through many anguish'd days,
 Use other speech than looks; bidding him raise
 His drooping head, and clear his soul of doubt,
 For that she was a woman, and without
 Any more subtle fluid in her veins
 Than throbbing blood, and that the self-same pains
 Inhabited her frail-strung heart as his.
 And next she wonder'd how his eyes could miss 310
 Her face so long in Corinth, where, she said,
 She dwelt but half retir'd, and there had led
 Days happy as the gold coin could invent
 Without the aid of love; yet in content
 Till she saw him, as once she pass'd him by,
 Where 'gainst a column he lent thoughtfully
 At Venus' temple porch, 'mid baskets heap'd
 Of amorous herbs and flowers, newly reap'd
 Late on that eve, as 'twas the night before
 The Adonian feast; whereof she saw no more, 320
 But wept alone those days, for why should she adore?
 Lycius from death awoke into amaze,
 To see her still, and singing so sweet lays;
 Then from amaze into delight he fell

322 Lycius from death woke into an amaze... MS.

To hear her whisper woman's lore so well ;
And every word she spake entic'd him on
To unperplex'd delight and pleasure known.
Let the mad poets say whate'er they please
Of the sweets of Faeries, Peris, Goddesses,
There is not such a treat among them all, 330
Haunters of cavern, lake, and waterfall,
As a real woman, lineal indeed
From Pyrrha's pebbles or old Adam's seed.
Thus gentle Lamia judg'd, and judg'd aright,
That Lycius could not love in half a fright,
So threw the goddess off, and won his heart
More pleasantly by playing woman's part,
With no more awe than what her beauty gave,
That, while it smote, still guaranteed to save.
Lycius to all made eloquent reply, 340
Marrying to every word a twinborn sigh ;
And last, pointing to Corinth, ask'd her sweet,
If 'twas too far that night for her soft feet.
The way was short, for Lamia's eagerness
Made, by a spell, the triple league decrease
To a few paces ; not at all surmised
By blinded Lycius, so in her comprized.
They pass'd the city gates, he knew not how,
So noiseless, and he never thought to know.

As men talk in a dream, so Corinth all, 350
Throughout her palaces imperial,
And all her populous streets and temples lewd,
Mutter'd, like tempest in the distance brew'd,
To the wide-spreaded night above her towers.
Men, women, rich and poor, in the cool hours,
Shuffled their sandals o'er the pavement white,
Companion'd or alone ; while many a light
Flared, here and there, from wealthy festivals,
And threw their moving shadows on the walls,
Or found them cluster'd in the corniced shade 360
Of some arch'd temple door, or dusky colonnade.

Muffling his face, of greeting friends in fear,
Her fingers he press'd hard, as one came near

With curl'd gray beard, sharp eyes, and smooth bald crown,
 Slow-stepp'd, and robed in philosophic gown:
 Lycius shrank closer, as they met and past,
 Into his mantle, adding wings to haste,
 While hurried Lamia trembled: "Ah," said he,
 "Why do you shudder, love, so ruefully?
 "Why does your tender palm dissolve in dew?"—
 "I'm wearied," said fair Lamia: "tell me who 371
 "Is that old man? I cannot bring to mind
 "His features:—Lycius! wherefore did you blind
 "Yourself from his quick eyes?" Lycius replied,
 "'Tis Apollonius sage, my trusty guide
 "And good instructor; but to-night he seems
 "The ghost of folly haunting my sweet dreams."

While yet he spake they had arrived before
 A pillar'd porch, with lofty portal door,
 Where hung a silver lamp, whose phosphor glow
 Reflected in the slabbed steps below, 381
 Mild as a star in water; for so new,
 And so unsullied was the marble's hue,
 So through the crystal polish, liquid fine,
 Ran the dark veins, that none but feet divine
 Could e'er have touch'd there. Sounds Æolian
 Breath'd from the hinges, as the ample span
 Of the wide doors disclos'd a place unknown
 Some time to any, but those two alone,
 And a few Persian mutes, who that same year 380
 Were seen about the markets: none knew where
 They could inhabit; the most curious
 Were foil'd, who watch'd to trace them to their house:
 And but the flitter-winged verse must tell,
 For truth's sake, what woe afterwards befel,
 'Twould humour many a heart to leave them thus,
 Shut from the busy world of more incredulous.

PART II

LOVE in a hut, with water and a crust,
 Is—Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust;
 Love in a palace is perhaps at last
 More grievous torment than a hermit's fast:—
 That is a doubtful tale from faery land,
 Hard for the non-elect to understand.
 Had Lycius liv'd to hand his story down,
 He might have given the moral a fresh frown,
 Or clench'd it quite: but too short was their bliss
 To breed distrust and hate, that make the soft voice hiss.
 Beside, there, nightly, with terrific glare, 11
 Love, jealous grown of so complete a pair,
 Hover'd and buzz'd his wings, with fearful roar,
 Above the lintel of their chamber door,
 And down the passage cast a glow upon the floor.

For all this came a ruin: side by side
 They were enthroned, in the even tide,
 Upon a couch, near to a curtaining
 Whose airy texture, from a golden string,
 Floated into the room, and let appear 20
 Unveil'd the summer heaven, blue and clear,
 Betwixt two marble shafts:—there they reposed,
 Where use had made it sweet, with eyelids closed,
 Saving a tythe which love still open kept,
 That they might see each other while they almost slept;
 When from the slope side of a suburb hill,
 Deafening the swallow's twitter, came a thrill
 Of trumpets—Lycius started—the sounds fled,
 But left a thought, a buzzing in his head.
 For the first time, since first he harbour'd in 30
 That purple-lined palace of sweet sin,

29 But left a thought at work in Lycius' head. Houghton

30-3 The following readings are from the Houghton Fragment:—

For the first time since that had been his...
 For the first time since he had harbour'd in
 That { happy Palace...
 { purple-lined Palace...
 For the first time since he soft-harbour'd in

His spirit pass'd beyond its golden bourn
 Into the noisy world almost forsworn.
 The lady, ever watchful, penetrant,
 Saw this with pain, so arguing a want
 Of something more, more than her empery
 Of joys; and she began to moan and sigh
 Because he mused beyond her, knowing well
 That but a moment's thought is passion's passing bell.
 "Why do you sigh, fair creature?" whisper'd he:
 "Why do you think?" return'd she tenderly: 41
 "You have deserted me;—where am I now?
 "Not in your heart while care weighs on your brow:
 "No, no, you have dismiss'd me; and I go
 "From your breast houseless: aye, it must be so."
 He answer'd, bending to her open eyes,
 Where he was mirror'd small in paradise,
 "My silver planet, both of eve and morn!
 "Why will you plead yourself so sad forlorn,
 "While I am striving how to fill my heart 50
 "With deeper crimson, and a double snare?
 "How to entangle, trammel up and snare
 "Your soul in mine, and labyrinth you there
 "Like the hid scent in an unbudded rose?
 "Aye, a sweet kiss—you see your mighty woes.
 "My thoughts! shall I unveil them? Listen then!
 "What mortal hath a prize, that other men
 "May be confounded and abash'd withal,
 "But lets it sometimes pace abroad majestic,
 "And triumph, as in thee I should rejoice 60

34 The Lady] Lamia, Houghton Fragment.

40 creature?] Lamia? Houghton Fragment.

45 In the finished manuscript, this speech has another couplet:—

Too fond was I believing, fancy fed

In high deliriums, and blossoms never shed!

47 Wherein he saw himself in Paradise—Houghton Fragment.

53 Your . . . you,] Thy . . . thee, MS.

"Let my foes choke, and my friends shout afar,
 "While through the thronged streets your bridal car
 "Wheels round its dazzling spokes."—The lady's cheek
 Trembled; she nothing said, but, pale and meek,
 Arose and knelt before him, wept a rain
 Of sorrows at his words; at last with pain
 Beseeching him, the while his hand she wrung,
 To change his purpose. He thereat was stung,
 Perverse, with stronger fancy to reclaim 70
 Her wild and timid nature to his aim:
 Besides, for all his love, in self despite,
 Against his better self, he took delight
 Luxurious in her sorrows, soft and new.
 His passion, cruel grown, took on a hue
 Fierce and sanguineous as 'twas possible
 In one whose brow had no dark veins to swell.
 Fine was the mitigated fury, like
 Apollo's presence when in act to strike
 The serpent—Ha, the serpent! certes, she 80
 Was none. She burnt, she lov'd the tyranny,
 And, all subdued, consented to the hour

82-105 In the manuscript, instead of lines 82 to 105, the following originally stood:—

Became herself a flame—'twas worth an age
 Of minor joys to revel in such rage.
 She was persuaded, and she fixt the hour
 When he should make a Bride of his fair Paramour.
 After the hot[t]est day comes languidest
 The colour'd Eve, half-hidden in the west;
 So they both look'd, so spake, if breathed sound,
 That almost silence is, hath ever found
 Compare with nature's quiet. Which lov'd most,
 Which had the weakest, strongest, heart so lost,
 So ruin'd, wreck'd, destroyed; for certes they
 Scarcely could tell they could not guess
 Whether 'twas misery or happiness.
 Spells are but made to break. Whisper'd the Youth
 "Sure some sweet name thou hast; though by my truth
 "I had not ask'd it, ever thinking thee
 "Not mortal but of heavenly progeny,
 "As still I do. Hast any mortal name?
 "Fit silver appellation for this dazzling frame?
 "Or friends, or kinsfolks on the citied Earth,
 "To share our marriage feast and nuptial mirth?"
 "I have no friends," said Lamia "as you list
 "Intreat your many guests." Then all was wist

When to the bridal he should lead his paramour.
 Whispering in midnight silence, said the youth.
 "Sure some sweet name thou hast, though, by my truth,
 "I have not ask'd it, ever thinking thee
 "Not mortal, but of heavenly progeny,
 "As still I do. Hast any mortal name,
 "Fit appellation for this dazzling frame?
 "Or friends or kinsfolk on the citted earth, 90
 "To share our marriage feast and nuptial mirth?"
 "I have no friends," said Lamia, "no, not one;
 "My presence in wide Corinth hardly known:

She fell asleep, and Lycius to the Shade
 Of deep sleep in a moment was betray'd.

The passage beginning at

After the hottest day comes languidest
occurs also in the Houghton Fragment, and shows some variations, as

The colour'd eve, half-lidded in the west—and again for certes they

Scarcely could tell if this was misery.

In the next line the Houghton Fragment has the cancelled reading, said then the youth for whisper'd the youth, and a little lower down As now I do stands rejected in favour of As still I do. There is also a further variation of line 99, namely

Of fit sound for this soft ethereal frame.

Lamia's avowal that she had no friends is followed by several cancellings:—

"I have no friends" said Lamia as you list

Seeing it must be...

Do with your own...

Intreat your many guests. Then all was was [sic] wist

She fell asleep, and Lycius to the shade

Of sleep sunk with her { when { dreaming } his fancy stray'd

Into a dream...

Of sleep went...

Of deep sleep in a moment was betray'd.

Before this was all struck out and remodelled according to the text, Keats cancelled in the finished manuscript from as you list, and wrote in no not one;

My presence in wide Corinth is unknown;

and the next six lines as in the text, adding—

With any pleasure on me, summon not

Old Apollonius. Lycius ignorant what

Strange thought had led her to an end so blank,

and so on as in the text, lines 103-5.

89-90 In writing these two lines the second time, Keats inserted the word silver before appellation, and put kinsfolks again.

"My parents' bones are in their dusty urns
 "Sepulchred, where no kindled incense burns,
 "Seeing all their luckless race are dead, save me,
 "And I neglect the holy rite for thee.
 "Even as you list invite your many guests;
 "But if, as now it seems, your vision rests
 "With any pleasure on me, do not bid 100
 "Old Apollonius—from him keep me hid."
 Lycius, perplex'd at words so blind and blank,
 Made close inquiry; from whose touch she shrank,
 Feigning a sleep; and he to the dull shade
 Of deep sleep in a moment was betray'd.

It was the custom then to bring away
 The bride from home at blushing shut of day,
 Veil'd, in a chariot, heralded along
 By strewn flowers, torches, and a marriage song,
 With other pageants: but this fair unknown 110
 Had not a friend. So being left alone,
 (Lycius was gone to summon all his kin)
 And knowing surely she could never win
 His foolish heart from its mad pompousness,
 She set herself, high-thoughted, how to dress
 The misery in fit magnificence.
 She did so, but 'tis doubtful how and whence
 Came, and who were her subtle servitors.
 About the halls, and to and from the doors,
 There was a noise of wings, till in short space 120
 The glowing banquet-room shone with wide-arched grace.

A haunting music, sole perhaps and lone
 Supportress of the faery-roof, made moan
 Throughout, as fearful the whole charm might fade.

On either side a forest they...

Of palm and plantain, met from either side,
High in the midst, in honour of the bride:
Two palms and then two plantains, and so on,
From either side their stems branch'd one to one
All down the aisled place; and beneath all 120
There ran a stream of lamps straight on from wall to wall.

So canopied, lay an untasted feast
Teeming with odours. Lamia, regal drest,
Silently paced about, and as she went,
In pale contented sort of discontent,
Mission'd her viewless servants to enrich
The fretted splendour of each nook and niche.
Between the tree-stems, marbled plain at first,
Came jasper pannels; then, anon, there burst
Forth creeping imagery of slighter trees, 140
And with the larger wove in small intricacies.
Approving all, she faded at self-will,
And shut the chamber up, close, hush'd and still,
Complete and ready for the revels rude,
When dreadful guests would come to spoil her solitude.

and another of line 130—

134-7 In the Houghton Fragment, in line 134 silverly occurs in place of silently; line 135 is wanting; and line 137 stands as follows—

140 Forth { creeping } imagery of { slighter } trees.

141-4 In the Houghton Fragment, in line 141 smallest is cancelled in favour of in small, and between that and line 142 occurs the following passage:—

And so till she was sated—then came down

Soft ligh[t]ing { on her head } a brilliant crown
{ o'er her Brows }

Wreathed turban- { wise } of tender wannish fire
{ like }

And sprinkled o'er with stars like Ariadne's tiar.

The close of line 144 shows no fewer than four readings rejected in favour of revels rude, namely woeful time, woeful day, time of woe, and day of woe, each of which, preferable in itself to the reading adopted, must have had to give place on account of the exigencies of rhyme

The day appear'd, and all the gossip rout.
 O senseless Lycius! Madman! wherefore flout
 The silent-blessing fate, warm cloister'd hours,
 And show to common eyes these secret bowers?
 The herd approach'd; each guest, with busy brain,
 Arriving at the portal, gaz'd amain, ¹⁵¹
 And enter'd marveling: for they knew the street,
 Remember'd it from childhood all complete
 Without a gap, yet ne'er before had seen
 That royal porch, that high-built fair demesne;
 So in they hurried all, maz'd, curious and keen:
 Save one, who look'd thereon with eye severe,
 And with calm-planted steps walk'd in austere;
 'Twas Apollonius: something too he laugh'd,
 As though some knotty problem, that had daft ¹⁶⁰
 His patient thought, had now begun to thaw,
 And solve and melt:—'twas just as he foresaw.

He met within the murmurous vestibule
 His young disciple. "Tis no common rule,
 Lycius," said he, "for uninvited guest
 "To force himself upon you, and infest
 "With an unbidden presence the bright throng
 "Of younger friends; yet must I do this wrong.
 "And you forgive me." Lycius blush'd, and led
 The old man through the inner doors broad-spread;
 With reconciling words and courteous mien ¹⁷¹
 Turning into sweet milk the sophist's spleen.

Of wealthy lustre was the banquet-room,
 Fill'd with pervading brilliance and perfume:
 Before each lucid pannel fuming stood
 A censer fed with myrrh and spiced wood,
 Each by a sacred tripod held aloft,

146-7 The day came soon and all the gossip-rout
 O senseless Lycius Dolt! Fool! Madman! Lout!

 To the high roof, still mimick'd as they rose
 Along the mirror'd walls by twin-clouds odorous.
 Twelve sphered tables, by silk seats insphered,
 High as the level of a man's breast rear'd
 On libbard's paws, upheld the heavy gold
 Of cups and goblets, and the store thrice told
 Of Ceres' horn, and, in huge vessels, wine
 Come from the gloomy tun with merry shine.
 Thus loaded with a feast the tables stood,

Of powerful instruments :—the gorgeous dyes,
 The space, the splendour of the draperies,
 The roof of awful richness, nectarous cheer,
 Beautiful slaves, and Lamia's self, appear,
 Now, when the wine has done its rosy deed,
 And every soul from human trammels freed, 210
 No more so strange ; for merry wine, sweet wine,
 Will make Elysian shades not too fair, too divine.
 Soon was God Bacchus at meridian height ;
 Flush'd were their cheeks, and bright eyes double

Garlands of every green, and every scent
 From vales deflower'd, or forest-trees branch-rent,

 Of every guest ; that each, as he did please,
 Might fancy-fit his brows, silk-pillow'd at his ease. 220

What wreath for Lamia ? What for Lycius ?
 What for the sage, old Apollonius ?
 Upon her aching forehead be there hung
 The leaves of willow and of adder's tongue ;
 And for the youth, quick, let us strip for him
 The thyrsus, that his watching eyes may swim
 Into forgetfulness ; and, for the sage,
 Let spear-grass and the spiteful thistle wage
 War on his temples. Do not all charms fly
 At the mere touch of cold philosophy ? 230

 We know her woof, her texture ; she is given

By her glad Lycius sitting, in chief place.
 Scarce saw in all the room another face,
 Till, checking his love trance, a cup he took Full brimm'd, and opposite sent forth a look
 'Cross the broad table, to beseech a glance
 From his old teacher's wrinkled countenance,
 And pledge him. The bald-head philosopher
 Had fix'd his eye, without a twinkle or stir
 Full on the alarmed beauty of the bride,
 Brow-beating her fair form, and troubling her sweet pride.

Lycius then press'd her hand, with devout touch,
 As pale it lay upon the rosy couch: 250

'Twas icy, and the cold ran through his veins;
 Then sudden it grew hot, and all the pains
 Of an unnatural heat shot to his heart.

"Lamia, what means this? Wherefore dost thou start?"

"Know'st thou that man?" Poor Lamia answer'd not.

He gaz'd into her eyes, and not a jot

Own'd they the lovelorn piteous appeal:

More, more he gaz'd: his human senses reel:

Some hungry spell that loveliness absorbs;

There was no recognition in those orbs. 260

"Lamia!" he cried—and no soft-toned reply.

The many heard, and the loud revelry

Grew hush; the stately music no more breathes;

The myrtle sicken'd in a thousand wreaths.

By faint degrees, voice, lute, and pleasure ceased;

A deadly silence step by step increased,

Until it seem'd a horrid presence there,

And not a man but felt the terror in his hair.

"Lamia!" he shriek'd; and nothing but the shriek

With its sad echo did the silence break. 270

"Begone, foul dream!" he cried, gazing again

In the bride's face, where now no azure vein

Wander'd on fair-spaced temples; no soft bloom

Misted the cheek; no passion to illumine

239 her] whom MS.

246-7 Had got his eye, without a twinkle or stir,
 Fix'd on the alarmed Beauty of his Bride. MS.

254-5 Wherefore dost so start?

Dost know that Man? MS.

The deep-recessed vision:—all was blight;
 Lamia, no longer fair, there sat a deadly white.
 "Shut, shut those juggling eyes, thou ruthless man!
 "Turn them aside, wretch! or the righteous ban
 "Of all the Gods, whose dreadful images
 "Here represent their shadowy presences, 280
 "May pierce them on the sudden with the thorn
 "Of painful blindness; leaving thee forlorn,
 "In trembling dotage to the feeblest fright
 "Of conscience, for their long offended might,
 "For all thine impious proud-heart sophistries,
 "Unlawful magic, and enticing lies.
 "Corinthians! look upon that grey-beard wretch!
 "Mark how, possess'd, his lashless eyelids stretch
 "Around his demon eyes! Corinthians, see!
 "My sweet bride withers at their potency." 290
 "Fool!" said the sophist, in an under-tone
 Gruff with contempt; which a death-nighing moan
 From Lycius answer'd, as heart-struck and lost,
 He sank supine beside the aching ghost.
 "Fool! Fool!" repeated he, while his eyes still Relented not, nor mov'd; "from every ill
 "Of life have I preserv'd thee to this day,
 "And shall I see thee made a serpent's prey?"
 Then Lamia breath'd death breath; the sophist's eye,
 Like a sharp spear, went through her utterly, 300
 Keen, cruel, perçant, stinging: she, as well
 As her weak hand could any meaning tell,
 Motion'd him to be silent; vainly so,
 He look'd and look'd again a level—No!
 "A serpent!" echoed he; no sooner said,
 Than with a frightful scream she vanished:
 And Lycius' arms were empty of delight,
 As were his limbs of life, from that same night.
 On the high couch he lay!—his friends came round—

293-4 From Lycius answer'd, as he sunk supine
 Upon the couch where Lamia's beauties pine. MS.

296 "from every ill
 That youth might suffer have I shielded thee
 Up to this very hour, and shall I see
 Thee married to a Serpent? Pray you Mark, Corinthians! A Serpent, plain and stark!" MS.

Supported him—no pulse, or breath they found, 310
And, in its marriage robe, the heavy body wound.

311. The following extract is appended in Keats's edition as a note to the last line :—

"Philostratus, in his fourth book de Vita Apollonii, hath a memorable instance in this kind, which I may not omit, of one Menippus Lycius, a young man twenty-five years of age, that going betwixt Cenchreas and Corinth, met such a phantasm in the habit of a fair gentlewoman, which, taking him by the hand, carried him home to her house, in the suburbs of Corinth, and told him she was a Phœnician by birth, and if he would tarry with her, he should hear her sing and play, and drink such wine as never any drank, and no man should molest him; but she, being fair and lovely, would live and die with him, that was fair and lovely to behold. The young man, a philosopher, otherwise staid and discreet, able to moderate his passions, though not this of love, tarried with her a while to his great content, and at last married her, to whose wedding, amongst other guests, came Apollonius; who, by some probable conjectures, found her out to be a serpent, a lamia; and that all her furniture was, like Tantalus' gold, described by Homer, no substance but mere illusions. When she saw herself descried, she wept, and desired Apollonius to be silent, but he would not be moved, and thereupon she, plate, house, and all that was in it, vanished in an instant: many thousands took notice of this fact, for it was done in the midst of Greece."

ISABELLA ;

OR,

THE POT OF BASIL.

A Story from Boccaccio.

I.

FAIR Isabel, poor simple Isabel !

Lorenzo, a young palmer in Love's eye !
They could not in the self-same mansion dwell

Without some stir of heart, some malady ;
They could not sit at meals but feel how well

It soothed each to be the other by ;
They could not, sure, beneath the same roof sleep
But to each other dream, and nightly weep.

II.

With every morn their love grew tenderer,
With every eve deeper and tenderer still ;
He might not in house, field, or garden stir,
But her full shape would all his seeing fill ;
And his continual voice was pleasanter
To her, than noise of trees or hidden rill ;
Her lute-string gave an echo of his name,
She spoilt her half-done broidery with the same.

III.

He knew whose gentle hand was at the latch
Before the door had given her to his eyes ;
And from her chamber-window he would catch
Her beauty farther than the falcon spies ;
And constant as her vespers would he watch,
Because her face was turn'd to the same skies ;
And with sick longing all the night outwear,
To hear her morning-step upon the stair.

IV.

A whole long month of May in this sad plight

Made their cheeks paler by the break of June:

"To-morrow will I bow to my delight,

"To-morrow will I ask my lady's boon."—

"O may I never see another night,

"Lorenzo, if thy lips breathe not love's tune."—

So spake they to their pillows; but, alas,

Honeyless days and days did he let pass;

V.

Until sweet Isabella's untouch'd cheek

Fell sick within the rose's just domain,

Fell thin as a young mother's, who doth seek

By every lull to cool her infant's pain:

"How ill she is," said he, "I may not speak,

"And yet I will, and tell my love all plain:

"If looks speak love-laws, I will drink her tears,

"And at the least 'twill startle off her cares."

VI.

So said he one fair morning, and all day

His heart beat awfully against his side;

And to his heart he inwardly did pray

For power to speak; but still the ruddy tide

Stifled his voice, and puls'd resolve away—

Fever'd his high conceit of such a bride,

Yet brought him to the meekness of a child:

Alas! when passion is both meek and wild!

VII.

So once more he had wak'd and anguished

A dreary night of love and misery,

If Isabel's quick eye had not been wed

To every symbol on his forehead high;

She saw it waxing very pale and dead,

And straight all flush'd; so, lisped tenderly,

IV 6 Lorenzo, if thy tongue speak not love's tune. Holograph.

VI Opposite the close of this stanza, in the Woodhouse transcript, Keats has written in pencil Stop this as you please.

VII The word said stands cancelled before lisped (line 6) in the holograph, in which, as in the transcript, the stanza closes with a different

"Lorenzo!"—here she ceas'd her timid quest,
But in her tone and look he read the rest.

VIII.

"O Isabella, I can half perceive
"That I may speak my grief into thine ear;
"If thou didst ever anything believe,
"Believe how I love thee, believe how near
"My soul is to its doom: I would not grieve
"Thy hand by unwelcome pressing, would not fear
"Thine eyes by gazing; but I cannot live
"Another night, and not my passion shrive.

IX.

"Love! thou art leading me from wintry cold,
"Lady! thou leadest me to summer clime,
"And I must taste the blossoms that unfold
"In its ripe warmth this gracious morning time."
So said, his erewhile timid lips grew bold,
And poesied with hers in dewy rhyme:
Great bliss was with them, and great happiness
Grew, like a lusty flower in June's caress.

*couplet from that of the text and is followed by a stanza ultimately rejected:
here are the ten cancelled lines—*

"Lorenzo, I would clip my ringlet hair
To make thee laugh again and debonnair."
"Then should I be," said he, "full deified;
And yet I would not have it, clip it not:
For, lady, I do love it where 'tis tied
About the neck I dote on, and that spot
That anxious dimple it doth take a pride
To play about—Aye lady, I have got
Its shadow in my heart and every sweet
Its mistress owns there summed all complete.

In another handwriting, on the blank page opposite this passage in the holograph, stand the verses—

Lorenzo in the twilight Morn was wont
To rouse the clamorous Kennel to the Hunt;
And then his cheek inherited the Ray
Of the outpouring Sun; and ere the Horn
Could call the Hunters to the Chace away
His voice more softly woke me: Many a Morn
From sweetest Dreams it drew me to a Day
More sweet; but now Lorenzo holds in scorn
His Health; and all those bygone Joys are Dreams
To me—to him, I mean—so chang'd he seems.

X.

Parting they seem'd to tread upon the air,
Twin roses by the zephyr blown apart
Only to meet again more close, and share
The inward fragrance of each other's heart.
She, to her chamber gone, a ditty fair
Sang, of delicious love and honey'd dart;
He with light steps went up a western hill,
And bade the sun farewell, and joy'd his fill.

XI.

All close they met again, before the dusk
Had taken from the stars its pleasant veil,
All close they met, all eves, before the dusk
Had taken from the stars its pleasant veil,
Close in a bower of hyacinth and musk,
Unknown of any, free from whispering tale.
Ah! better had it been for ever so,
Than idle ears should pleasure in their woe.

XII.

Were they unhappy then?—It cannot be—
Too many tears for lovers have been shed,
Too many sighs give we to them in fee,
Too much of pity after they are dead,
Too many doleful stories do we see,
Whose matter in bright gold were best be read;
Except in such a page where Theseus' spouse
Over the pathless waves towards him bows.

XIII.

But, for the general award of love,
The little sweet doth kill much bitterness;
Though Dido silent is in under-grove,
And Isabella's was a great distress,
Though young Lorenzo in warm Indian clove
Was not embalm'd, this truth is not the less—
Even bees, the little almsmen of spring-bowers,
Know there is richest juice in poison-flowers.

XIV.

With her two brothers this fair lady dwelt,
Enriched from ancestral merchandize,

And for them many a weary hand did swelt
 In torched mines and noisy factories,
 And many once proud-quiver'd loins did melt
 In blood from stinging whip;—with hollow eyes
 Many all day in dazdling river stood,
 To take the rich-ored driftings of the flood.

xv.

For them the Ceylon diver held his breath,
 And went all naked to the hungry shark;
 For them his ears gush'd blood; for them in death
 The seal on the cold ice with piteous bark
 Lay full of darts; for them alone did seethe
 A thousand men in troubles wide and dark:
 Half-ignorant, they turn'd an easy wheel,
 That set sharp racks at work, to pinch and peel.

xvi.

Why were they proud? Because their marble founts
 Gush'd with more pride than do a wretch's tears?—
 Why were they proud? Because fair orange-mounts
 Were of more soft ascent than lazar stairs?—
 Why were they proud? Because red-lin'd accounts
 Were richer than the songs of Grecian years?—
 Why were they proud? again we ask aloud,
 Why in the name of Glory were they proud?

xvii.

Yet were these Florentines as self-retired
 In hungry pride and gainful cowardice,
 As two close Hebrews in that land inspired,
 Paled in and vineyarded from beggar-spies;
 The hawks of ship-mast forests—the untired
 And pannier'd mules for ducats and old lies—
 Quick cat's-paws on the generous stray-away,—
 Great wits in Spanish, Tuscan, and Malay.

XIV 5 proud-quiver'd 1820: no MS. authority for hyphen.

XVII This stanza is followed in the holograph by a cancelled one—

Two young Orlandos far away they seem'd,
 But on a near inspect their vapid Miens—
 Very alike,—at once themselves redeem'd
 From all suspicion of Romantic spleens—

XVIII.

How was it these same ledger-men could spy
 Fair Isabella in her downy nest?
 How could they find out in Lorenzo's eye
 A straying from his toil? Hot Egypt's pest
 Into their vision covetous and sly!
 How could these money-bags see east and west?—
 Yet so they did—and every dealer fair
 Must see behind, as doth the hunted hare.

XIX.

O eloquent and famed Boccaccio!
 Of thee we now should ask forgiving boon,
 And of thy spicy myrtles as they blow,
 And of thy roses amorous of the moon,
 And of thy lillies, that do paler grow
 Now they can no more hear thy ghittern's tune,
 For venturing syllables that ill beseem
 The quiet glooms of such a piteous theme.

XX.

Grant thou a pardon here, and then the tale
 Shall move on soberly, as it is meet;
 There is no other crime, no mad assail
 To make old prose in modern rhyme more sweet:
 But it is done—succeed the verse or fail—
 To honour thee, and thy gone spirit greet;
 To stead thee as a verse in English tongue,
 An echo of thee in the north-wind sung.

No fault of theirs, for their good Mother dream'd
 In the longing time of Units in their teens
 Of proudly bas'd addition and of net—
 And both their backs were mark'd with tare and tret.

XIX 1 O eloquent Boccace of green Arno! Holograph.

7-8 For venturing one word unseemly mean,
 In such a place, on such a daring theme. Holograph.

XX. *In the holograph the closing couplet was written as published;
 but Keats substituted for the first line of it, in the Woodhouse transcript,*

Thy Muse's Vicar in the english tongue;
and afterwards rejected that for the original reading.

XXI.

These brethren having found by many signs
What love Lorenzo for their sister had,
And how she lov'd him too, each unconfines
His bitter thoughts to other, well nigh mad
That he, the servant of their trade designs,
Should in their sister's love be blithe and glad,
When 'twas their plan to coax her by degrees
To some high noble and his olive-trees.

XXII.

And many a jealous conference had they,
And many times they bit their lips alone,
Before they fix'd upon a surest way
To make the youngster for his crime atone;
And at the last, these men of cruel clay
Cut Mercy with a sharp knife to the bone;
For they resolved in some forest dim
To kill Lorenzo, and there bury him.

XXIII.

So on a pleasant morning, as he leant
Into the sun-rise, o'er the balustrade
Of the garden-terrace, towards him they bent
Their footing through the dews; and to him said,
"You seem there in the quiet of content,
"Lorenzo, and we are most loth to invade
"Calm speculation; but if you are wise,
"Bestride your steed while cold is in the skies.

XXIV.

"To-day we purpose, aye, this hour we mount
"To spur three leagues towards the Apennine;
"Come down, we pray thee, ere the hot sun count
"His dewy rosary on the eglantine."
Lorenzo, courteously as he was wont,
Bow'd a fair greeting to these serpents' whine;
And went in haste, to get in readiness,
With belt, and spur, and bracing huntsman's dress.

XXI 8 olive] forest Holograph, cancelled.

XXV.

And as he to the court-yard pass'd along,
 Each third step did he pause, and listen'd oft
 If he could hear his lady's matin-song,
 Or the light whisper of her footstep soft;
 And as he thus over his passion hung,
 He heard a laugh full musical aloft;
 When, looking up, he saw her features bright
 Smile through an in-door lattice, all delight.

XXVI.

"Love, Isabel!" said he, "I was in pain
 "Lest I should miss to bid thee a good morrow:
 "Ah! what if I should lose thee, when so fain
 "I am to stifle all the heavy sorrow
 "Of a poor three hours' absence? but we'll gain
 "Out of the amorous dark what day doth borrow.
 "Good bye! I'll soon be back."—"Good bye!" said she:—

And as he went she chanted merrily.

XXVII.

So the two brothers and their murder'd man
 Rode past fair Florence, to where Arno's stream
 Gurgles through straiten'd banks, and still doth fan
 Itself with dancing bulrush, and the bream
 Keeps head against the freshets. Sick and wan
 The brothers' faces in the ford did seem,
 Lorenzo's flush with love.—They pass'd the water
 Into a forest quiet for the slaughter.

XXV The holograph has the couplet unfinished, thus—

And looking up he saw her smiling through
 A little in-door Lattice—

In the transcript Woodhouse left a blank for the couplet: Keats inserted

When, looking up, he saw her features fair
 Smile through an indoor lattice, debonair.

Someone, probably Taylor, took exception to this, and suggested

When lo an indoor lattice met his view,
 And her fair features smiling playful through.

Keats altered his own couplet to that of the text. A propos of the word debonair, he added the note—As I have used this word before in the poem you may use your judgement between your lines and mine.—I think my last alteration will do. This would seem to indicate that, at that stage in the proceedings, he had not thought of altering the couplet of Stanza VII and striking out the original Stanza VIII.

XXVIII.

There was Lorenzo slain and buried in,
 There in that forest did his great love cease;
 Ah! when a soul doth thus its freedom win,
 It aches in loneliness—is ill at peace
 As the break-covert blood-hounds of such sin:
 They dipp'd their swords in the water, and did tease
 Their horses homeward, with convulsed spur;
 Each richer by his being a murderer.

XXIX.

They told their sister how, with sudden speed,
 Lorenzo had ta'en ship for foreign lands,
 Because of some great urgency and need
 In their affairs, requiring trusty hands.
 Poor Girl! put on thy stifling widow's weed,
 And 'scape at once from Hope's accursed hands;
 To-day thou wilt not see him, nor to-morrow,
 And the next day will be a day of sorrow.

XXX.

She weeps alone for pleasures not to be;
 Sorely she wept until the night came on,
 And then, instead of love, O misery!
 She brooded o'er the luxury alone:
 His image in the dusk she seem'd to see,
 And to the silence made a gentle moan,
 Spreading her perfect arms upon the air,
 And on her couch low murmuring "Where? O where?"

XXXI.

But Selfishness, Love's cousin, held not long
 Its fiery vigil in her single breast;
 She fretted for the golden hour, and hung
 Upon the time with feverish unrest—
 Not long—for soon into her heart a throng
 Of higher occupants, a richer zest,

In the mid days of autumn, on their eves
The breath of Winter comes from far away,
And the sick west continually bereaves
Of some gold tinge, and plays a roundelay
Of death among the bushes and the leaves,
To make all bare before he dares to stray
From his north cavern. So sweet Isabel
By gradual decay from beauty fell,

Because Lorenzo came not. Oftentimes
She ask'd her brothers, with an eye all pale,
Striving to be itself, what dungeon climes
Could keep him off so long? They spake a tale
Time after time, to quiet her. Their crimes
Came on them, like a smoke from Hinnom's vale;
And every night in dreams they groan'd aloud,
To see their sister in her snowy shroud.

But for a thing more deadly dark than all;
It came like a fierce potion, drunk by chance,

With cruel pierce, and bringing him again

XXXV In line 1 the manuscript fragment reads heavy for drowsy;
and I cannot but think this application of the same adjective to ignorance and to gloom in the same page was a printer's or copyist's error. In

Lorenzo stood, and wept: the forest tomb
 Had marr'd his glossy hair which once could shoot
 Lustre into the sun, and put cold doom
 Upon his lips, and taken the soft lute
 From his lorn voice, and past his loamed ears
 Had made a miry channel for his tears.

XXXVI.

Strange sound it was, when the pale shadow spake;
 For there was striving, in its piteous tongue,
 To speak as when on earth it was awake,
 And Isabella on its music hung:
 Languor there was in it, and tremulous shake,
 As in a palsied Druid's harp unstrung;
 And through it moan'd a ghostly under-song,
 Like hoarse night-gusts sepulchral briars among.

XXXVII.

Its eyes, though wild, were still all dewy bright
 With love, and kept all phantom fear aloof
 From the poor girl by magic of their light,
 The while it did unthread the horrid work
 Of the late darken'd time,—the murderous spite
 Of pride and avarice,—the dark pine roof
 In the forest,—and the sodden turfed dell,
 Where, without any word, from stabs he fell.

XXXVIII.

Saying moreover, "Isabel, my sweet!
 "Red whortle-berries droop above my head,
 "And a large flint-stone weighs upon my feet;
 "Around me beeches and high chestnuts shed
 "Their leaves and prickly nuts; a sheep-fold bleat
 "Comes from beyond the river to my bed:

line 3, His has been struck out in favour of The; and lines 4 to 7 originally read—

Had marr'd his glossy hair, that once could shoot
 Bright gold into the Sun, and stamp'd his doom
 Upon his soiled lips, and took the mellow Lute
 From his deep voice, and down past his loamed ears...

But the readings put cold doom, and taken the soft Lute were afterwards substituted; and the redundant words soiled and down were struck out.

"Go, shed one tear upon my heather-bloom,
 "And it shall comfort me within the tomb.

XXXIX.

"I am a shadow now, alas! alas!
 "Upon the skirts of human-nature dwelling
 "Alone: I chant alone the holy mass,
 "While little sounds of life are round me knelling,
 "And glossy bees at noon do fieldward pass,
 "And many a chapel bell the hour is telling,
 "Paining me through: those sounds grow strange to me,
 "And thou art distant in Humanity.

XL.

"I know what was, I feel full well what is,
 "And I should rage, if spirits could go mad;
 "Though I forget the taste of earthly bliss,
 "That paleness warms my grave, as though I had
 "A Seraph chosen from the bright abyss
 "To be my spouse: thy paleness makes me glad;
 "Thy beauty grows upon me, and I feel
 "A greater love through all my essence steal."

XLI.

The Spirit mourn'd "Adieu!"—dissolv'd and left
 The atom darkness in a slow turmoil;
 As when of healthful midnight sleep bereft,
 Thinking on rugged hours and fruitless toil,
 We put our eyes into a pillowy cleft,
 And see the spangly gloom froth up and boil:
 It made sad Isabella's eyelids ache,
 And in the dawn she started up awake;

XLII.

"Ha! ha!" said she, "I knew not this hard life,
 "I thought the worst was simple misery;
 "I thought some Fate with pleasure or with strife
 "Portion'd us—happy days, or else to die;

"But there is crime—a brother's bloody knife!
"Sweet Spirit, thou hast school'd my infancy:
"I'll visit thee for this, and kiss thine eyes,
"And greet thee morn and even in the skies."

XLIII.

When the full morning came, she had devised
How she might secret to the forest hie;
How she might find the clay, so dearly prized,
And sing to it one latest lullaby;
How her short absence might be unsurmised,
While she the inmost of the dream would try.
Resolv'd, she took with her an aged nurse,
And went into that dismal forest-hearse.

XLIV.

See, as they creep along the river side,
How she doth whisper to that aged Dame,
And, after looking round the champaign wide,
Shows her a knife.—"What feverous hectic flame
"Burns in thee, child?—What good can thee betide,
"That thou should'st smile again?"—The evening came,
And they had found Lorenzo's earthy bed;
The flint was there, the berries at his head.

XLV.

Who hath not loiter'd in a green church-yard,
And let his spirit, like a demon-mole,
Work through the clayey soil and gravel hard,
To see scull, coffin'd bones, and funeral stole;
Pitying each form that hungry Death hath marr'd,
And filling it once more with human soul?
Ah! this is holiday to what was felt
When Isabella by Lorenzo knelt.

XLVI.

She gaz'd into the fresh-thrown mould, as though
One glance did fully all its secrets tell;
Clearly she saw, as other eyes would know
Pale limbs at bottom of a crystal well;
Upon the murderous spot she seem'd to grow,
Like to a native lilly of the dell:
Then with her knife, all sudden, she began
To dig more fervently than misers can.

XLVII.

Soon she turn'd up a soiled glove, whereon
 Her silk had play'd in purple phantasies,
 She kiss'd it with a lip more chill than stone,
 And put it in her bosom, where it dries
 And freezes utterly unto the bone
 Those dainties made to still an infant's cries:
 Then 'gan she work again; nor stay'd her care,
 But to throw back at times her veiling hair.

XLVIII.

That old nurse stood beside her wondering,
 Until her heart felt pity to the core
 At sight of such a dismal labouring,
 And so she kneeled, with her locks all hoar,
 And put her lean hands to the horrid thing:
 Three hours they labour'd at this travail sore;
 At last they felt the kernel of the grave,
 And Isabella did not stamp and rave.

XLIX.

Ah! wherefore all this wormy circumstance?
 Why linger at the yawning tomb so long?
 O for the gentleness of old Romance,
 The simple plaining of a minstrel's song!
 Fair reader, at the old tale take a glance,
 For here, in truth, it doth not well belong
 To speak:—O turn thee to the very tale,
 And taste the music of that vision pale.

L.

With duller steel than the Perséan sword
 They cut away no formless monster's head,
 But one, whose gentleness did well accord
 With death, as life. The ancient harps have said,
 Love never dies, but lives, immortal Lord:
 If Love impersonate was ever dead,
 Pale Isabella kiss'd it, and low moan'd.
 'Twas love; cold,—dead indeed, but not dethroned.

L 1-3 With duller sliver than the Persean sword
 They cut away—no foul Medusa's head
 But one's... Holograph.

6 If ever any piece of Love was dead... Holograph.

LI.

In anxious secrecy they took it home,
And then the prize was all for Isabel:
She calm'd its wild hair with a golden comb,
And all around each eye's sepulchral cell
Pointed each fringed lash; the smeared loam
With tears, as chilly as a dripping well,
She drench'd away:—and still she comb'd, and kept
Sighing all day—and still she kiss'd, and wept.

LII.

Then in a silken scarf,—sweet with the dews
Of precious flowers pluck'd in Araby,
And divine liquids come with odorous ooze
Through the cold serpent-pipe refreshfully,—
She wrapp'd it up; and for its tomb did choose
A garden-pot, wherein she laid it by,
And cover'd it with mould, and o'er it set
Sweet Basil, which her tears kept ever wet.

LIII.

And she forgot the stars, the moon, and sun,
And she forgot the blue above the trees,
And she forgot the dells where waters run,
And she forgot the chilly autumn breeze;
She had no knowledge when the day was done,
And the new morn she saw not: but in peace
Hung over her sweet Basil evermore,
And moisten'd it with tears unto the core.

LIV.

And so she ever fed it with thin tears,
Whence thick, and green, and beautiful it grew,
So that it smelt more balmy than its peers
Of Basil-tufts in Florence; for it drew
Nurture besides, and life, from human fears,
From the fast mouldering head there shut from view:
So that the jewel, safely casketed,
Came forth, and in perfumed leafits spread.

LI 5 fringed] single Holograph.

LV.

O Melancholy, linger here awhile!
O Music, Music, breathe despondingly!
O Echo, Echo, from some sombre isle,
Unknown, Lethean, sigh to us—O sigh!
Spirits in grief, lift up your heads, and smile;
Lift up your heads, sweet Spirits, heavily,
And make a pale light in your cypress glooms,
Tinting with silver wan your marble tombs.

LVI.

Moan hither, all ye syllables of woe,
From the deep throat of sad Melpomene!
Through bronzed lyre in tragic order go,
And touch the strings into a mystery;
Sound mournfully upon the winds and low;
For simple Isabel is soon to be
Among the dead: She withers, like a palm
Cut by an Indian for its juicy balm.

LVII.

O leave the palm to wither by itself;
Let not quick Winter chill its dying hour!—
It may not be—those Baälites of pelf,
Her brethren, noted the continual shower
From her dead eyes; and many a curious elf,
Among her kindred, wonder'd that such dower
Of youth and beauty should be thrown aside
By one mark'd out to be a Noble's bride.

LVIII.

And, furthermore, her brethren wonder'd much
Why she sat drooping by the Basil green,
And why it flourish'd, as by magic touch;
Greatly they wonder'd what the thing might mean:
They could not surely give belief, that such
A very nothing would have power to wean
Her from her own fair youth, and pleasures gay,
And even remembrance of her love's delay.

LIX.

Therefore they watch'd a time when they might sift
 This hidden whim; and long they watch'd in vain;
 For seldom did she go to chapel-shrift,
 And seldom felt she any hunger-pain;
 And when she left, she hurried back, as swift
 As bird on wing to breast its eggs again;
 And, patient as a hen-bird, sat her there
 Beside her Basil, weeping through her hair.

LX.

Yet they contriv'd to steal the Basil-pot,
 And to examine it in secret place;
 The thing was vile with green and livid spot,
 And yet they knew it was Lorenzo's face:
 The guerdon of their murder they had got,
 And so left Florence in a moment's space,
 Never to turn again.—Away they went,
 With blood upon their heads, to banishment.

LXI.

O Melancholy, turn thine eyes away!
 O Music, Music, breathe despondingly!
 O Echo, Echo, on some other day,
 From isles Lethæan, sigh to us—O sigh!
 Spirits of grief, sing not your "Well-a-way!"
 For Isabel, sweet Isabel, will die;
 Will die a death too lone and incomplete,
 Now they have ta'en away her Basil sweet.

LXII.

Piteous she look'd on dead and senseless things,
 Asking for her lost Basil amorously;
 And with melodious chuckle in the strings
 Of her lorn voice, she oftentimes would cry
 After the Pilgrim in his wanderings,
 To ask him where her Basil was; and why
 'Twas hid from her: "For cruel 'tis," said she,
 "To steal my Basil-pot away from me."

LX 6-7 The punctuation of the holograph brings out a shade of difference in the sense, thus—

And so left Florence in a moment's space—
 Never to turn again away they went...

LXIII.

And so she pined, and so she died forlorn,
Imploring for her Basil to the last.
No heart was there in Florence but did mourn
In pity of her love, so overcast.
And a sad ditty of this story born
From mouth to mouth through all the country pass'd:
Still is the burthen sung—"O cruelty,
"To steal my Basil-pot away from me!"

THE EVE OF ST. AGNES

I.

St. Agnes' Eve—Ah, bitter chill it was!
The owl, for all his feathers, was a-cold;
The hare limp'd trembling through the frozen grass,
And silent was the flock in woolly fold:
Numb were the Beadsman's fingers, while he told
His rosary, and while his frosted breath,
Like pious incense from a censer old,
Seem'd taking flight for heaven, without a death,
Past the sweet Virgin's picture, while his prayer he saith.

II.

His prayer he saith, this patient, holy man;
Then takes his lamp, and riseth from his knees,
And back returneth, meagre, barefoot, wan,
Along the chapel aisle by slow degrees:
The sculptur'd dead, on each side, seem to freeze,
Emprison'd in black, purgatorial rails:
Knights, ladies, praying in dumb orat'ries,
He passeth by; and his weak spirit fails
To think how they may ache in icy hoods and mails.

III.

Northward he turneth through a little door,
And scarce three steps, ere Music's golden tongue
Flatter'd to tears this aged man and poor;
But no—already had his deathbell rung:
The joys of all his life were said and sung:
His was harsh penance on St. Agnes' Eve:
Another way he went, and soon among
Rough ashes sat he for his soul's reprieve,
And all night kept awake, for sinners' sake to grieve.

III 7, 8 went . . . Rough] turn'd . . . Black Woodhouse transcript.

IV.

That ancient Beadsman heard the prelude soft;
 And so it chanc'd, for many a door was wide,
 From hurry to and fro. Soon, up aloft,
 The silver, snarling trumpets 'gan to chide:
 The level chambers, ready with their pride,
 Were glowing to receive a thousand guests:
 The carved angels, ever eager-eyed,
 Star'd, where upon their heads the cornice rests,
 With hair blown back, and wings put cross-wise on their breasts.

V.

At length burst in the argent revelry,
 With plume, tiara, and all rich array,
 Numerous as shadows haunting faerily
 The brain, new stuff'd, in youth, with triumphs gay
 Of old romance. These let us wish away,
 And turn, sole-thoughted, to one Lady there,
 Whose heart had brooded, all that wintry day,
 On love, and wing'd St. Agnes' saintly care,
 As she had heard old dames full many times declare.

IV After Stanza III the Woodhouse transcript has the following stanza, suppressed in the poem as printed—

But there are ears may hear sweet melodies,
 And there are eyes to brighten festivals,
 And there are feet for nimble minstrelsies,
 And many a lip that for the red wine calls.—
 Follow, then follow to the illumined halls,
 Follow me youth—and leave the eremite—
 Give him a tear—then trophied banneral[s]
 And many a brilliant tasseling of light

Shall droop from arched ways this high baronial night.

In what is now Stanza IV, Woodhouse has and now aloft for Soon, up aloft, in line 3, and Seem'd anxious for Were glowing in line 6. G. Keats's transcript reads High-lamped for The level in line 5.

3-6 Ah what are they? the idle pulse scarce stirs,
 The muse should never make the spirit gay;
 Away, bright dulness, laughing fools away,—
 And let me tell of one sweet lady there... Woodhouse.

VI.

They told her how, upon St. Agnes' Eve,
 Young virgins might have visions of delight,
 And soft adorings from their loves receive
 Upon the honey'd middle of the night,
 If ceremonies due they did aright;
 As, supperless to bed they must retire,
 And couch supine their beauties, lilly white;
 Nor look behind, nor sideways, but require
 Of Heaven with upward eyes for all that they desire.

VII.

Full of this whim was thoughtful Madeline:
 The music, yearning like a God in pain,
 She scarcely heard: her maiden eyes divine,
 Fix'd on the floor, saw many a sweeping train
 Pass by—she heeded not at all: in vain
 Came many a tiptoe, amorous cavalier,
 And back retir'd; not cool'd by high disdain,
 But she saw not: her heart was elsewhere:
 She sigh'd for Agnes' dreams, the sweetest of the year.

VI Between Stanzas VI and VII G. Keats has the following stanza, not in the printed text—

'Twas said her future lord would there appear
 Offering as sacrifice—all in the dream—
 Delicious food even to her lips brought near:
 Viands and wine and fruit and sugar'd cream,
 To touch her palate with the fine extreme
 Of relish: then soft music heard; and then
 More pleasures followed in a dizzy stream
 Palpable almost: then to wake again
 Warm in the virgin morn, no weeping Magdalen.

VII In a letter to Taylor dated the 11th of June 1820 Keats says he has been reading the proofs, and has found "what appears" to be an alteration here, namely—

her maiden eyes incline
 Still on the floor, while many a sweeping train Pass by.

"My meaning," says the poet, "is quite destroyed by the alteration. I do not use 'train' for 'concourse of passers by,' but for 'skirts' sweeping along the floor."

VIII.

She danc'd along with vague, regardless eyes.
 Anxious her lips, her breathing quick and short :
 The hallow'd hour was near at hand : she sighs
 Amid the timbrels, and the throng'd resort
 Of whisperers in anger, or in sport ;
 'Mid looks of love, defiance, hate, and scorn,
 Hoodwink'd with faery fancy ; all amort,
 Save to St. Agnes and her lambs unshorn,
 And all the bliss to be before to-morrow morn.

IX.

So, purposing each moment to retire,
 She linger'd still. Meantime, across the moors,
 Had come young Porphyro, with heart on fire
 For Madeline. Beside the portal doors,
 Buttress'd from moonlight, stands he, and implores
 All saints to give him sight of Madeline,
 But for one moment in the tedious hours,
 That he might gaze and worship all unseen ; Perchance speak, kneel, touch, kiss—in sooth such things have been.

X.

He ventures in : let no buzz'd whisper tell :
 All eyes be muffled, or a hundred swords
 Will storm his heart, Love's fev'rous citadel :
 For him, those chambers held barbarian hordes,

XI.

Ah, happy chance! the aged creature came,
 Shuffling along with ivory-headed wand,
 To where he stood, hid from the torch's flame,
 Behind a broad hall-pillar, far beyond
 The sound of merriment and chorus bland:
 He startled her; but soon she knew his face,
 And grasp'd his fingers in her palsied hand,
 Saying, "Mercy, Porphyro! hie thee from this place:
 "They are all here to-night, the whole blood-thirsty race!

Young Porphyro, for gazing on that bed ;
 She comes, she comes again, like ring-dove fray'd and fled.

XXIII.

Out went the taper as she hurried in ;
 Its little smoke, in pallid moonshine, died :
 She clos'd the door, she panted, all akin
 To spirits of the air, and visions wide :
 No uttered syllable, or, woe betide !
 But to her heart, her heart was voluble,
 Paining with eloquence her balmy side ;
 As though a tongueless nightingale should swell
 Her throat in vain, and die, heart-stifled, in her dell.

XXIV.

A casement high and triple-arch'd there was,

 As are the tiger-moth's deep-damask'd wings ;
 And in the midst, 'mong thousand heraldries,
 And twilight saints, and dim emblazonings,
 A shielded scutcheon blush'd with blood of queens

Soon, trembling in her soft and chilly nest,
 In sort of wakeful swoon, perplex'd she lay,
 Until the poppi'd warmth of sleep oppress'd
 Her soothed limbs, and soul fatigued away;
 Flown, like a thought, until the morrow-day;
 Blissfully haven'd both from joy and pain;
 Clasp'd like a missal where swart Paynims pray;
 Blinded alike from sunshine and from rain,
 As though a rose should shut, and be a bud again.

XXVIII.

Stol'n to this paradise, and so entranced,
 Porphyro gazed upon her empty dress,
 And listen'd to her breathing, if it chanced
 To wake into a slumberous tenderness;
 Which when he heard, that minute did he bless.
 And breath'd himself: then from the closet crept,
 Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness,
 And over the hush'd carpet, silent, stopt,
 And 'tween the curtains peep'd, where, lo!—how fast
 she slept.

A cloth of woven crimson, gold, and jet:—
 O for some drowsy Morphean amulet!
 The boisterous, midnight, festive clarion,
 The kettle-drum, and far-heard clarinet,
 Affray his ears, though but in dying tone:—
 The hall door shuts again, and all the noise is gone.

XXX.

And still she slept an azure-lidded sleep,
 In blanched linen, smooth, and lavender'd,
 While he from forth the closet brought a heap
 Of candied apple, quince, and plum, and gourd;
 With jellies soother than the creamy curd,
 And lucent syrups, tinct with cinnamon;
 Manna and dates, in argosy transferr'd
 From Fez; and spiced dainties, every one,
 From silken Samarcand to cedar'd Lebanon.

XXXI.

These delicacies he heap'd with glowing hand
 On golden dishes and in baskets bright
 Of wreathed silver: sumptuous they stand
 In the retired quiet of the night,
 Filling the chilly room with perfume light.—

 "Thou art my heaven, and I thine hermit:

Thus whispering, his warm, unnerved arm
 Sank in her pillow. Shaded was her dream
 By the dusk curtains:—'twas a midnight charm
 Impossible to melt as iced stream:
 The lustrous salvers in the moonlight gleam;
 Broad golden fringe upon the carpet lies:
 It seem'd he never, never could redeem
 From such a stedfast spell his lady's eyes;
 So mus'd awhile, entoil'd in woofed phantasies.

XXXIII.

Awakening up, he took her hollow lute,—
 Tumultuous,—and, in chords that tenderest be,
 He play'd an ancient ditty, long since mute,
 In Provence call'd, "La belle dame sans mercy:"
 Close to her ear touching the melody;—
 Wherewith disturb'd, she utter'd a soft moan:
 He ceased—she panted quick—and suddenly
 Her blue affrayed eyes wide open shone:
 Upon his knees he sank, pale as smooth-sculptured stone.

XXXIV.

Her eyes were open, but she still beheld,
 Now wide awake, the vision of her sleep:
 There was a painful change, that nigh expell'd
 The blisses of her dream so pure and deep
 At which fair Madeline began to weep,
 And moan forth witless words with many a sigh;
 While still her gaze on Porphyro would keep;
 Who knelt, with joined hands and piteous eye,
 Fearing to move or speak, she look'd so dreamingly.

Beyond a mortal man impassion'd far
 At these voluptuous accents, he arose,
 Ethereal, flush'd, and like a throbbing star
 Seen mid the sapphire heaven's deep repose;
 Into her dream he melted, as the rose
 Blendeth its odour with the violet,—
 Solution sweet: meantime the frost-wind blows
 Like Love's alarum pattering the sharp sleet
 Against the window-panes; St. Agnes' moon hath set.

She hurried at his words, beset with fears.
 For there were sleeping dragons all around,
 At glaring watch, perhaps, with ready spears—
 Down the wide stairs a darkling way they found.—
 In all the house was heard no human sound.
 A chain-droop'd lamp was flickering by each door ;
 The arras, rich with horseman, hawk, and hound,
 Flutter'd in the besieging wind's uproar ;
 And the long carpets rose along the gusty floor.

 Like phantoms, to the iron porch, they glide ;

 With a huge empty flaggon by his side:
 The wakeful bloodhound rose, and shook his hide,
 But his sagacious eye an inmate owns :
 By one, and one, the bolts full easy slide :—
 The chains lie silent on the footworn stones ;—
 The key turns, and the door upon its hinges groans.

These lovers fled away into the storm.

POEMS

ODE TO A NIGHTINGALE

I.

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains
 My sense, as though of hemlock I had drunk,
 Or emptied some dull opiate to the drains
 One minute past, and Lethe-wards had sunk :
 'Tis not through envy of thy happy lot,
 But being too happy in thine happiness,—
 That thou, light-winged Dryad of the trees,
 In some melodious plot
 Of beechen green, and shadows numberless,
 Singest of summer in full-throated ease.

II.

O, for a draught of vintage! that hath been
 Cool'd a long age in the deep-delved earth,
 Tasting of Flora and the country green,
 Dance, and Provençal song, and sunburnt mirth!
 O for a beaker full of the warm South,
 Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene,
 With beaded bubbles winking at the brim,
 And purple-stained mouth;
 That I might drink, and leave the world unseen,
 And with thee fade away into the forest dim :

Fade far away, dissolve, and quite forget
 What thou among the leaves hast never known,
 The weariness, the fever, and the fret
 Here, where men sit and hear each other groan ;
 Where palsy shakes a few, sad, last gray hairs,
 Where youth grows pale, and spectre-thin, and dies ;
 Where but to think is to be full of sorrow
 And leaden-eyed despairs,
 Where Beauty cannot keep her lustrous eyes,
 Or new Love pine at them beyond to-morrow.

IV.

Away ! away ! for I will fly to thee,
 Not charioted by Bacchus and his pards,
 But on the viewless wings of Poesy,
 Though the dull brain perplexes and retards :
 Already with thee ! tender is the night,
 And haply the Queen-Moon is on her throne,
 Cluster'd around by all her starry Fays ;
 But here there is no light,
 Save what from heaven is with the breezes blown
 Through verdurous glooms and winding mossy ways.

V.

I cannot see what flowers are at my feet,
 Nor what soft incense hangs upon the boughs,
 But, in embalmed darkness, guess each sweet
 Wherewith the seasonable month endows
 The grass, the thicket, and the fruit-tree wild ;
 White hawthorn, and the pastoral eglantine ;
 Fast fading violets cover'd up in leaves ;
 And mid-May's eldest child,
 The coming musk-rose, full of dewy wine,
 The murmurous haunt of flies on summer eves.

Darkling I listen ; and, for many a time
 I have been half in love with easeful Death,
 Call'd him soft names in many a mused rhyme,
 To take into the air my quiet breath ;
 Now more than ever seems it rich to die,
 To cease upon the midnight with no pain,
 While thou art pouring forth thy soul abroad
 In such an ecstasy !
 Still wouldst thou sing, and I have ears in vain—
 To thy high requiem become a sod.

VII.

Thou wast not born for death, immortal Bird !
 No hungry generations tread thee down ;
 The voice I hear this passing night was heard
 In ancient days by emperor and clown :
 Perhaps the self-same song that found a path
 Through the sad heart of Ruth, when, sick for home,
 She stood in tears amid the alien corn ;
 The same that oft-times hath
 Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam
 Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

ODE ON A GRECIAN URN

I.

Thou still unravish'd bride of quietness,
 Thou foster-child of silence and slow time,
 Sylvan historian, who canst thus express
 A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme :
 What leaf-fring'd legend haunts about thy shape
 Of deities or mortals, or of both,
 In Tempe or the dales of Arcady ?
 What men or gods are these ? What maidens loth ?
 What mad pursuit ? What struggle to escape ?
 What pipes and timbrels ? What wild ecstasy ?

II.

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
 Are sweeter ; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on ;
 Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,
 Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone :
 Fair youth, beneath the trees, thou canst not leave
 Thy song, nor ever can those trees be bare ;
 Bold Lover, never, never canst thou kiss,
 Though winning near the goal—yet, do not grieve ;

And, happy melodist, unwearied,
For ever piping songs for ever new;
More happy love! more happy, happy love!
For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd,
For ever panting, and for ever young;
All breathing human passion far above,
That leaves a heart high-sorrowful and cloy'd,
A burning forehead, and a parching tongue.

IV.

Who are these coming to the sacrifice?
To what green altar, O mysterious priest,
Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies,
And all her silken flanks with garlands drest?
What little town by river or sea shore,
Or mountain-built with peaceful citadel,
Is emptied of this folk, this pious morn?
And, little town, thy streets for evermore
Will silent be; and not a soul to tell
Why thou art desolate, can e'er return.

Of marble men and maidens overwrought,
With forest branches and the trodden weed;
Thou, silent form, dost tease us out of thought

When old age shall this generation waste,
Thou shalt remain, in midst of other woe

ODE TO PSYCHE

O GODDESS ! hear these tuneless numbers, wrung
 By sweet enforcement and remembrance dear,
 And pardon that thy secrets should be sung
 Even into thine own soft-conched ear :
 Surely I dreamt to-day, or did I see
 The winged Psyche with awaken'd eyes ?
 I wander'd in a forest thoughtlessly,
 And, on the sudden, fainting with surprise,
 Saw two fair creatures, couched side by side
 In deepest grass, beneath the whispering roof 10
 Of leaves and trembled blossoms, where there ran
 A brooklet, scarce espied :

'Mid hush'd, cool-rooted flowers, fragrant-eyed,
 Blue, silver-white, and budded Tyrian,
 They lay calm-breathing on the bedded grass ;
 Their arms embraced, and their pinions too ;
 Their lips touch'd not, but had not bade adieu,
 As if disjoined by soft-handed slumber,
 And ready still past kisses to outnumber
 At tender eye-dawn of aureorean love : 20
 The winged boy I knew ;
 But who wast thou, O happy, happy dove ?
 His Psyche true !

O latest born and loveliest vision far
 Of all Olympus' faded hierarchy !
 Fairer than Phoebe's sapphire-region'd star,
 Or Vesper, amorous glow-worm of the sky ;

O brightest ! though too late for antique vows,
 Too, too late for the fond believing lyre,
 When holy were the haunted forest boughs,
 Holy the air, the water, and the fire ;
 Yet even in these days so far retir'd 40
 From happy pieties, thy lucent fans,
 Fluttering among the faint Olympians,
 I see, and sing, by my own eyes inspir'd.
 So let me be thy choir, and make a moan

FANCY

EVER let the fancy roam,
 Pleasure never is at home:
 At a touch sweet Pleasure melteth,
 Like to bubbles when rain pelteth;
 Then let winged Fancy wander
 Through the thought still spread beyond her:
 Open wide the mind's cage-door,
 She'll dart forth, and cloudward soar.
 O sweet Fancy! let her loose;
 Summer's joys are spoilt by use, 10
 And the enjoying of the Spring
 Fades as does its blossoming;
 Autumn's red-lipp'd fruitage too,
 Blushing through the mist and dew,
 Cloys with tasting: What do then?
 Sit thee by the ingle, when
 The sear faggot blazes bright,

 Fancy, high-commission'd :—send her !
 She has vassals to attend her :
 She will bring, in spite of frost,
 Beauties that the earth hath lost ; 30
 She will bring thee, all together,
 All delights of summer weather ;
 All the buds and bells of May,
 From dewy sward or thorny spray ;
 All the heaped Autumn's wealth,
 With a still, mysterious stealth :
 She will mix these pleasures up
 Like three fit wines in a cup,
 And thou shalt quaff it :—thou shalt hear
 Distant harvest-carols clear ; 40
 Rustle of the reaped corn ;
 Sweet birds antheming the morn :
 And, in the same moment—hark !
 'Tis the early April lark,

 Foraging for sticks and straw.

White as Hebe's, when her zone
 Slipt its golden clasp, and down
 Fell her kirtle to her feet,
 While she held the goblet sweet,
 And Jove grew languid.—Break the mesh
 Of the Fancy's silken leash;
 Quickly break her prison-string
 And such joys as these she'll bring.—
 Let the winged Fancy roam,
 Pleasure never is at home.

ODE

[Written on the blank page before Beaumont and Fletcher's
Tragi-Comedy "The Fair Maid of the Inn."]

BARDS of Passion and of Mirth,
 Ye have left your souls on earth!
 Have ye souls in heaven too,
 Double lived in regions new?
 Yes, and those of heaven commune
 With the spheres of sun and moon;
 With the noise of fountains wond'rous,
 And the parle of voices thund'rous;
 With the whisper of heaven's trees
 And one another, in soft ease

89-91 Instead of these three lines the manuscripts have the following seventeen :

And Jove grew languid. Mistress fair!
 Thou shalt have that tressed hair
 Adonis tangled all for spite
 And the mouth he would not kiss
 And the treasure he would miss:
 And the hand he would not press
 And the warmth he would distress
 O the ravishment—the bliss—
 Fancy has her—there she is!
 Never fulsome—ever new
 There she steps! and tell me who
 Has a mistress so divine?
 Be the palate ne'er so fine
 She cannot sicken. Break the mesh
 Of the Fancy's silken leash
 Where she's tether'd to the heart—
 Quick break her prison string...

Seated on Elysian lawns
 Brows'd by none but Dian's fawns;
 Underneath large blue-bells tented,
 Where the daisies are rose-scented,
 And the rose herself has got Perfume which on earth is not;
 Where the nightingale doth sing
 Not a senseless, tranced thing,
 But divine melodious truth;
 Philosophic numbers smooth;
 Tales and golden histories
 Of heaven and its mysteries.

20

Thus ye live on high, and then
 On the earth ye live again;
 And the souls ye left behind you
 Teach us, here, the way to find you,
 Where your other souls are joying,
 Never slumber'd, never cloying.
 Here, your earth-born souls still speak
 To mortals, of their little week;
 Of their sorrows and delights;
 Of their passions and their spites;
 Of their glory and their shame;
 What doth strengthen and what maim.
 Thus ye teach us, every day,
 Wisdom, though fled far away.

LINES ON THE MERMAID TAVERN

SOULS of Poets dead and gone,
 What Elysium have ye known,
 Happy field or mossy cavern,
 Choicer than the Mermaid Tavern?
 Have ye tippled drink more fine
 Than mine host's Canary wine?
 Or are fruits of Paradise
 Sweeter than those dainty pies
 Of venison? O generous food!
 Drest as though bold Robin Hood
 Would, with his maid Marian,
 Sup and bowse from horn and can.

10

I have heard that on a day
 Mine host's sign-board flew away,
 Nobody knew whither, till
 An astrologer's old quill
 To a sheepskin gave the story,
 Said he saw you in your glory,
 Underneath a new old sign
 Sipping beverage divine,
 And pledging with contented smack
 The Mermaid in the Zodiac.

ROBIN HOOD

TO A FRIEND

No! those days are gone away,
 And their hours are old and gray,
 And their minutes buried all
 Under the down-trodden pall
 Of the leaves of many years:
 Many times have winter's shears,
 Frozen North, and chilling East,
 Sounded tempests to the feast
 Of the forest's whispering fleeces,
 Since men knew nor rent nor leases.

10

No, the bugle sounds no more,
 And the twanging bow no more;
 Silent is the ivory shrill
 Past the heath and up the hill;
 There is no mid-forest laugh,
 Where lone Echo gives the half
 To some wight, amaz'd to hear
 Jestings, deep in forest drear.

On the fairest time of June
 You may go, with sun or moon,
 Or the seven stars to light you,
 Or the polar ray to right you;

 Thrumming on an empty can

 For he left the merry tale
 Messenger for spicy ale.

30

Gone, the merry morris din;
 Gone, the song of Gamelyn;
 Gone, the tough-belted outlaw
 Idling in the "grenè shawe";
 All are gone away and past!
 And if Robin should be cast
 Sudden from his turfed grave,
 And if Marian should have
 Once again her forest days,
 She would weep, and he would craze:
 He would swear, for all his oaks,
 Fall'n beneath the dockyard strokes,
 Have rotted on the briny seas;
 She would weep that her wild bees
 Sang not to her—strange! that honey
 Can't be got without hard money!

SEASON of mists and mellow fruitfulness,
 Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun ;
 Conspiring with him how to load and bless
 With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eves run ;
 To bend with apples the moss'd cottage-trees,
 And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core ;
 To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
 With a sweet kernel ; to set budding more,
 And still more, later flowers for the bees,
 Until they think warm days will never cease,
 For Summer has o'er-brimm'd their clammy cells.

ODE ON MELANCHOLY

I.

No, no, go not to Lethe, neither twist
 Wolf's-bane, tight-rooted, for its poisonous wine;
 Nor suffer thy pale forehead to be kiss'd
 By nightshade, ruby grape of Proserpine;
 Make not your rosary of yew-berries,
 Nor let the beetle, nor the death-moth be
 Your mournful Psyche, nor the downy owl
 A partner in your sorrow's mysteries;
 For shade to shade will come too drowsily,
 And drown the wakeful anguish of the soul.

II.

But when the melancholy fit shall fall
 Sudden from heaven like a weeping cloud,
 That fosters the droop-headed flowers all,
 And hides the green hill in an April shroud;
 Then glut thy sorrow on a morning rose,
 Or on the rainbow of the salt sand-wave,
 Or on the wealth of globed peonies;
 Or if thy mistress some rich anger shows,
 Emprison her soft hand, and let her rave,
 And feed deep, deep upon her peerless eyes.

Of the Ode on Melancholy Lord Houghton gives the following stanza as a rejected opening from the original manuscript:

Though you should build a bark of dead men's bones,
 And rear a phantom gibbet for a mast,
 Stitch shrouds together for a sail, with groans
 To fill it out, blood-stained and aghast;
 Although your rudder be a dragon's tail
 Long sever'd, yet still hard with agony,
 Your cordage large uprootings from the skull
 Of bald Medusa, certes you would fail
 To find the Melancholy—whether she
 Dreameth in any isle of Lethe dull...

II 4 hill] hills Museum.

III.

She dwells with Beauty—Beauty that must die :
And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips
Bidding adieu ; and aching Pleasure nigh,
Turning to Poison while the bee-mouth sips:
Ay, in the very temple of delight
Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine,
Though seen of none save him whose strenuous tongue
Can burst Joy's grape against his palate fine ;
His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,
And be among her cloudy trophies hung.

HYPERION

A FRAGMENT

BOOK I

DEEP in the shady sadness of a vale
Far sunken from the healthy breath of morn,
Far from the fiery noon, and eve's one star,
Sat gray-hair'd Saturn, quiet as a stone,
Still as the silence round about his lair ;
Forest on forest hung about his head
Like cloud on cloud. No stir of air was there,
Not so much life as on a summer's day
Robs not one light seed from the feather'd grass,
But where the dead leaf fell, there did it rest. 10
A stream went voiceless by, still deadened more
By reason of his fallen divinity
Spreading a shade: the Naiad 'mid her reeds
Press'd her cold finger closer to her lips.

Along the margin-sand large foot-marks went,
No further than to where his feet had stray'd,
And slept there since. Upon the sodden ground
His old right hand lay nerveless, listless, dead,
Unseptr'd ; and his realmless eyes were closed :

While his bow'd head seem'd list'ning to the Earth,
His ancient mother, for some comfort yet. 21

It seem'd no force could wake him from his place ;
But there came one, who with a kindred hand
Touch'd his wide shoulders, after bending low
With reverence, though to one who knew it not.
She was a Goddess of the infant world ;
By her in stature the tall Amazon
Had stood a pigmy's height : she would have ta'en
Achilles by the hair and bent his neck ;
Or with a finger stay'd Ixion's wheel. 30
Her face was large as that of Memphian sphinx,
Pedestal'd haply in a palace court,
When sages look'd to Egypt for their lore.
But oh ! how unlike marble was that face :
How beautiful, if sorrow had not made
Sorrow more beautiful than Beauty's self.
There was a listening fear in her regard,
As if calamity had but begun ;
As if the vanward clouds of evil days
Had spent their malice, and the sullen rear 40
Was with its stored thunder labouring up.
One hand she press'd upon that aching spot
Where beats the human heart, as if just there,
Though an immortal, she felt cruel pain :
The other upon Saturn's bended neck
She laid, and to the level of his ear
Leaning with parted lips, some words she spake
In solemn tenour and deep organ tone :
Some mourning words, which in our feeble tongue
Would come in these like accents ; O how frail 50
To that large utterance of the early Gods !

21 After line 21 the following four stand in the holograph, but are cancelled in the Woodhouse transcript :

Thus the old Eagle drowsy with great grief,
Sat moulting his weak Plumage never more
To be restored or soar against the Sun,
While his three Sons upon Olympus stood—

27-8 Placed by her side the tallest Amazon
Had stood a little child: MS., cancelled.

"Saturn, look up!—though wherefore, poor old King?
 "I have no comfort for thee, no not one:
 "I cannot say, 'O wherefore sleepest thou?'
 "For heaven is parted from thee, and the earth
 "Knows thee not, thus afflicted, for a God;
 "And ocean too, with all its solemn noise,
 "Has from thy sceptre pass'd; and all the air
 "Is emptied of thine hoary majesty.
 "Thy thunder, conscious of the new command, 60
 "Rumbles reluctant o'er our fallen house;
 "And thy sharp lightning in unpractis'd hands
 "Scorches and burns our once serene domain.
 "O aching time! O moments big as years!
 "All as ye pass swell out the monstrous truth,
 "And press it so upon our weary griefs
 "That unbelief has not a space to breathe.
 "Saturn, sleep on:—O thoughtless, why did I
 "Thus violate thy slumbrous solitude?
 "Why should I ope thy melancholy eyes? 70
 "Saturn, sleep on! while at thy feet I weep."

As when, upon a tranced summer-night,
 Those green-rob'd senators of mighty woods,
 Tall oaks, branch-charmed by the earnest stars,
 Dream, and so dream all night without a stir,
 Save from one gradual solitary gust
 Which comes upon the silence, and dies off,
 As if the ebbing air had but one wave;
 So came these words and went; the while in tears
 She touch'd her fair large forehead to the ground,

74-8. Originally written in the holograph manuscript thus:

The Oaks stand charmed by the earnest Stars:
 And thus all night without a stir they rest in line 75 Keats first substituted remain for they rest, and finally got the splendid reading of the text, substituting solitary for momentary

 in line 76 and ebbing for Sea of in line 78.

Just where her falling hair might be outspread 81
 A soft and silken mat for Saturn's feet.
 One moon, with alteration slow, had shed
 Her silver seasons four upon the night,
 And still these two were postured motionless,
 Like natural sculpture in cathedral cavern;
 The frozen God still couchant on the earth,
 And the sad Goddess weeping at his feet:
 Until at length old Saturn lifted up
 His faded eyes, and saw his kingdom gone, 90
 And all the gloom and sorrow of the place,
 And that fair kneeling Goddess; and then spake,
 As with a palsied tongue, and while his beard
 Shook horrid with such aspen-malady:
 "O tender spouse of gold Hyperion,
 "Thea, I feel thee ere I see thy face;
 "Look up, and let me see our doom in it;
 "Look up, and tell me if this feeble shape
 "Is Saturn's; tell me, if thou hear'st the voice
 "Of Saturn; tell me, if this wrinkling brow, 100
 "Naked and bare of its great diadem,
 "Peers like the front of Saturn. Who had power
 "To make me desolate? whence came the strength?
 "How was it nurtur'd to such bursting forth,
 "While Fate seem'd strangled in my nervous grasp?
 "But it is so; and I am smother'd up,
 "And buried from all godlike exercise
 "Of influence benign on planets pale,
 "Of admonitions to the winds and seas,
 "Of peaceful sway above man's harvesting, 110

 "Doth ease its heart of love in.—I am gone

This passion lifted him upon his feet,
 And made his hands to struggle in the air,
 His Druid locks to shake and ooze with sweat,
 His eyes to fever out, his voice to cease.
 He stood, and heard not Thea's sobbing deep;
 A little time, and then again he snatch'd 140

"Cannot I form? Cannot I fashion forth
 "Another world, another universe,
 "To overbear and crumble this to naught?
 "Where is another chaos? Where?"—That word
 Found way unto Olympus, and made quake
 The rebel three.—Thea was startled up,
 And in her bearing was a sort of hope,
 As thus she quick-voic'd spake, yet full of awe.
 "This cheers our fallen house: come to our friends, 150
 "O Saturn! come away, and give them heart;
 "I know the covert, for thence came I hither."
 Thus brief; then with beseeching eyes she went
 With backward footing through the shade a space:
 He follow'd, and she turn'd to lead the way
 Through aged boughs, that yielded like the mist
 Which eagles cleave upmounting from their nest.

Meanwhile in other realms big tears were shed,
 More sorrow like to this, and such like woe,
 Too huge for mortal tongue or pen of scribe: 160
 The Titans fierce, self-hid, or prison-bound,
 Groan'd for the old allegiance once more,
 And listen'd in sharp pain for Saturn's voice.
 But one of the whole mammoth-brood still kept
 His sov'reignty, and rule, and majesty;—
 Blazing Hyperion on his orb'd fire
 Still sat, still snuff'd the incense, teeming up
 From man to the sun's God; yet unsecure:
 For as among us mortals omens drear
 Fright and perplex, so also shuddered he— 170

But horrors, portion'd to a giant nerve,
 Oft made Hyperion ache. His palace bright
 Bastion'd with pyramids of glowing gold,
 And touch'd with shade of bronzed obelisks,
 Glar'd a blood-red through all its thousand courts,
 Arches, and domes, and fiery galleries; 180
 And all its curtains of Aurorian clouds
 Flush'd angerly: while sometimes eagle's wings,
 Unseen before by Gods or wondering men,
 Darken'd the place; and neighing steeds were heard,
 Not heard before by Gods or wondering men.
 Also, when he would taste the spicy wreaths
 Of incense, breath'd aloft from sacred hills,
 Instead of sweets, his ample palate took
 Savour of poisonous brass and metal sick:
 And so, when harbour'd in the sleepy west, 190
 After the full completion of fair day,—
 For rest divine upon exalted couch
 And slumber in the arms of melody,
 He pac'd away the pleasant hours of ease

 Even now, while Saturn, rous'd from icy trance,
 Went step for step with Thea through the woods,
 Hyperion, leaving twilight in the rear,

Through bowers of fragrant and enwreathed light,
 And diamond-paved lustrous long arcades, 220
 Until he reach'd the great main cupola;
 There standing fierce beneath, he stamped his foot,
 And from the basements deep to the high towers
 Jarr'd his own golden region; and before
 The quavering thunder thereupon had ceas'd,
 His voice leapt out, despite of godlike curb,
 To this result: "O dreams of day and night!
 "O monstrous forms! O effigies of pain!
 "O spectres busy in a cold, cold gloom!
 "O lank-ear'd Phantoms of black-weeded pools! 230
 "Why do I know ye? why have I seen ye? why
 "Is my eternal essence thus distraught
 "To see and to behold these horrors new?
 "Saturn is fallen, am I too to fall?
 "Am I to leave this haven of my rest,
 "This cradle of my glory, this soft clime,
 "This calm luxuriance of blissful light,
 "These crystalline pavilions, and pure fanes,
 "Of all my lucent empire? It is left
 "Deserted, void, nor any haunt of mine. 240
 "The blaze, the splendor, and the symmetry,
 "I cannot see—but darkness, death and darkness.
 "Even here, into my centre of repose,
 "The shady visions come to domineer,
 "Insult, and blind, and stifle up my pomp.—
 "Fall!—No, by Tellus and her briny robes!
 "Over the fiery frontier of my realms
 "I will advance a terrible right arm
 "Shall scare that infant thunderer, rebel Jove,
 "And bid old Saturn take his throne again."— 250
 He spake, and ceas'd, the while a heavier threat
 Held struggle with his throat but came not forth;
 For as in theatres of crowded men

But ever and anon the glancing spheres,
 Circles, and arcs, and broad-belted colure,
 Glow'd through, and wrought upon the muffling dark
 Sweet-shaped lightnings from the nadir deep
 Up to the zenith,—hieroglyphics old
 Which sages and keen-eyed astrologers
 Then living on the earth, with labouring thought
 Won from the gaze of many centuries: 280
 Now lost, save what we find on remnants huge
 Of stone, or marble swart; their import gone,
 Their wisdom long since fled.—Two wings this orb
 Possess'd for glory, two fair argent wings,
 Ever exalted at the God's approach:
 And now, from forth the gloom their plumes immense
 Rose, one by one, till all outspread were;
 While still the dazzling globe maintain'd eclipse,
 Awaiting for Hyperion's command.
 Fain would he have commanded, fain took throne 290
 And bid the day begin, if but for change.
 He might not:—No, though a primeval God:
 The sacred seasons might not be disturb'd.
 Therefore the operations of the dawn
 Stay'd in their birth, even as here 'tis told.

 Eager to sail their orb; the porches wide
 Open'd upon the dusk demesnes of night;

And the bright Titan, phrenzied with new woes,
 Unus'd to bend, by hard compulsion bent 300
 His spirit to the sorrow of the time;
 And all along a dismal rack of clouds,
 Upon the boundaries of day and night,
 He stretch'd himself in grief and radiance faint.
 There as he lay, the Heaven with its stars
 Look'd down on him with pity, and the voice
 Of Coelus, from the universal space,
 Thus whisper'd low and solemn in his ear.
 "O brightest of my children dear, earth-born
 "And sky-engendered, Son of Mysteries 310
 "All unrevealed even to the powers

HYPERION. BOOK II

Just at the self-same beat of Time's wide wings
 Hyperion slid into the rustled air,
 And Saturn gain'd with Thea that sad place
 Where Cybele and the bruised Titans mourn'd.
 It was a den where no insulting light
 Could glimmer on their tears ; where their own groans
 They felt, but heard not, for the solid roar
 Of thunderous waterfalls and torrents hoarse,
 Pouring a constant bulk, uncertain where.
 Crag jutting forth to crag, and rocks that seem'd 10
 Ever as if just rising from a sleep,
 Forehead to forehead held their monstrous horns ;
 And thus in thousand hugest phantasies
 Made a fit roofing to this nest of woe.
 Instead of thrones, hard flint they sat upon,
 Couches of rugged stone, and slaty ridge
 Stubborn'd with iron. All were not assembled :
 Some chain'd in torture, and some wandering.
 Cœus, and Gyges, and Briareüs,
 Typhon, and Dolor, and Porphyryon, 20
 With many more, the brawniest in assault,
 Were pent in regions of laborious breath ;
 Dungeon'd in opaque element, to keep
 Their clenched teeth still clench'd, and all their limbs
 Lock'd up like veins of metal, cramp't and screw'd ;

Without a motion, save of their big hearts
Heaving in pain, and horribly convuls'd
With sanguine feverous boiling gurge of pulse.
Mnemosyne was straying in the world;
Far from her moon had Phœbe wandered;
And many else were free to roam abroad,
But for the main, here found they covert drear.
Scarce images of life, one here, one there,
Lay vast and edgeways; like a dismal cirque
Of Druid stones, upon a forlorn moor,
When the chill rain begins at shut of eve,
In dull November, and their chancel vault,
The Heaven itself, is blinded throughout night.
Each one kept shroud, nor to his neighbour gave
Or word, or look, or action of despair.
Creüs was one; his ponderous iron mace
Lay by him, and a shatter'd rib of rock
Told of his rage, ere he thus sank and pined.
Iäpetus another; in his grasp,
A serpent's plashy neck; its barbed tongue
Squeez'd from the gorge, and all its uncurl'd length
Dead; and because the creature could not spit
Its poison in the eyes of conquering Jove.
Next Cottus: prone he lay, chin uppermost,
As though in pain; for still upon the flint
He ground severe his skull, with open mouth
And eyes at horrid working. Nearest him
Asia, born of most enormous Caf,
Who cost her mother Tellus keener pangs,
Though feminine, than any of her sons:

More thought than woe was in her dusky face,
 For she was prophesying of her glory;
 And in her wide imagination stood
 Palm-shaded temples, and high rival fanes,
 By Oxus or in Ganges' sacred isles. 60
 Even as Hope upon her anchor leans,
 So leant she, not so fair, upon a tusk
 Shed from the broadest of her elephants.
 Above her, on a crag's uneasy shelve,
 Upon his elbow rais'd, all prostrate else,
 Shadow'd Enceladus; once tame and mild
 As grazing ox unworried in the meads;
 Now tiger-passion'd, lion-thoughted, wroth,
 He meditated, plotted, and even now
 Was hurling mountains in that second war, 70
 Not long delay'd, that scar'd the younger Gods
 To hide themselves in forms of beast and bird.
 Not far hence Atlas; and beside him prone
 Phorcus, the sire of Gorgons. Neighbour'd close
 Oceanus, and Tethys, in whose lap
 Sobbed Clymene among her tangled hair.
 In midst of all lay Themis, at the feet
 Of Ops the queen all clouded round from sight;
 No shape distinguishable, more than when
 Thick night confounds the pine-tops with the clouds:
 And many else whose names may not be told. 81
 For when the Muse's wings are air-ward spread,
 Who shall delay her flight? And she must chaunt
 Of Saturn, and his guide, who now had climb'd
 With damp and slippery footing from a depth
 More horrid still. Above a sombre cliff
 Their heads appear'd, and up their stature grew

Till on the level height their steps found ease:
 Then Thea spread abroad her trembling arms
 Upon the precincts of this nest of pain, 90
 And sidelong fix'd her eye on Saturn's face:
 There saw she direst strife; the supreme God
 At war with all the frailty of grief,
 Of rage, of fear, anxiety, revenge,
 Remorse, spleen, hope, but most of all despair.
 Against these plagues he strove in vain; for Fate
 Had pour'd a mortal oil upon his head,
 A disanointing poison: so that Thea,
 Affrighted, kept her still, and let him pass
 First onwards in, among the fallen tribe. 100

As with us mortal men, the laden heart
 Is persecuted more, and fever'd more,
 When it is nighing to the mournful house
 Where other hearts are sick of the same bruise;
 So Saturn, as he walk'd into the midst,
 Felt faint, and would have sunk among the rest,
 But that he met Enceladus's eye,
 Whose mightiness, and awe of him, at once
 Came like an inspiration; and he shouted,
 "Titans, behold your God!" at which some groan'd;
 Some started on their feet; some also shouted; 111
 Some wept, some wail'd, all bow'd with reverence;
 And Ops, uplifting her black folded veil,
 Show'd her pale cheeks, and all her forehead wan,
 Her eye-brows thin and jet, and hollow eyes.
 There is a roaring in the bleak-grown pines
 When Winter lifts his voice; there is a noise
 Among immortals when a God gives sign,
 With hushing finger, how he means to load
 His tongue with the full weight of utterless thought,
 With thunder, and with music, and with pomp: 121

Such noise is like the roar of bleak-grown pines :
 Which, when it ceases in this mountain'd world,
 No other sound succeeds ; but ceasing here,
 Among these fallen, Saturn's voice therefrom
 Grew up like organ, that begins anew
 Its strain, when other harmonies, stopt short,
 Leave the din'd air vibrating silverly.
 Thus grew it up—"Not in my own sad breast,
 "Which is its own great judge and searcher out,
 "Can I find reason why ye should be thus : 131
 "Not in the legends of the first of days,
 "Studied from that old spirit-leaved book
 "Which starry Uranus with finger bright
 "Sav'd from the shores of darkness, when the waves
 "Low-ebb'd still hid it up in shallow gloom ;—
 "And the which book ye know I ever kept
 "For my firm-based footstool :—Ah, infirm !
 "Not there, nor in sign, symbol, or portent
 "Of element, earth, water, air, and fire,— 140
 "At war, at peace, or inter-quarreling
 "One against one, or two, or three, or all
 "Each several one against the other three,
 "As fire with air loud warring when rain-floods
 "Drown both, and press them both against earth's face,
 "Where, finding sulphur, a quadruple wrath
 "Unhinges the poor world ;—not in that strife,
 "Wherefrom I take strange lore, and read it deep,
 "Can I find reason why ye should be thus :
 "No, no-where can unriddle, though I search, 150

 "Should cower beneath what, in comparison,
 "Is untremendous might. Yet ye are here,
 "O'erwhelm'd, and spurn'd, and batter'd, ye are here !
 "O Titans, shall I say, 'Arise !'—Ye groan :
 "Shall I say 'Crouch !'—Ye groan. What can I then ?
 "O Heaven wide ! O unseen parent dear !
 "What can I ? Tell me, all ye brethren Gods, 160
 "How we can war, how engine our great wrath !
 "O speak your counsel now, for Saturn's ear
 "Is all a-hunger'd. Thou, Oceanus,
 "Ponderest high and deep ; and in thy face
 "I see, astonied, that severe content
 "Which comes of thought and musing : give us help ! "

So ended Saturn; and the God of the Sea,
Sophist and sage, from no Athenian grove,
But cogitation in his watery shades,
Arose, with locks not oozy, and began, 170
In murmurs, which his first-endeavouring tongue
Caught infant-like from the far-foamed sands.
"O ye, whom wrath consumes! who, passion-stung,
"Writhe at defeat, and nurse your agonies!
"Shut up your senses, stifle up your ears,
"My voice is not a bellows unto ire.
"Yet listen, ye who will, whilst I bring proof

 "O joy! for now I see ye are not lost:
 "O joy! for now I see a thousand eyes
 "Wide-glaring for revenge!"—As this he said,
 He lifted up his stature vast, and stood,
 Still without intermission speaking thus:
 "Now ye are flames, I'll tell you how to burn,
 "And purge the ether of our enemies;
 "How to feed fierce the crooked stings of fire,
 "And singe away the swollen clouds of Jove, 330
 "Stifling that puny essence in its tent.
 "O let him feel the evil he hath done;
 "For though I scorn Oceanus's lore,
 "Much pain have I for more than loss of realms:
 "The days of peace and slumberous calm are fled;
 "Those days, all innocent of scathing war,
 "When all the fair Existences of heaven
 "Came open-eyed to guess what we would speak:—
 "That was before our brows were taught to frown,
 "Before our lips knew else but solemn sounds; 340
 "That was before we knew the winged thing,
 "Victory, might be lost, or might be won.
 "And be ye mindful that Hyperion,
 "Our brightest brother, still is undisgraced—
 "Hyperion, lo! his radiance is here!"

All eyes were on Enceladus's face,
 And they beheld, while still Hyperion's name
 Flew from his lips up to the vaulted rocks,
 A pallid gleam across his features stern:

Not savage, for he saw full many a God 350
 Wroth as himself. He look'd upon them all,
 And in each face he saw a gleam of light,
 But splendor in Saturn's, whose hoar locks
 Shone like the bubbling foam about a keel
 When the prow sweeps into a midnight cove.
 In pale and silver silence they remain'd,
 Till suddenly a splendour, like the morn,
 Pervaded all the beetling gloomy steeps,
 All the sad spaces of oblivion,
 And every gulf, and every chasm old, 360
 And every height, and every sullen depth,
 Voiceless, or hoarse with loud tormented streams:
 And all the everlasting cataracts,
 And all the headlong torrents far and near,
 Mantled before in darkness and huge shade,
 Now saw the light and made it terrible.
 It was Hyperion:—a granite peak
 His bright feet touch'd, and there he stay'd to view
 The misery his brilliance had betray'd
 To the most hateful seeing of itself. 370

Of Memnon's image at the set of sun
 To one who travels from the dusking East :
 Sighs, too, as mournful as that Memnon's harp
 He utter'd, while his hands contemplative
 He press'd together, and in silence stood.
 Despondence seiz'd again the fallen Gods
 At sight of the dejected King of Day, 380
 And many hid their faces from the light :
 But fierce Enceladus sent forth his eyes
 Among the brotherhood ; and, at their glare,
 Uprose Iäpetus, and Cretus too,
 And Phorcus, sea-born, and together strode
 To where he towered on his eminence.
 There those four shouted forth old Saturn's name ;
 Hyperion from the peak loud answered, " Saturn !"
 Saturn sat near the Mother of the Gods,
 In whose face was no joy, though all the Gods 380
 Gave from their hollow throats the name of " Saturn !"

POSTHUMOUS

FUGITIVE POEMS

POSTHUMOUS AND FUGITIVE POEMS

ON DEATH

I.

CAN death be sleep, when life is but a dream,
And scenes of bliss pass as a phantom by?
The transient pleasures as a vision seem,
And yet we think the greatest pain's to die.

II.

How strange it is that man on earth should roam,
And lead a life of woe, but not forsake
His rugged path; nor dare he view alone
His future doom which is but to awake.

WOMEN, WINE, AND SNUFF

GIVE me women, wine and snuff
Until I cry out "hold, enough!"
You may do so sans objection
Till the day of resurrection;
For bless my beard they aye shall be
My beloved Trinity.

FILL FOR ME A BRIMMING BOWL

FILL for me a brimming bowl
And let me in it drown my soul:
But put therein some drug, designed
To Banish Women from my mind:
For I want not the stream inspiring
That fills the mind with—fond desiring,
But I want as deep a draught
As e'er from Lethe's wave was quaff'd;
From my despairing heart to charm

The Image of the fairest form 10
 That e'er my reveling eyes beheld,
 That e'er my wandering fancy spell'd.
 In vain! away I cannot chace
 The melting softness of that face,
 The beaminess of those bright eyes,
 That breast—earth's only Paradise.
 My sight will never more be blest;
 For all I see has lost its zest:
 Nor with delight can I explore
 The Classic page, or Muse's lore. 20
 Had she but known how beat my heart,
 And with one smile reliev'd its smart
 I should have felt a sweet relief,
 I should have felt "the joy of grief."
 Yet as the Tuscan mid the snow
 Of Lapland thinks on sweet Arno,
 Even so for ever shall she be
 The Halo of my Memory.

SONNET

ON PEACE

O PEACE! and dost thou with thy presence bless
 The dwellings of this war-surrounded Isle;
 Soothing with placid brow our late distress,
 Making the triple kingdom brightly smile?
 Joyful I hail thy presence; and I hail
 The sweet companions that await on thee;
 Complete my joy—let not my first wish fail,
 Let the sweet mountain nymph thy favourite be,
 With England's happiness proclaim Europa's Liberty.
 O Europe! let not sceptred tyrants see 10
 That thou must shelter in thy former state;
 Keep thy chains burst, and boldly say thou art free;
 Give thy kings law—leave not uncurbed the great;
 So with the horrors past thou'lt win thy happier fate!

14 horrors] honors Notes and Queries: honours Poems de Sélincourt.
 No doubi horrors is right.

SONNET

TO BYRON

BYRON! how sweetly sad thy melody!
Attuning still the soul to tenderness,
As if soft Pity, with unusual stress,
Had touch'd her plaintive lute, and thou, being by,
Hadst caught the tones, nor suffer'd them to die.
O'ershadowing sorrow doth not make thee less
Delightful: thou thy griefs dost dress
With a bright halo, shining beamily,
As when a cloud the golden moon doth veil,
Its sides are ting'd with a resplendent glow, 10
Through the dark robe oft amber rays prevail,
And like fair veins in sable marble flow;
Still warble, dying swan! still tell the tale,
The enchanting tale, the tale of pleasing woe.

SONNET

TO CHATTERTON

O CHATTERTON! how very sad thy fate!
Dear child of sorrow—son of misery!
How soon the film of death obscur'd that eye,
Whence Genius mildly flash'd, and high debate.
How soon that voice, majestic and elate,
Melted in dying numbers! Oh! how nigh
Was night to thy fair morning. Thou didst die
A half-blown flow'ret which cold blasts amate.
But this is past: thou art among the stars
Of highest Heaven: to the rolling spheres 10
Thou sweetly singest: naught thy hymning mars,
Above the ingrate world and human fears.
On earth the good man base detraction bars
From thy fair name, and waters it with tears.

SONNET

TO SPENSER

SPENSER! a jealous honourer of thine,
A forester deep in thy midmost trees,
Did last eve ask my promise to refine
Some English that might strive thine ear to please.
But Elfin Poet 'tis impossible
For an inhabitant of wintry earth
To rise like Phœbus with a golden quell
Fire-wing'd and make a morning in his mirth.
It is impossible to escape from toil
O' the sudden and receive thy spiriting:
The flower must drink the nature of the soil
Before it can put forth its blossoming:
Be with me in the summer days and I
Will for thine honour and his pleasure try.

ODE TO APOLLO

I.

IN thy western halls of gold
When thou sittest in thy state,
Bards, that erst sublimely told
Heroic deeds, and sang of fate,
With fervour seize their adamantyne lyres,
Whose chords are solid rays, and twinkle radiant fires.

II.

Here Homer with his nervous arms
Strikes the twanging harp of war,
And even the western splendour warms,
While the trumpets sound afar:
But, what creates the most intense surprise,
His soul looks out through renovated eyes.

III.

Then, through thy Temple wide, melodious swells
The sweet majestic tone of Maro's lyre:
The soul delighted on each accent dwells,—
Enraptur'd dwells,—not daring to respire,
The while he tells of grief around a funeral pyre.

IV.

'Tis awful silence then again;
Expectant stand the spheres;
Breathless the laurell'd peers,
Nor move, till ends the lofty strain,
Nor move till Milton's tuneful thunders cease,
And leave once more the ravish'd heavens in peace.

V.

Thou biddest Shakspeare wave his hand,
And quickly forward spring
The Passions—a terrific band—
And each vibrates the string
That with its tyrant temper best accords,
While from their Master's lips pour forth the inspiring words.

VI.

A silver trumpet Spenser blows,
And, as its martial notes to silence flee,
From a virgin chorus flows
A hymn in praise of spotless Chastity.
'Tis still! Wild warblings from the Æolian lyre
Enchantment softly breathe, and tremblingly expire.

VII.

Next thy Tasso's ardent numbers
Float along the pleased air,
Calling youth from idle slumbers,
Rousing them from Pleasure's lair:—
Then o'er the strings his fingers gently move,
And melt the soul to pity and to love.

VIII.

But when Thou joinest with the Nine,
And all the powers of song combine,
We listen here on earth:
The dying tones that fill the air,
And charm the ear of evening fair,
From thee, great God of Bards, receive their heavenly birth.

SONNET

TO A YOUNG LADY WHO SENT ME A LAUREL CROWN

FRESH morning gusts have blown away all fear
 From my glad bosom,—now from gloominess
 I mount for ever—not an atom less
 Than the proud laurel shall content my bier.
 No! by the eternal stars! or why sit here
 In the Sun's eye, and 'gainst my temples press
 Apollo's very leaves, woven to bless
 By thy white fingers and thy spirit clear.
 Lo! who dares say, "Do this?" Who dares call down
 My will from its high purpose? Who say, "Stand,"
 Or "Go?" This mighty moment I would frown 11
 On abject Cæsars—not the stoutest band
 Of mailed heroes should tear off my crown:
 Yet would I kneel and kiss thy gentle hand!

HYMN TO APOLLO

I.

God of the golden bow,
 And of the golden lyre,
 And of the golden hair,
 And of the golden fire,
 Charioteer
 Of the patient year,
 Where—where slept thine ire,
 When like a blank idiot I put on thy wreath,
 Thy laurel, thy glory,
 The light of thy story,
 Or was I a worm—too low crawling, for death?
 O Delphic Apollo!

II.

The Thunderer grasp'd and grasp'd,
 The Thunderer frown'd and frown'd;
 The eagle's feathery mane
 For wrath became stiffen'd—the sound
 Of breeding thunder
 Went drowsily under,
 Muttering to be unbound.

Sonnet 11 mighty] very Woodhouse.

O why didst thou pity, and for a worm
 Why touch thy soft lute
 Till the thunder was mute,
Why was not I crush'd—such a pitiful germ?
 O Delphic Apollo!

III.

The Pleiades were up,
 Watching the silent air;
The seeds and roots in the Earth
 Were swelling for summer fare;
 The Ocean, its neighbour,
 Was at its old labour,
 When, who—who did dare
To tie, like a madman, thy plant round his brow,
 And grin and look proudly,
 And blaspheme so loudly,
And live for that honour, to stoop to thee now?
 O Delphic Apollo!

SONNET

As from the darkening gloom a silver dove
Upsoars, and darts into the Eastern light,
On pinions that naught moves but pure delight,
So fled thy soul into the realms above,
Regions of peace and everlasting love;
 Where happy spirits, crown'd with circlets bright
Of starry beam, and gloriously bedight,
Taste the high joy none but the blest can prove.
There thou or joinest the immortal quire
 In melodies that even Heaven fair
Fill with superior bliss, or, at desire
Of the omnipotent Father, cleavest the air
On holy message sent—What pleasures higher?
Wherefore does any grief our joy impair?

STANZAS TO MISS WYLIE

The riches of Flora are lavishly strown,
The air is all softness, and crystal the streams,
The West is resplendently clothed in beams.

II.

O come! let us haste to the freshening shades,
The quaintly carv'd seats, and the opening glades;
Where the faeries are chanting their evening hymns,
And in the last sun-beam the sylph lightly swims.

III.

And when thou art weary I'll find thee a bed,
Of mosses and flowers to pillow thy head:
And there Georgiana I'll sit at thy feet,
While my story of love I enraptur'd repeat.

IV.

So fondly I'll breathe, and so softly I'll sigh,
Thou wilt think that some amorous Zephyr is nigh:
Yet no—as I breathe I will press thy fair knee,
And then thou wilt know that the sigh comes from me.

V.

Ah! why dearest girl should we lose all these blisses?
That mortal's a fool who such happiness misses:
So smile acquiescence, and give me thy hand,
With love-looking eyes, and with voice sweetly bland.

SONNET

OH! how I love, on a fair summer's eve,
 When streams of light pour down the golden west,
 And on the balmy zephyrs tranquil rest
 The silver clouds, far—far away to leave
 All meaner thoughts, and take a sweet reprieve
 From little cares; to find, with easy quest,
 A fragrant wild, with Nature's beauty drest,
 And there into delight my soul deceive.
 There warm my breast with patriotic lore,
 Musing on Milton's fate—on Sydney's bier— 10
 Till their stern forms before my mind arise :
 Perhaps on wing of Poesy upsoar,
 Full often dropping a delicious tear,
 When some melodious sorrow spells mine eyes.

SONNET

BEFORE he went to feed with owls and bats
 Nebuchadnezzar had an ugly dream,
 Worse than an Hus'if's when she thinks her cream
 Made a Naumachia for mice and rats.
 So scared, he sent for that "Good King of Cats"
 Young Daniel, who soon did pluck away the beam
 From out his eye, and said he did not deem
 The sceptre worth a straw—his Cushions old door-mats.
 A horrid nightmare similar somewhat
 Of late has haunted a most motley crew, 10
 Most loggerheads and Chapmen—we are told
 That any Daniel tho' he be a sot
 Can make the lying lips turn pale of hue
 By belching out "ye are that head of Gold."

SONNET

WRITTEN IN DISGUST OF VULGAR SUPERSTITION

THE church bells toll a melancholy round,
 Calling the people to some other prayers,
 Some other gloominess, more dreadful cares,
 More hearkening to the sermon's horrid sound.
 Surely the mind of man is closely bound
 In some black spell; seeing that each one tears
 Himself from fireside joys, and Lydian airs,
 And converse high of those with glory crown'd.

Still, still they toll, and I should feel a damp,—
 A chill as from a tomb, did I not know 10
 That they are dying like an outburnt lamp;
 That 'tis their sighing, wailing ere they go
 Into oblivion;—that fresh flowers will grow,
 And many glories of immortal stamp.

SONNET

AFTER dark vapors have oppress'd our plains
 For a long dreary season, comes a day
 Born of the gentle South, and clears away
 From the sick heavens all unseemly stains.
 The anxious month, relieved of its pains,
 Takes as a long-lost right the feel of May;
 The eyelids with the passing coolness play
 Like rose leaves with the drip of Summer rains.
 The calmest thoughts come round us; as of leaves
 Budding—fruit ripening in stillness—Autumn suns
 Smiling at eve upon the quiet sheaves— 11
 Sweet Sappho's cheek—a smiling infant's breath—
 The gradual sand that through an hour-glass runs—
 A woodland rivulet—a Poet's death.

SONNET

[Written at the end of "The Floure and the Lefe"]

This pleasant tale is like a little copse:
 The honied lines do freshly interlace
 To keep the reader in so sweet a place,
 So that he here and there full-hearted stops;
 And oftentimes he feels the dewy drops
 Come cool and suddenly against his face,
 And by the wandering melody may trace
 Which way the tender-legged linnet hops.
 Oh! what a power hath white Simplicity!
 What mighty power has this gentle story! 10
 I that for ever feel athirst for glory
 Could at this moment be content to lie
 Meekly upon the grass, as those whose sobbings
 Were heard of none beside the mournful robins.

TWO SONNETS

I

TO HAYDON, WITH A SONNET WRITTEN ON SEEING THE ELGIN MARBLES

HAYDON! forgive me that I cannot speak
Definitively on these mighty things;
Forgive me that I have not Eagle's wings—
That what I want I know not where to seek:
And think that I would not be over meek
In rolling out upfollow'd thunderings,
Even to the steep of Heliconian springs,
Were I of ample strength for such a freak—
Think too, that all those numbers should be thine;
Whose else? In this who touch thy vesture's hem?
For when men star'd at what was most divine 11
With browless idiotism—o'erwise phlegm—
Thou hadst beheld the Hesperean shine
Of their star in the East, and gone to worship them.

II

ON SEEING THE ELGIN MARBLES

My spirit is too weak—mortality
Weighs heavily on me like unwilling sleep,
And each imagin'd pinnacle and steep
Of godlike hardship, tells me I must die
Like a sick Eagle looking at the sky.
Yet 'tis a gentle luxury to weep
That I have not the cloudy winds to keep,
Fresh for the opening of the morning's eye.
Such dim-conceived glories of the brain
Bring round the heart an undescribable feud;
So do these wonders a most dizzy pain, 11
That mingles Grecian grandeur with the rude
Wasting of old Time—with a billowy main—
A sun—a shadow of a magnitude.

ON A PICTURE OF LEANDER

COME hither all sweet maidens soberly,
Down-looking aye, and with a chasten'd light,
Hid in the fringes of your eyelids white,
And meekly let your fair hands joined be,
As if so gentle that ye could not see,
Untouch'd, a victim of your beauty bright,
Sinking away to his young spirit's night,—
Sinking bewilder'd 'mid the dreary sea:
'Tis young Leander toiling to his death;
Nigh swooning, he doth purse his weary lips 10
For Hero's cheek, and smiles against her smile.
O horrid dream! see how his body dips
Dead-heavy; arms and shoulders gleam awhile:
He's gone: up bubbles all his amorous breath!

TO ———

I.

THINK not of it, sweet one, so;—
Give it not a tear;
Sigh thou mayst, and bid it go
Any, any where.

II.

Do not look so sad, sweet one,—
Sad and fadingly;
Shed one drop, then it is gone,
O 'twas born to die.

III.

Still so pale? then dearest weep;
Weep, I'll count the tears,
And each one shall be a bliss
For thee in after years.

IV.

Brighter has it left thine eyes
Than a sunny rill;
And thy whispering melodies
Are tenderer still.

V.

Yet—as all things mourn awhile
At fleeting blisses,
Let us too! but be our dirge
A dirge of kisses.

LINES

I.

UNFELT, unheard, unseen,
I've left my little queen,
Her languid arms in silver slumber lying:
Ah! through their nestling touch,
Who—who could tell how much
There is for madness—cruel, or complying?

II.

Those faery lids how sleek!
Those lips how moist!—they speak,
In ripest quiet, shadows of sweet sounds:
Into my fancy's ear
Melting a burden dear,
How "Love doth know no fullness nor no bounds."

III.

True!—tender monitors!
I bend unto your laws:
This sweetest day for dalliance was born!
So, without more ado,
I'll feel my heaven anew,
For all the blushing of the hasty morn.

SONNET

ON THE SEA

It keeps eternal whisperings around
 Desolate shores, and with its mighty swell
 Gluts twice ten thousand Caverns, till the spell
 Of Hecate leaves them their old shadowy sound.
 Often 'tis in such gentle temper found,
 That scarcely will the very smallest shell
 Be mov'd for days from where it sometime fell,
 When last the winds of Heaven were unbound.
 Oh ye! who have your eye-balls vex'd and tir'd,
 Feast them upon the wideness of the Sea; 10
 Oh ye! whose ears are dinn'd with uproar rude,
 Or fed too much with cloying melody—
 Sit ye near some old Cavern's Mouth, and brood
 Until ye start, as if the sea-nymphs quir'd!

SONNET

ON LEIGH HUNT'S POEM "THE STORY OF RIMINI"

Who loves to peer up at the morning sun,
 With half-shut eyes and comfortable cheek,
 Let him, with this sweet tale, full often seek
 For meadows where the little rivers run;
 Who loves to linger with that brightest one
 Of Heaven—Hesperus—let him lowly speak
 These numbers to the night, and starlight meek,
 Or moon, if that her hunting be begun.
 He who knows these delights, and too is prone 10
 To moralize upon a smile or tear,
 Will find at once a region of his own,
 A bower for his spirit, and will steer
 To alleys where the fir-tree drops its cone,
 Where robins hop, and fallen leaves are sear.

ON OXFORD

A PARODY

I.

THE Gothic looks solemn,
 The plain Doric column
 Supports an old Bishop and Crosier;
 The mouldering arch,
 Shaded o'er by a larch
 Stands next door to Wilson the Hosier.

II.

Vice—that is, by turns,—
 O'er pale faces mourns
 The black tassell'd trencher and common hat;
 The Chantry boy sings,
 The Steeple-bell rings,
 And as for the Chancellor—dominat.

III.

There are plenty of trees,
 And plenty of ease,
 And plenty of fat deer for Parsons;
 And when it is venison,
 Short is the benison,—
 Then each on a leg or thigh fastens.

THE POET

A FRAGMENT

WHERE'S the Poet? show him! show him,
 Muses nine! that I may know him!
 'Tis the man who with a man
 Is an equal, be he King,
 Or poorest of the beggar-clan,
 Or any other wondrous thing
 A man may be 'twixt ape and Plato;
 'Tis the man who with a bird,
 Wren or Eagle, finds his way to
 All its instincts; he hath heard

The Lion's roaring, and can tell
 What his horny throat expresseth,
 And to him the Tiger's yell
 Comes articulate and presseth
 On his ear like mother-tongue.

MODERN LOVE

AND what is love? It is a doll dress'd up
 For idleness to cosset, nurse, and dandle;
 A thing of soft misnomers, so divine
 That silly youth doth think to make itself
 Divine by loving, and so goes on
 Yawning and doting a whole summer long,
 Till Miss's comb is made a pearl tiara,
 And common Wellingtons turn Romeo boots;
 Then Cleopatra lives at number seven,
 And Antony resides in Brunswick Square. 10
 Fools! if some passions high have warm'd the world,
 If Queens and Soldiers have play'd deep for hearts,
 It is no reason why such agonies
 Should be more common than the growth of weeds.
 Fools! make me whole again that weighty pearl
 The Queen of Egypt melted, and I'll say
 That ye may love in spite of beaver hats.

FRAGMENT OF "THE CASTLE BUILDER"

* * * * *

To-NIGHT I'll have my friar—let me think
 About my room,—I'll have it in the pink;
 It should be rich and sombre, and the moon,
 Just in its mid-life in the midst of June,
 Should look thro' four large windows and display
 Clear, but for gold-fish vases in the way,
 Their glassy diamonding on Turkish floor;
 The tapers keep aside, an hour and more,
 To see what else the moon alone can show;
 While the night-breeze doth softly let us know 10
 My terrace is well bower'd with oranges.
 Upon the floor the dullest spirit sees

A guitar-ribband and a lady's glove
 Beside a crumple-leaved tale of love;
 A tambour-frame, with Venus sleeping there,
 All finish'd but some ringlets of her hair;
 A viol-bow, strings torn, cross-wise upon
 A glorious folio of Anacreon;
 A skull upon a mat of roses lying,
 Ink'd purple with a song concerning dying; 20
 An hour-glass on the turn, amid the trails
 Of passion-flower;—just in time there sails
 A cloud across the moon,—the lights bring in!
 And see what more my phantasy can win.
 It is a gorgeous room, but somewhat sad;
 The draperies are so, as tho' they had
 Been made for Cleopatra's winding-sheet;
 And opposite the stedfast eye doth meet
 A spacious looking-glass, upon whose face,
 In letters raven-sombre, you may trace 30
 Old "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin."
 Greek busts and statuary have ever been
 Held, by the finest spirits, fitter far
 Than vase grotesque and Siamesian jar;
 Therefore 'tis sure a want of Attic taste
 That I should rather love a Gothic waste
 Of eyesight on cinque-coloured potter's clay,
 Than on the marble fairness of old Greece.
 My table-coverlits of Jason's fleece
 And black Numidian sheep-wool should be wrought, 40
 Gold, black, and heavy, from the Lama brought.
 My ebon sofas should delicious be
 With down from Leda's cygnet progeny.
 My pictures all Salvator's, save a few
 Of Titian's portraiture, and one, though new,
 Of Haydon's in its fresh magnificence.
 My wine—O good! 'tis here at my desire,
 And I must sit to supper with my friar.

A SONG OF OPPOSITES

"Under the flag
Of each his faction, they to battle bring
Their embryon atoms."—MILTON.

WELCOME joy, and welcome sorrow,
 Lethe's weed and Hermes' feather;
 Come to-day, and come to-morrow,
 I do love you both together!
 I love to mark sad faces in fair weather;
 And hear a merry laugh amid the thunder;
 Fair and foul I love together.
 Meadows sweet where flames are under,
 And a giggle at a wonder;
 Visage sage at pantomime; 10
 Funeral, and steeple-chime;
 Infant playing with a skull;
 Morning fair, and shipwreck'd hull;
 Nightshade with the woodbine kissing;
 Serpents in red roses hissing;
 Cleopatra regal-dress'd
 With the aspic at her breast;
 Dancing music, music sad,
 Both together, sane and mad;
 Muses bright and muses pale; 20
 Sombre Saturn, Momus hale;—
 Laugh and sigh, and laugh again;
 Oh the sweetness of the pain!
 Muses bright, and muses pale,
 Bare your faces of the veil;
 Let me see; and let me write
 Of the day, and of the night—
 Both together:—let me slake
 All my thirst for sweet heart-ache!
 Let my bower be of yew, 30
 Interwreath'd with myrtles new;
 Pines and lime-trees full in bloom,
 And my couch a low grass-tomb.

SONNET

TO A CAT

CAT! who hast pass'd thy grand climacteric,
 How many mice and rats hast in thy days
 Destroy'd?—How many tit bits stolen? Gaze
 With those bright languid segments green, and prick
 Those velvet ears—but pr'ythee do not stick
 Thy latent talons in me—and upraise
 Thy gentle mew—and tell me all thy frays
 Of fish and mice, and rats and tender chick.
 Nay, look not down, nor lick thy dainty wrists—
 For all the wheezy asthma,—and for all 10
 Thy tail's tip is nick'd off—and though the fists
 Of many a maid have given thee many a maul,
 Still is that fur as soft as when the lists
 In youth thou enter'dst on glass bottled wall.

LINES ON SEEING A LOCK OF MILTON'S HAIR

CHIEF of organic numbers!
 Old Scholar of the Spheres!
 Thy spirit never slumbers,
 But rolls about our ears,
 For ever, and for ever!
 O what a mad endeavour
 Worketh he,
 Who to thy sacred and ennobled hearse
 Would offer a burnt sacrifice of verse
 And melody. 10

How heavenward thou soundest,
 Live Temple of sweet noise,
 And Discord unconfoundest,
 Giving Delight new joys,
 And Pleasure nobler pinions!
 O, where are thy dominions?
 Lend thine ear

Sonnet to a Cat] Sonnet on Mrs. Reynolds's Cat. Woodhouse.
 Milton's Hair] 12 O living fane of Sounds— Draft, cancelled.

To a young Delian oath,—aye, by thy soul,
 By all that from thy mortal lips did roll,
 And by the kernel of thine earthly love, 20
 Beauty, in things on earth, and things above
 I swear!

When every childish fashion
 Has vanish'd from my rhyme,
 Will I, grey-gone in passion,
 Leave to an after-time,
 Hymning and harmony
 Of thee, and of thy works, and of thy life;
 But vain is now the burning and the strife,
 Pangs are in vain, until I grow high-rife 20
 With old Philosophy,
 And mad with glimpses of futurity!

For many years my offering must be hush'd;
 When I do speak, I'll think upon this hour,
 Because I feel my forehead hot and flush'd,
 Even at the simplest vassal of thy power,—
 A lock of thy bright hair,—
 Sudden it came,
 And I was startled, when I caught thy name
 Coupled so unaware; 40
 Yet, at the moment, temperate was my blood.
 I thought I had beheld it from the flood.

SONNET

ON SITTING DOWN TO READ KING LEAR ONCE AGAIN

O GOLDEN tongued Romance, with serene lute!
 Fair plumed Syren, Queen of far-away!
 Leave melodizing on this wintry day,
 Shut up thine olden pages, and be mute:
 Adieu! for, once again, the fierce dispute
 Betwixt damnation and impassion'd clay
 Must I burn through; once more humbly assay
 The bitter-sweet of this Shakespearian fruit:

Chief Poet! and ye clouds of Albion,
Begetters of our deep eternal theme! 10
When through the old oak Forest I am gone,
Let me not wander in a barren dream,
But, when I am consumed in the fire,
Give me new Phoenix wings to fly at my desire.

SONNET

WHEN I have fears that I may cease to be
Before my pen has glean'd my teeming brain,
Before high-piled books, in character,
Hold like rich garner's the full ripen'd grain;
When I behold, upon the night's starr'd face,
Huge cloudy symbols of a high romance,
And think that I may never live to trace
Their shadows, with the magic hand of chance;
And when I feel, fair creature of an hour,
That I shall never look upon thee more, 10
Never have relish in the faery power
Of unreflecting love;—then on the shore
Of the wide world I stand alone, and think
Till love and fame to nothingness do sink.

SHARING EVE'S APPLE

I.

O BLUSH not so! O blush not so!
Or I shall think you knowing;
And if you smile the blushing while,
Then maidenheads are going.

II.

There's a blush for won't, and a blush for shan't,
And a blush for having done it:
There's a blush for thought and a blush for naught,
And a blush for just begun it.

King Lear] 11 When I am through the old oak forest gone—
Letter to G. and T. Keats.

III.

O sigh not so! O sigh not so!
 For it sounds of Eve's sweet pippin;
 By these loosen'd lips you have tasted the pips
 And fought in an amorous nipping.

IV.

Will you play once more at nice-cut-core,
 For it only will last our youth out,
 And we have the prime of the kissing time,
 We have not one sweet tooth out.

V.

There's a sigh for yes, and a sigh for no,
 And a sigh for I can't bear it!
 O what can be done, shall we stay or run?
 O cut the sweet apple and share it!

A DRAUGHT OF SUNSHINE

HENCE Burgundy, Claret, and Port,
 Away with old Hock and Madeira,
 Too earthly ye are for my sport;
 There's a beverage brighter and clearer.
 Instead of a pitiful rummer,
 My wine overbrims a whole summer;
 My bowl is the sky,
 And I drink at my eye,
 Till I feel in the brain
 A Delphian pain—

10

Then follow, my Caius! then follow:
 On the green of the hill
 We will drink our fill
 Of golden sunshine,
 Till our brains intertwine
 With the glory and grace of Apollo!
 God of the Meridian,
 And of the East and West,
 To thee my soul is flown,
 And my body is earthward press'd.—
 It is an awful mission,
 A terrible division;

20

And leaves a gulph austere
 To be fill'd with worldly fear.
 Aye, when the soul is fled
 To high above our head,
 Affrighted do we gaze
 After its airy maze,
 As doth a mother wild,
 When her young infant child 30
 Is in an eagle's claws—
 And is not this the cause
 Of madness?—God of Song,
 Thou bearest me along
 Through sights I scarce can bear:
 O let me, let me share
 With the hot lyre and thee,
 The staid Philosophy.
 Temper my lonely hours,
 And let me see thy bowers 40
 More unalarm'd!

SONNET

TO THE NILE

SON of the old moon-mountains African!
 Chief of the Pyramid and Crocodile!
 We call thee fruitful, and, that very while,
 A desert fills our seeing's inward span;
 Nurse of swart nations since the world began,
 Art thou so fruitful? or dost thou beguile
 Such men to honour thee, who, worn with toil,
 Rest for a space 'twixt Cairo and Decan?
 O may dark fancies err! they surely do;
 'Tis ignorance that makes a barren waste 10
 Of all beyond itself, thou dost bedew
 Green rushes like our rivers, and dost taste
 The pleasant sun-rise, green isles hast thou too,
 And to the sea as happily dost haste.

6-8 Art thou so beautiful, or a wan smile
 Pleasant but to those men who, sick with toil,
 Rest them a space 'twixt Cairo and Dekan? Woodhouse.
 10 And ignorance doth make a barren waste... Woodhouse.

SONNET

TO A LADY SEEN FOR A FEW MOMENTS AT VAUXHALL

TIME's sea hath been five years at its slow ebb,
 Long hours have to and fro let creep the sand,
 Since I was tangled in thy beauty's web,
 And snared by the ungloving of thine hand.
 And yet I never look on midnight sky,
 But I behold thine eyes' well memory'd light;
 I cannot look upon the rose's dye,
 But to thy cheek my soul doth take its flight.
 I cannot look on any budding flower,
 But my fond ear, in fancy at thy lips 10
 And hearkening for a love-sound, doth devour
 Its sweets in the wrong sense:—Thou dost eclipse
 Every delight with sweet remembering,
 And grief unto my darling joys dost bring.

SONNET

WRITTEN IN ANSWER TO A SONNET ENDING THUS:—

Dark eyes are dearer far
 Than those that mock the hyacinthine bell—
 By J. H. REYNOLDS.

BLUE! 'Tis the life of heaven,—the domain
 Of Cynthia,—the wide palace of the sun,—
 The tent of Hesperus, and all his train,—
 The bosomer of clouds, gold, grey and dun.
 Blue! 'Tis the life of waters:—Ocean
 And all its vassal streams, pools numberless,
 May rage, and foam, and fret, but never can
 Subside, if not to dark blue nativeness.

1 Life's sea hath been five times at its slow ebb,

Blue! Gentle cousin of the forest-green,
 Married to green in all the sweetest flowers,— 10
 Forget-me-not,—the Blue bell,—and, that Queen
 Of secrecy, the Violet: what strange powers
 Hast thou, as a mere shadow! But how great,
 When in an Eye thou art, alive with fate!

SONNET

TO JOHN HAMILTON REYNOLDS

O THAT a week could be an age, and we Felt parting and warm meeting every week,
 Then one poor year a thousand years would be,
 The flush of welcome ever on the cheek:
 So could we live long life in little space,
 So time itself would be annihilate,
 So a day's journey in oblivious haze
 To serve our joys would lengthen and dilate.
 O to arrive each Monday morn from Ind!
 To land each Tuesday from the rich Levant! 10
 In little time a host of joys to bind,
 And keep our souls in one eternal pant!
 This morn, my friend, and yester-evening taught
 Me how to harbour such a happy thought.

WHAT THE THRUSH SAID

LINES FROM A LETTER TO JOHN HAMILTON REYNOLDS

O THOU whose face hath felt the Winter's wind,
 Whose eye has seen the snow-clouds hung in mist,
 And the black elm tops 'mong the freezing stars,
 To thee the spring will be a harvest-time.
 O thou, whose only book has been the light
 Of supreme darkness which thou feddest on
 Night after night when Phoebus was away,
 To thee the Spring shall be a triple morn.
 O fret not after knowledge—I have none,
 And yet my song comes native with the warmth.
 O fret not after knowledge—I have none, 11
 And yet the Evening listens. He who saddens
 At thought of idleness cannot be idle,
 And he's awake who thinks himself asleep.

SONNET

THE HUMAN SEASONS

FOUR seasons fill the measure of the year;
 There are four seasons in the mind of man:
 He has his lusty Spring, when fancy clear
 Takes in all beauty with an easy span:
 He has his Summer, when luxuriously
 Spring's honied cud of youthful thought he loves
 To ruminate, and by such dreaming high
 His nearest unto heaven: quiet coves
 His soul has in its Autumn, when his wings
 He furlleth close; contented so to look 10
 On mists in idleness—to let fair things
 Pass by unheeded as a threshold brook.
 He has his Winter too of pale misfeature,
 Or else he would forego his mortal nature.

EXTRACTS FROM AN OPERA

O! WERE I one of the Olympian twelve,
 Their godships should pass this into a law,—
 That when a man doth set himself in toil
 After some beauty veiled far away,
 Each step he took should make his lady's hand
 More soft, more white, and her fair cheek more fair;
 And for each briar-berry he might eat,
 A kiss should bud upon the tree of love,
 And pulp and ripen richer every hour,
 To melt away upon the traveller's lips. 10

The text of the Sonnet is that contributed by Keats to Hunt's "Literary Pocket-Book." An earlier version is preserved by Woodhouse.

6-10 He chews the honied cud of fair spring thoughts,
 Till in his soul, dissolv'd, they come to be Part of himself: He hath his Autumn Ports
 And havens of repose, when his tired wings
 Are folded up, and he content to look Woodhouse.

DAISY'S SONG

I.

The sun, with his great eye,
Sees not so much as I;
And the moon, all silver-proud,
Might as well be in a cloud.

II.

And O the spring—the spring!
I lead the life of a king!
Couch'd in the teeming grass,
I spy each pretty lass.

III.

I look where no one dares,
And I stare where no one stares,
And when the night is nigh,
Lambs bleat my lullaby.

FOLLY'S SONG

When wedding fiddles are a-playing,
Huzza for folly O!
And when maidens go a-maying,
Huzza, &c.
When a milk-pail is upset,
Huzza, &c.
And the clothes left in the wet,
Huzza, &c.
When the barrel's set abroach,
Huzza, &c.
When Kate Eyebrow keeps a coach,
Huzza, &c.
When the pig is over-roasted,
Huzza, &c.
And the cheese is over-toasted,
Huzza, &c.
When Sir Snap is with his lawyer,
Huzza, &c.
And Miss Chip has kiss'd the sawyer,
Huzza, &c.

Oh, I am frighten'd with most hateful thoughts!
 Perhaps her voice is not a nightingale's,
 Perhaps her teeth are not the fairest pearl;
 Her eye-lashes may be, for aught I know,
 Not longer than the May-fly's small fan-horns;
 There may not be one dimple on her hand;
 And freckles many; ah! a careless nurse,
 In haste to teach the little thing to walk,
 May have crumpt up a pair of Dian's legs,
 And warpt the ivory of a Juno's neck.

SONG

I.

The stranger lighted from his steed,
 And ere he spake a word,
 He seiz'd my lady's lilly hand,
 And kiss'd it all unheard.

II.

The stranger walk'd into the hall,
 And ere he spake a word,
 He kiss'd my lady's cherry lips,
 And kiss'd 'em all unheard.

III.

The stranger walk'd into the bower,—
 But my lady first did go,—
 Aye hand in hand into the bower,
 Where my lord's roses blow.

IV.

My lady's maid had a silken scarf,
 And a golden ring had she,
 And a kiss from the stranger, as off he went
 Again on his fair palfrey.

* * * * *

Asleep! O sleep a little while, white pearl!
 And let me kneel, and let me pray to thee,
 And let me call Heaven's blessing on thine eyes,
 And let me breathe into the happy air,
 That doth enfold and touch thee all about,
 Vows of my slavery, my giving up,
 My sudden adoration, my great love!

FAERY SONGS

I.

SHED no tear—O shed no tear!
 The flower will bloom another year.
 Weep no more—O weep no more!
 Young buds sleep in the root's white core.
 Dry your eyes—O dry your eyes,
 For I was taught in Paradise
 To ease my breast of melodies—
 Shed no tear.

Overhead—look overhead
 'Mong the blossoms white and red—
 Look up, look up—I flutter now
 On this flush pomegranate bough—
 See me—'tis this silvery bill
 Ever cures the good man's ill—
 Shed no tear—O shed no tear!
 The flower will bloom another year.
 Adieu—Adieu—I fly, adieu,
 I vanish in the heaven's blue—
 Adieu, Adieu!

10

II.

Ah! woe is me! poor silver-wing!
 That I must chant thy lady's dirge,
 And death to this fair haunt of spring,
 Of melody, and streams of flowery verge,—
 Poor silver-wing! ah! woe is me!

That I must see
 These blossoms snow upon thy lady's pall!
 Go, pretty page! and in her ear
 Whisper that the hour is near!
 Softly tell her not to fear
 Such calm favonian burial!

30

Go, pretty page! and soothly tell,—
 The blossoms hang by a melting spell,
 And fall they must, ere a star wink thrice
 Upon her closed eyes,
 That now in vain are weeping their last tears,
 At sweet life leaving, and these arbours green,—
 Rich dowry from the Spirit of the Spheres,— Alas! poor Queen!

SONNET

TO HOMER

STANDING aloof in giant ignorance,
 Of thee I hear and of the Cyclades,
 As one who sits ashore and longs perchance
 To visit dolphin-coral in deep seas.
 So thou wast blind;—but then the veil was rent,
 For Jove uncurtain'd Heaven to let thee live,
 And Neptune made for thee a spumy tent,
 And Pan made sing for thee his forest-hive;
 Aye on the shores of darkness there is light,
 And precipices show untrodden green, 10
 There is a budding morrow in midnight,
 There is a triple sight in blindness keen;
 Such seeing hadst thou, as it once befel
 To Dian, Queen of Earth, and Heaven, and Hell.

SONG

[Written on a blank page in Beaumont and Fletcher's Works, between "Cupid's Revenge" and "The Two Noble Kinsmen."]]

I.

SPIRIT here that reignest!
 Spirit here that painest!
 Spirit here that burnest!
 Spirit here that mournest!
 Spirit, I bow
 My forehead low,
 Enshaded with thy pinions.
 Spirit, I look
 All passion-struck
 Into thy pale dominions.

II.

Spirit here that laughest!
 Spirit here that quaffest!
 Spirit here that dancest!
 Noble soul that prancest!
 Spirit, with thee
 I join in the glee

A-nudging the elbow of Momus.
 Spirit, I flush
 With a Bacchanal blush
 Just fresh from the Banquet of Comus.

TEIGNMOUTH

"SOME DOGGEREL" SENT IN A LETTER TO B. R. HAYDON

I.

HERE all the summer could I stay,
 For there's Bishop's teign
 And King's teign
 And Coomb at the clear teign head—
 Where close by the stream
 You may have your cream
 All spread upon barley bread.

II.

There's arch Brook
 And there's larch Brook
 Both turning many a mill;
 And cooling the drouth
 Of the salmon's mouth,
 And fattening his silver gill.

III.

There is Wild wood,
 A Mild hood
 To the sheep on the lea o' the down,
 Where the golden furze,
 With its green, thin spurs,
 Doth catch at the maiden's gown.

IV.

There is Newton marsh
 With its spear grass harsh—
 A pleasant summer level
 Where the maidens sweet
 Of the Market Street,
 Do meet in the dusk to revel.

V.

There's the Barton rich
With dyke and ditch
And hedge for the thrush to live in
And the hollow tree
For the buzzing bee
And a bank for the wasp to hive in.

VI.

And O, and O
The daisies blow
And the primroses are waken'd,
And violets white
Sit in silver plight,
And the green bud's as long as the spike end.

VII.

Then who would go
Into dark Soho,
And chatter with dack'd hair'd critics,
When he can stay
For the new-mown hay,
And startle the dappled Prickets?

THE DEVON MAID

STANZAS SENT IN A LETTER TO B. R. HAYDON

I.

WHERE be ye going, you Devon Maid?
And what have ye there in the Basket?
Ye tight little fairy just fresh from the dairy,
Will ye give me some cream if I ask it?

II.

I love your Meads, and I love your flowers,
And I love your junkets mainly,
But 'hind the door I love kissing more,
O look not so disdainly.

III.

I love your hills, and I love your dales,
And I love your flocks a-bleating—
But O, on the heather to lie together,
With both our hearts a-beating!

IV.

I'll put your Basket all safe in a nook,
Your shawl I hang up on the willow,
And we will sigh in the daisy's eye
And kiss on a grass green pillow.

EPISTLE TO JOHN HAMILTON REYNOLDS

DEAR Reynolds! as last night I lay in bed,
There came before my eyes that wonted thread
Of shapes, and shadows, and remembrances,
That every other minute vex and please:
Things all disjointed come from north and south,—
Two Witch's eyes above a Cherub's mouth,
Voltaire with casque and shield and habergeon,
And Alexander with his nightcap on;
Old Socrates a-tying his cravat,
And Hazlitt playing with Miss Edgeworth's cat; 10
And Junius Brutus, pretty well so so,
Making the best of's way towards Soho.

Few are there who escape these visitings,—
Perhaps one or two whose lives have patent wings,
And thro' whose curtains peeps no hellish nose,
No wild-boar tushes, and no Mermaid's toes;
But flowers bursting out with lusty pride,
And young Æolian harps personified;
Some Titian colours touch'd into real life,—
The sacrifice goes on; the pontiff knife 20
Gleams in the Sun, the milk-white heifer lows,
The pipes go shrilly, the libation flows:
A white sail shows above the green-head cliff,
Moves round the point, and throws her anchor stiff;
The mariners join hymn with those on land.

You know the Enchanted Castle,—it doth stand
Upon a rock, on the border of a Lake,
Nested in trees, which all do seem to shake
From some old magic-like Urganda's Sword.
O Phœbus! that I had thy sacred word 30
To show this Castle, in fair dreaming wise,
Unto my friend, while sick and ill he lies!

You know it well enough, where it doth seem
A mossy place, a Merlin's Hall, a dream;
You know the clear Lake, and the little Isles,
The mountains blue, and cold near neighbour rills,
All which elsewhere are but half animate;
There do they look alive to love and hate,
To smiles and frowns; they seem a lifted mound
Above some giant, pulsing underground. 40

Part of the Building was a chosen See,
Built by a banish'd Santon of Chaldee;
The other part, two thousand years from him,
Was built by Cuthbert de Saint Aldebrim;
Then there's a little wing, far from the Sun,
Built by a Lapland Witch turn'd maudlin Nun;
And many other juts of aged stone
Founded with many a mason-devil's groan.

The doors all look as if they op'd themselves,
The windows as if latch'd by Fays and Elves, 50
And from them comes a silver flash of light,
As from the westward of a Summer's night;
Or like a beauteous woman's large blue eyes
Gone mad thro' olden songs and poesies.

See! what is coming from the distance dim!
A golden Galley all in silken trim!
Three rows of oars are lightening, moment whiles,
Into the verd'rous bosoms of those isles;
Towards the shade, under the Castle wall,
It comes in silence,—now 'tis hidden all. 60
The Clarion sounds, and from a Postern-gate
An echo of sweet music doth create
A fear in the poor Herdsman, who doth bring
His beasts to trouble the enchanted spring,—

He tells of the sweet music, and the spot,
To all his friends, and they believe him not.

O that our dreamings all, of sleep or wake,
Would all their colours from the sunset take:
From something of material sublime,
Rather than shadow our own soul's day-time 70
In the dark void of night. For in the world
We jostle,—but my flag is not unfurl'd
On the Admiral-staff,—and so philosophize
I dare not yet! Oh, never will the prize,
High reason, and the love of good and ill,
Be my award! Things cannot to the will
Be settled, but they tease us out of thought;
Or is it that imagination brought
Beyond its proper bound, yet still confin'd,
Lost in a sort of Purgatory blind, 80
Cannot refer to any standard law
Of either earth or heaven? It is a flaw
In happiness, to see beyond our bourn,—
It forces us in summer skies to mourn,
It spoils the singing of the Nightingale.

Dear Reynolds! I have a mysterious tale,
And cannot speak it: the first page I read
Upon a Lampit rock of green sea-weed
Among the breakers; 'twas a quiet eve,
The rocks were silent, the wide sea did weave 90
An untumultuous fringe of silver foam
Along the flat brown sand; I was at home
And should have been most happy,—but I saw
Too far into the sea, where every maw
The greater on the less feeds evermore.—
But I saw too distinct into the core
Of an eternal fierce destruction,
And so from happiness I far was gone.
Still am I sick of it, and tho', to-day,
I've gather'd young spring-leaves, and flowers gay
Of periwinkle and wild strawberry, 101
Still do I that most fierce destruction see,—
The Shark at savage prey,—the Hawk at pounce,—
The gentle Robin, like a Pard or Ounce,

Ravening a worm,—Away, ye horrid moods !
 Moods of one's mind ! You know I hate them well.
 You know I'd sooner be a clapping Bell
 To some Kamtschatcan Missionary Church,
 Than with these horrid moods be left i' the lurch.

DAWLISH FAIR

OVER the Hill and over the Dale,
 And over the Bourne to Dawlish,
 Where ginger-bread wives have a scanty sale,
 And ginger-bread nuts are smallish.

FRAGMENT OF AN ODE TO MAIA, WRITTEN ON MAY DAY, 1818

MOTHER of Hermes ! and still youthful Maia !
 May I sing to thee
 As thou wast hymned on the shores of Baïæ ?
 Or may I woo thee
 In earlier Sicilian ? or thy smiles
 Seek as they once were sought, in Grecian isles,
 By bards who died content on pleasant sward,
 Leaving great verse unto a little clan ?
 O, give me their old vigour, and unheard
 Save of the quiet Primrose, and the span 10
 Of heaven and few ears,
 Rounded by thee, my song should die away
 Content as theirs,
 Rich in the simple worship of a day.

ACROSTIC

GEORGIANA AUGUSTA KEATS

GIVE me your patience Sister while I frame
 Exact in Capitals your golden name
 Or sue the fair Apollo and he will
 Rouse from his heavy slumber and instil
 Great love in me for thee and Poesy.
 Imagine not that greatest mastery
 And kingdom over all the Realms of verse
 Nears more to Heaven in aught than when we nurse
 And surely give to love and Brotherhood.

Anthropophagi in Othello's mood ; 10
 Ulysses stormed, and his enchanted belt
 Glow with the Muse, but they are never felt
 Unbosom'd so and so eternal made,
 Such tender incense in their Laurel shade,
 To all the regent sisters of the Nine
 As this poor offering to you, sister mine.

Kind sister! aye, this third name says you are ;
 Enchanted has it been the Lord knows where.
 And may it taste to you like good old wine,
 Take you to real happiness and give 20
 Sons, daughters and a home like honied hive.

SONNET

ON VISITING THE TOMB OF BURNS

THE town, the churchyard, and the setting sun,
 The clouds, the trees, the rounded hills all seem,
 Though beautiful, cold—strange—as in a dream,
 I dreamed long ago, now new begun.
 The short-liv'd, paly Summer is but won
 From Winter's ague, for one hour's gleam ;
 Though sapphire-warm, their stars do never beam:
 All is cold Beauty ; pain is never done :
 For who has mind to relish, Minos-wise,
 The Real of Beauty, free from that dead hue 10
 Sickly imagination and sick pride
 Cast wan upon it! Burns! with honour due
 I oft have honour'd thee. Great shadow, hide
 Thy face ; I sin against thy native skies.

MEG MERRILIES

I.

OLD MEG she was a Gipsy,
 And liv'd upon the Moors :
 Her bed it was the brown heath turf,
 And her house was out of doors.

II.

Her apples were swart blackberries,
Her currants pods o' broom;
Her wine was dew of the wild white rose,
Her book a churchyard tomb.

III.

Her Brothers were the craggy hills,
Her Sisters larchen trees—
Alone with her great family
She liv'd as she did please.

IV.

No breakfast had she many a morn,
No dinner many a noon,
And 'stead of supper she would stare
Full hard against the Moon.

V.

But every morn of woodbine fresh
She made her garlanding,
And every night the dark glen Yew
She wove, and she would sing.

VI.

And with her fingers old and brown
She plaited Mats o' Rushes,
And gave them to the Cottagers
She met among the Bushes.

VII.

Old Meg was brave as Margaret Queen
And tall as Amazon:
An old red blanket cloak she wore;
A chip hat had she on.
God rest her aged bones somewhere—
She died full long ago!

A SONG ABOUT MYSELF

FROM A LETTER TO FANNY KEATS

I.

THERE was a naughty Boy,
 A naughty boy was he,
 He would not stop at home,
 He could not quiet be—
 He took
 In his Knapsack
 A Book
 Full of vowels
 And a shirt
 With some towels—
 A slight cap
 For night cap—
 A hair brush,
 Comb ditto,
 New Stockings
 For old ones
 Would split O!
 This Knapsack
 Tight at's back
 He rivetted close
 And followed his Nose
 To the North,
 To the North,
 And follow'd his nose
 To the North.

II.

There was a naughty boy
 And a naughty boy was he,
 For nothing would he do
 But scribble poetry—
 He took
 An ink stand
 In his hand
 And a pen
 Big as ten

In the other,
And away
In a Pother
He ran
To the mountains
And fountains
And ghostes
And Postes
And witches
And ditches
And wrote
In his coat
When the weather
Was cool,
Fear of gout,
And without
When the weather
Was warm—
Och the charm
When we choose
To follow one's nose
To the north,
To the north,
To follow one's nose
To the north!

III.

There was a naughty boy
And a naughty boy was he,
He kept little fishes
In washing tubs three
In spite
Of the might
Of the Maid
Nor afraid
Of his Granny-good—
He often would
Hurly burly
Get up early
And go
By hook or crook
To the brook

And bring home
Miller's thumb,
Tittlebat
Not over fat,
Minnows small
As the stall
Of a glove,
Not above
The size
Of a nice
Little Baby's
Little fingers—
O he made
'Twas his trade
Of Fish a pretty Kettle
A Kettle—
A Kettle
Of Fish a pretty Kettle
A Kettle!

IV.

There was a naughty Boy,
And a naughty Boy was he,
He ran away to Scotland
The people for to see—
Then he found
That the ground
Was as hard,
That a yard
Was as long,
That a song
Was as merry,
That a cherry
Was as red—
That lead
Was as weighty,
That fourscore
Was as eighty,
That a door
Was as wooden
As in England—

So he stood in his shoes
 And he wonder'd,
 He wonder'd,
 He stood in his shoes
 And he wonder'd.

A GALLOWAY SONG

FROM A LETTER TO TOM KEATS

Ah! ken ye what I met the day
 Out oore the Mountains
 A coming down by craggi[e]s grey
 An mossie fountains—
 A[h] goud hair'd Marie yeve I pray
 Ane minute's guessing—
 For that I met upon the way
 Is past expressing.
 As I stood where a rocky brig
 A torrent crosses 10
 I spied upon a misty rig
 A troupe o' Horses—
 And as they trotted down the glen
 I sped to meet them
 To see if I might know the Men
 To stop and greet them.
 First Willie on his sleek mare came
 At canting gallop
 His long hair rustled like a flame
 On board a shallop. 20
 Then came his brother Rab and then
 Young Peggy's Mither
 And Peggy too—adown the glen
 They went together—
 I saw her wrappit in her hood
 Fra wind and raining—
 Her cheek was flush wi' timid blood
 Twixt growth and waning—
 She turn'd her dazed head full oft
 For there her Brithers 30
 Came riding with her Bridegroom soft
 And mony ithers.

Young Tam came up an' eyed me quick
 With reddened cheek—
 Braw Tam was daffed like a chick—
 He coud na speak—
 Ah Marie they are all gane hame
 Through blustering weather
 An' every heart is full on flame
 An' light as feather. 40
 Ah! Marie they are all gone hame
 Fra happy wedding,
 Whilst I—Ah is it not a shame?
 Sad tears am shedding.

SONNET

TO AILSA ROCK

HEARKEN, thou craggy ocean pyramid!
 Give answer from thy voice, the sea-fowls' screams!
 When were thy shoulders mantled in huge streams?
 When, from the sun, was thy broad forehead hid?
 How long is't since the mighty power bid
 Thee heave to airy sleep from fathom dreams?
 Sleep in the lap of thunder or sunbeams,
 Or when grey clouds are thy cold coverlid.
 Thou answer'st not; for thou art dead asleep;
 Thy life is but two dead eternities— 10
 The last in air, the former in the deep;
 First with the whales, last with the eagle-skies—
 Drown'd wast thou till an earthquake made thee steep,
 Another cannot wake thy giant size.

SONNET

WRITTEN IN THE COTTAGE WHERE BURNS WAS BORN

THIS mortal body of a thousand days
 Now fills, O Burns, a space in thine own room,
 Where thou didst dream alone on budded bays,
 Happy and thoughtless of thy day of doom!
 My pulse is warm with thine own Barley-bree,
 My head is light with pledging a great soul,
 My eyes are wandering, and I cannot see,
 Fancy is dead and drunken at its goal;

Yet can I stamp my foot upon thy floor,
Yet can I ope thy window-sash to find 10
The meadow thou hast tramped o'er and o'er,—
Yet can I think of thee till thought is blind,—
Yet can I gulp a bumper to thy name,—
O smile among the shades, for this is fame!

LINES WRITTEN IN THE HIGHLANDS AFTER A VISIT TO BURNS'S COUNTRY

THERE is a charm in footing slow across a silent plain,
Where patriot battle has been fought, where glory had the gain ;
There is a pleasure on the heath where Druids old have been,
Where mantles grey have rustled by and swept the nettles green ;
There is a joy in every spot made known by times
of old,
New to the feet, although each tale a hundred times
be told ;
There is a deeper joy than all, more solemn in the heart,
More parching to the tongue than all, of more divine
a smart,
When weary steps forget themselves upon a pleasant
turf,
Upon hot sand, or flinty road, or sea-shore iron scurf, 10
Toward the castle or the cot, where long ago was born
One who was great through mortal days, and died of fame unshorn,
Light heather-bells may tremble then, but they are far
away ;
Wood-lark may sing from sandy fern,—the Sun may hear his lay ;
Runnels may kiss the grass on shelves and shallows
clear,
But their low voices are not heard, though come on travels drear ;

Blood-red the Sun may set behind black mountain
 peaks ;
 Blue tides may sluice and drench their time in caves
 and weedy creeks ;
 Eagles may seem to sleep wing-wide upon the air ;
 Ring-doves may fly convuls'd across to some high-cedar'd lair ; 20
 But the forgotten eye is still fast lidded to the ground,
 As Palmer's, that with weariness, mid-desert shrine
 hath found.
 At such a time the soul's a child, in childhood is the brain ;
 Forgotten is the worldly heart—alone, it beats in vain.—
 Aye, if a madman could have leave to pass a healthful day
 To tell his forehead's swoon and faint when first began decay,
 He might make tremble many a one whose spirit had gone forth
 To find a Bard's low cradle-place about the silent North !
 Scanty the hour and few the steps beyond the bourn
 of care,
 Beyond the sweet and bitter world,—beyond it unaware ! 30
 Scanty the hour and few the steps, because a longer stay
 Would bar return, and make a man forget his mortal way :
 O horrible ! to lose the sight of well remember'd face,
 Of Brother's eyes, of Sister's brow—constant to every place ;
 Filling the air, as on we move, with portraiture intense ;
 More warm than those heroic tints that pain a painter's sense,
 When shapes of old come striding by, and visages of old,
 Locks shining black, hair scanty grey, and passions
 manifold.
 No, no, that horror cannot be, for at the cable's length
 Man feels the gentle anchor pull and gladdens in its strength :— 40
 One hour, half-idiot, he stands by mossy waterfall,
 But in the very next he reads his soul's memorial :—

He reads it on the mountain's height, where chance he may sit down
Upon rough marble diadem—that hill's eternal crown.
Yet be his anchor e'er so fast, room is there for a prayer
That man may never lose his mind on mountains black and bare ;
That he may stray league after league some great birthplace to find
And keep his vision clear from speck, his inward sight
unblind.

THE GADFLY

FROM A LETTER TO TOM KEATS

I.

ALL gentle folks who owe a grudge
To any living thing
Open your ears and stay your t[r]udge
Whilst I in dudgeon sing.

II.

The Gadfly he hath stung me sore—
O may he ne'er sting you !
But we have many a horrid bore
He may sting black and blue.

III.

Has any here an old grey Mare
With three legs all her store,
O put it to her Buttocks bare
And straight she'll run on four.

IV.

Has any here a Lawyer suit
Of Seventeen-Forty-Three,
Take Lawyer's nose and put it to't
And you the end will see.

V.

Is there a Man in Parliament
 Dum[b-]founder'd in his speech,
 O let his neighbour make a rent
 And put one in his breech.

VI.

O Lowther how much better thou
 Hadst figur'd t'other day
 When to the folks thou mad'st a bow
 And hadst no more to say

VII.

If lucky Gadfly had but ta'en
 His seat * * *
 And put thee to a little pain
 To save thee from a worse.

VIII.

Better than Southey it had been,
 Better than Mr. D—,
 Better than Wordsworth too, I ween,
 Better than Mr. V—.

IX.

Forgive me pray good people all
 For deviating so—
 In spirit sure I had a call—
 And now I on will go.

X.

Has any here a daughter fair
 Too fond of reading novels,
 Too apt to fall in love with care
 And charming Mister Lovels,

XI.

O put a Gadfly to that thing
 She keeps so white and pert—
 I mean the finger for the ring,
 And it will breed a wort.

XII.

Has any here a pious spouse
 Who seven times a day
 Scolds as King David pray'd, to chouse
 And have her holy way—

XIII.

O let a Gadfly's little sting
 Persuade her sacred tongue
 That noises are a common thing,
 But that her bell has rung.

XIV.

And as this is the summum bo-
 num of all conquering,
 I leave "withouten wordes mo"
 The Gadfly's little sting.

SONNET

ON HEARING THE BAG-PIPE AND SEEING "THE STRANGER" PLAYED AT INVERARY

OF late two dainties were before me plac'd
 Sweet, holy, pure, sacred and innocent,
 From the ninth sphere to me benignly sent
 That Gods might know my own particular taste :
 First the soft Bag-pipe mourn'd with zealous haste,
 The Stranger next with head on bosom bent
 Sigh'd ; rueful again the piteous Bag-pipe went,
 Again the Stranger sighings fresh did waste.
 O Bag-pipe thou didst steal my heart away—
 O Stranger thou my nerves from Pipe didst charm—
 O Bag-pipe thou didst re-assert thy sway— 11
 Again thou Stranger gav'st me fresh alarm—
 Alas! I could not choose. Ah! my poor heart,
 Mum chance art thou with both oblig'd to part.

STAFFA

Nor Aladdin magian
 Ever such a work began ;
 Not the wizard of the Dee
 Ever such a dream could see ;
 Not St. John, in Patmos' Isle,
 In the passion of his toil,
 When he saw the churches seven,
 Golden aisl'd, built up in heaven,
 Gaz'd at such a rugged wonder.
 As I stood its roofing under, 10
 Lo ! I saw one sleeping there,
 On the marble cold and bare.
 While the surges wash'd his feet,
 And his garments white did beat

What appears to have been the first draft of the Staffa poem was written in the fresh enthusiasm inspired by the spectacle. A copy of the draft was made by Brown and sent to Severn : it ended with line 49 of the text,—lines 50 and 51 being added in pencil. In writing to his brother Tom, Keats vividly described Staffa, including Fingal's Cave, and, after saying "But it is impossible to describe it," inserted a matured version of the poem, with the following lines added to what Brown had copied for Severn :

'Tis now free to stupid face,
 To cutters, and to Fashion boats,
 To cravats and to petticoats :—
 The great sea shall war it down,
 For its fame shall not be blown
 At each farthing Quadrille dance.
 So saying with a spirit's glance
 He dived.

He resumed prose with "I am sorry I am so indolent as to write such stuff as this," meaning, probably, the six lines of doggerel added there and then in a wholly different mood from that of the poem. Woodhouse transcribed "Staffa" in his Common-place book to line 49, adding the rest in pencil. The holograph letter to Tom reads (by a slip) in line 45 stupid for dulled, and by another in line 27 architected. The circumstances do not warrant the restoration of the doggerel lines to the text. The Brown transcript has some trifling textual variations. In line 9 it reads on for at,—for line 31

Here his dolphins, one and all, in line 41 Here for Where (lines 39 and 40 not being there), and for line 46

Has dar'd to pass the rocky portal.

Drench'd about the sombre rocks,
 On his neck his well-grown locks,
 Lifted dry above the main,
 Were upon the curl again.
 "What is this? and what art thou?"
 Whisper'd I, and touch'd his brow; 20
 "What art thou? and what is this?"
 Whisper'd I, and strove to kiss
 The spirit's hand, to wake his eyes;
 Up he started in a trice:
 "I am Lycidas," said he,
 "Fam'd in funeral minstrelsy!
 This was architectur'd thus
 By the great Oceanus!—
 Here his mighty waters play
 Hollow organs all the day; 30
 Here by turns his dolphins all,
 Finny palmers great and small,
 Come to pay devotion due—
 Each a mouth of pearls must strew.
 Many a mortal of these days,
 Dares to pass our sacred ways,
 Dares to touch audaciously
 This Cathedral of the Sea!
 I have been the pontiff-priest
 Where the waters never rest, 40
 Where a fledgy sea-bird choir
 Soars for ever; holy fire
 I have hid from mortal man;
 Proteus is my Sacristan.
 But the dulled eye of mortal
 Hath pass'd beyond the rocky portal;
 So for ever will I leave
 Such a taint, and soon unweave
 All the magic of the place."
 * * * * * *
 So saying, with a Spirit's glance 50
 He dived!

SONNET

WRITTEN UPON THE TOP OF BEN NEVIS

READ me a lesson, Muse, and speak it loud

Upon the top of Nevis, blind in mist!

I look into the chasms, and a shroud

Vapourous doth hide them,—just so much I wist

Mankind do know of hell; I look o'erhead,

And there is sullen mist,—even so much

Mankind can tell of heaven; mist is spread

Before the earth, beneath me,—even such,

Even so vague is man's sight of himself!

Here are the craggy stones beneath my feet,— 10

Thus much I know that, a poor witless elf,

I tread on them,—that all my eye doth meet

Is mist and crag, not only on this height,

But in the world of thought and mental might!

BEN NEVIS

A DIALOGUE

[PERSONS: MRS. CAMERON AND BEN NEVIS]

MRS. C.

UPON my life Sir Nevis I am pique'd

That I have so far panted tugg'd and reek'd

To do an hono[u]r to your old bald pate

And now am sitting on you just to bate,

Without your paying me one compliment.

Alas 'tis so with all, when our intent

Is plain, and in the eye of all Mankind

We fair ones show a preference, too blind!

You Gentle man immediately turn tail—

O let me then my hapless fate bewail! 10

The Ben Nevis dialogue is from a letter to Tom. Keats describes the ascent, and adds—After all there was one Mrs. Cameron of 50 years of age and the fattest woman in all Invernessshire who got up this Mountain some few years ago—true she had her servants—but then she had herself . . . 'Tis said a little conversation took place between the mountain and the Lady. After taking a glass of W[h]iskey as she was tolerably seated at ease she thus began.

Ungrateful Baldpate, have I not disdain'd
 The pleasant Valleys—have I not, madbrain'd,
 Deserted all my Pickles and preserves,
 My China closet too—with wretched Nerves
 To boot—say, wretched ingrate, have I not
 Leff[t my soft cushion chair and caudle pot?
 'Tis true I had no corns—no! thank the fates,
 My Shoemaker was always Mr. Bates.
 And if not Mr. Bates why I'm not old!
 Still dumb, ungrateful Nevis—still so cold! 20

Here the Lady took some more w[h]iskey and was putting even more to her lips when she dashed [it] to the Ground for the Mountain began to grumble—which continued for a few minutes before he thus began,

BEN NEVIS.

What whining bit of tongue and Mouth thus dares
 Disturb my slumber of a thousand years?
 Even so long my sleep has been secure—
 And to be so awaked I'll not endure.
 Oh pain—for since the Eagle's earliest scream
 I've had a dam[n]d confounded ugly dream,
 A Nightmare sure. What, Madam, was it you?
 It cannot be! My old eyes are not true!
 Red-Crag, my Spectacles! Now let me see!
 Good Heavens, Lady, how the gemini 30
 Did you get here? O I shall split my sides!
 I shall earthquake——

MRS. C.

Sweet Nevis, do not quake, for though I love
 You[r] honest Countenance all things above,
 Truly I should not like to be convey'd
 So far into your Bosom—gentle Maid
 Loves not too rough a treatment, gentle Sir—
 Pray thee be calm and do not quake nor stir,
 No not a Stone, or I shall go in fits—

22 Disturb] distur'd Letter.

26 It is not quite clear whether the word in the letter is dam'd or darn'd.

29 As regards Red-Crag, Keats explains A domestic of Ben's.

BEN NEVIS.

I must—I shall—I meet not such tit bits— 40
 I meet not such sweet creatures every day—
 By my old night-cap, night-cap night and day,
 I must have one sweet Buss—I must and shall!
 Red-Crag!—What, Madam, can you then repent
 Of all the toil and vigour you have spent
 To see Ben Nevis and to touch his nose?
 Red-Crag, I say! O I must have them close!
 Red-Crag, there lies beneath my farthest toe
 A vein of Sulphur—go dear Red-Crag, go—
 And rub your flinty back against it—budge! 50
 Dear Madam, I must kiss you, faith I must!
 I must Embrace you with my dearest gust!
 Block-head, d'yehear—Block-head, I'll make her feel—
 There lies beneath my east leg's northern heel
 A cave of young earth dragons—well, my boy,
 Go thither quick and so complete my joy;
 Take you a bundle of the largest pines
 And when the sun on fiercest Phosphor shines
 Fire them and ram them in the Dragon's nest,
 Then will the dragons fry and fizz their best 60
 Until ten thousand now no bigger than
 Poor Al[l]igators—poor things of one span—
 Will each one swell to twice ten times the size
 Of northern whale—then for the tender prize—
 The moment then—for then will Red-Crag rub
 His flinty back—and I shall kiss and snub
 And press my dainty morsel to my breast.
 Block-head, make haste!

O Muses weep the rest—
 The Lady fainted and he thought her dead
 So pulled the clouds again about his head 70
 And went to sleep again—soon she was rous'd
 By her affrighted servants—next day hous'd
 Safe on the lowly ground she bless'd her fate
 That fainting fit was not delayed too late.

53 Keats explains that Block-head is Another domestic of Ben's.

74 He adds here in plain prose: But what surprises me above all is how this Lady got down again. I felt it horribly. 'Twas the most vile descent—shook me all to pieces.

TRANSLATION FROM A SONNET OF RONSARD

NATURE withheld Cassandra in the skies,
 For more adornment, a full thousand years ;
 She took their cream of Beauty's fairest dyes,
 And shap'd and tinted her above all Peers :
 Meanwhile Love kept her dearly with his wings,
 And underneath their shadow fill'd her eyes
 With such a richness that the cloudy Kings
 Of high Olympus utter'd slavish sighs.
 When from the Heavens I saw her first descend,
 My heart took fire, and only burning pains, 10
 They were my pleasures—they my Life's sad end ;
 Love pour'd her beauty into my warm veins . . .

A PROPHECY: TO GEORGE KEATS IN AMERICA

'Tis the witching hour of night,
 Orbed is the moon and bright,
 And the stars they glisten, glisten,
 Seeming with bright eyes to listen—
 For what listen they ?
 For a song and for a charm,
 See they glisten in alarm,
 And the moon is waxing warm
 To hear what I shall say.
 Moon! keep wide thy golden ears— 10
 Harken, stars! and hearken, spheres!—
 Harken, thou eternal sky!
 I sing an infant's lullaby,
 A pretty lullaby.
 Listen, listen, listen, listen,
 Glisten, glisten, glisten, glisten,
 And hear my lullaby!
 Though the rushes that will make
 Its cradle still are in the lake—

Sonnet 3 dyes] dies MS.

Though the linen that will be 20
 Its swathe, is on the cotton tree—
 Though the woollen that will keep
 It warm, is on the silly sheep—
 Listen, starlight, listen, listen,
 Glisten, glisten, glisten, glisten,

And hear my lullaby!
 Child, I see thee! Child, I've found thee
 Midst of the quiet all around thee!
 Child, I see thee! Child, I spy thee!
 And thy mother sweet is nigh thee! 30
 Child, I know thee! Child no more,
 But a Poet evermore!

See, see, the lyre, the lyre,
 In a flame of fire,
 Upon the little cradle's top
 Flaring, flaring, flaring.
 Past the eyesight's bearing.
 Awake it from its sleep,
 And see if it can keep
 Its eyes upon the blaze— 40

Amaze, amaze!
 It stares, it stares, it stares,
 It dares what no one dares!
 It lifts its little hand into the flame
 Unharm'd, and on the strings
 Paddles a little tune, and sings,
 With dumb endeavour sweetly—
 Bard art thou completely!

Little child
 O' th' western wild, 50
 Bard art thou completely!
 Sweetly with dumb endeavour,
 A Poet now or never,

Little child
 O' th' western wild,
 A Poet now or never!

STANZAS

IN a drear-nighted December,
 Too happy, happy tree,
 Thy branches ne'er remember
 Their green felicity:
 The north cannot undo them,
 With a sleety whistle through them;
 Nor frozen thawings glue them
 From budding at the prime.

In a drear-nighted December,
 Too happy, happy brook,
 Thy bubblings ne'er remember
 Apollo's summer look;
 But with a sweet forgetting,
 They stay their crystal fretting,
 Never, never petting
 About the frozen time.

III.

Ah! would 'twere so with many
 A gentle girl and boy!
 But were there ever any
 Writh'd not at passed joy?
 To know the change and feel it,
 When there is none to heal it,
 Nor numbed sense to steel it,
 Was never said in rhyme.

THE EVE OF SAINT MARK

UPON a Sabbath-day it fell;
 Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell,
 That call'd the folk to evening prayer;
 The city streets were clean and fair
 From wholesome drench of April rains;
 And, on the western window panes,
 The chilly sunset faintly told
 Of unmatur'd green vallies cold,
 Of the green thorny bloomless hedge,
 Of rivers new with spring-tide sedge, 10
 Of primroses by shelter'd rills,
 And daisies on the aguish hills.
 Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell:
 The silent streets were crowded well
 With staid and pious companies,
 Warm from their fire-side orat'ries;
 And moving, with demurest air,
 To even-song, and vesper prayer.
 Each arched porch, and entry low,
 Was fill'd with patient folk and slow, 20
 With whispers hush, and shuffling feet,
 While play'd the organ loud and sweet.

The bells had ceas'd, the prayers begun,
 And Bertha had not yet half done

There are two extant holographs of "The Eve of St. Mark," one embodied in a letter to George Keats which I have not had an opportunity of collating with the text, and the other in the Keats Manuscript Book at the British Museum. The variations noted are from the Museum MS.

A curious volume, patch'd and torn,
 That all day long, from earliest morn,
 Had taken captive her two eyes,
 Among its golden broideries;
 Perplex'd her with a thousand things,—
 The stars of Heaven, and angels' wings, 20
 Martyrs in a fiery blaze,
 Azure saints in silver rays,
 Moses' breastplate, and the seven
 Candlesticks John saw in Heaven,
 The winged Lion of Saint Mark,
 And the Covenantal Ark,
 With its many mysteries,
 Cherubim and golden mice.

Bertha was a maiden fair,
 Dwelling in the old Minster-square; 40
 From her fire-side she could see,
 Sidelong, its rich antiquity,
 Far as the Bishop's garden-wall;
 Where sycamores and elm-trees tall,
 Full-leav'd, the forest had outstript,
 By no sharp north-wind ever nipt,
 So shelter'd by the mighty pile.
 Bertha arose, and read awhile,
 With forehead 'gainst the window-pane.
 Again she try'd, and then again, 50
 Until the dusk eve left her dark
 Upon the legend of St. Mark.
 From plaited lawn-frill, fine and thin,
 She lifted up her soft warm chin,
 With aching neck and swimming eyes,
 And daz'd with saintly imageries.

The clamorous daws, that all the day
Above tree-tops and towers play,
Pair by pair had gone to rest,
Each in its ancient belfry-nest,
Where asleep they fall betimes,
To music of the drowsy chimes.

All was silent, all was gloom,
Abroad and in the homely room:
Down she sat, poor cheated soul!
And struck a lamp from the dismal coal; 70
Lean'd forward, with bright drooping hair
And slant book, full against the glare.
Her shadow, in uneasy guise,
Hover'd about, a giant size,
On ceiling-beam and old oak chair,
The parrot's cage, and panel square;
And the warm angled winter screen,
On which were many monsters seen,
Call'd doves of Siam, Lima mice, 80
And legless birds of Paradise,
Macaw, and tender Avadavat,
And silken-furr'd Angora cat.
Untir'd she read, her shadow still
Glower'd about, as it would fill
The room with wildest forms and shades,
As though some ghostly queen of spades
Had come to mock behind her back,
And dance, and ruffle her garments black.

ODE TO FANNY

I.

PHYSICIAN Nature! let my spirit blood!

O ease my heart of verse and let me rest;

Throw me upon thy Tripod, till the flood

Of stifling numbers ebbs from my full breast.

A theme! a theme! great nature! give a theme;

Let me begin my dream.

I come—I see thee, as thou standest there,

Beckon me not into the wintry air.

II.

Ah! dearest love, sweet home of all my fears,

And hopes, and joys, and panting miseries,—

To-night, if I may guess, thy beauty wears

A smile of such delight,

As brilliant and as bright,

As when with ravished, aching, vassal eyes,

Lost in soft amaze,

I gaze, I gaze!

III.

Who now, with greedy looks, eats up my feast?

What stare outfaces now my silver moon!

Ah! keep that hand unravished at the least;

Let, let, the amorous burn—

But, pr'ythee, do not turn

The current of your heart from me so soon.

O! save, in charity,

The quickest pulse for me.

IV.

Save it for me, sweet love! though music breathe

Voluptuous visions into the warm air;

Though swimming through the dance's dangerous wreath,

Be like an April day,

Smiling and cold and gay,

A temperate lilly, temperate as fair;

Then, Heaven! there will be

A warmer June for me.

I 8 not] probably a mistake for out.

II 7 Lost in a soft amaze would be more Keats like.

V.

Why, this—you'll say, my Fanny! is not true:
 Put your soft hand upon your snowy side,
 Where the heart beats: confess—'tis nothing new—
 Must not a woman be
 A feather on the sea,
 Sway'd to and fro by every wind and tide?
 Of as uncertain speed
 As blow-ball from the mead?

VI.

I know it—and to know it is despair
 To one who loves you as I love, sweet Fanny!
 Whose heart goes fluttering for you every where,
 Nor, when away you roam,
 Dare keep its wretched home,
 Love, love alone, his pains severe and many:
 Then, loveliest! keep me free,
 From torturing jealousy.

VII.

Ah! if you prize my subdued soul above
 The poor, the fading, brief, pride of an hour;
 Let none profane my Holy See of love,
 Or with a rude hand break
 The sacramental cake:
 Let none else touch the just new-budded flower;
 If not—may my eyes close,
 Love! on their lost repose.

SONNET

TO SLEEP

O soft embalmer of the still midnight,
 Shutting, with careful fingers and benign,
 Our gloom-pleas'd eyes, embower'd from the light,
 Enshaded in forgetfulness divine:
 O soothest Sleep! if so it please thee, close
 In midst of this thine hymn my willing eyes,

Sonnet 4 As wearisome as darkness is divine Dilke, draft.

6 My willing eyes in midst of this thine hymn Draft.

Or wait the "Amen," ere thy poppy throws
 Around my bed its lulling charities.
 Then save me, or the passed day will shine
 Upon my pillow, breeding many woes,—¹⁰
 Save me from curious Conscience, that still lords
 Its strength for darkness, burrowing like a mole;
 Turn the key deftly in the oiled wards,
 And seal the hushed Casket of my Soul.

SONG

I.

Hush, hush! tread softly! hush, hush my dear!
 All the house is asleep, but we know very well
 That the jealous, the jealous old bald-pate may hear,
 Tho' you've padded his night-cap—O sweet Isabel!
 Tho' your feet are more light than a Fairy's feet,
 Who dances on bubbles where brooklets meet,—
 Hush, hush! soft tiptoe! hush, hush my dear!
 For less than a nothing the jealous can hear.

II.

No leaf doth tremble, no ripple is there
 On the river,—all's still, and the night's sleepy eye
 Closes up, and forgets all its Lethean care,
 Charm'd to death by the drone of the humming
 Mayfly;
 And the Moon, whether prudish or complaisant,
 Has fled to her bower, well knowing I want
 No light in the dusk, no torch in the gloom,
 But my Isabel's eyes, and her lips pulp'd with bloom.

Sonnet 8 lulling Houghton: dewy G. Keats and Dilke, fair copy.

8-12 Its sweet-death dews o'er every pulse and limb—

Then shut the hushed Casket of my soul

And turn the key round in the oiled wards

And let it rest until the morn has stole,

Bright tressed From the grey east's shuddering
 bourn... Draft.

12 From the west's shuddering bourn . . . Draft, rejected.

III.

Lift the latch! ah gently! ah tenderly—sweet!
 We are dead if that latchet gives one little clink!
 Well done—now those lips, and a flowery seat—
 The old man may sleep, and the planets may wink;
 The shut rose shall dream of our loves, and awake
 Full blown, and such warmth for the morning's take,
 The stock-dove shall hatch her soft brace and shall coo,
 While I kiss to the melody, aching all through!

SONG

I HAD a dove and the sweet dove died;
 And I have thought it died of grieving:
 O, what could it grieve for? Its feet were tied,
 With a silken thread of my own hand's weaving;
 Sweet little red feet! why should you die—
 Why should you leave me, sweet bird! why?
 You liv'd alone in the forest-tree,
 Why, pretty thing! would you not live with me?
 I kiss'd you oft and gave you white peas;
 Why not live sweetly, as in the green trees? 10

ODE ON INDOLENCE

"They toil not, neither do they spin."

I.

ONE morn before me were three figures seen,
 With bowed necks, and joined hands, side-faced;
 And one behind the other stepp'd serene,
 In placid sandals, and in white robes graced;
 They pass'd, like figures on a marble urn,
 When shifted round to see the other side;
 They came again; as when the urn once more
 Is shifted round, the first seen shades return;
 And they were strange to me, as may betide
 With vases, to one deep in Phidian lore.

Song 3 O what could it mourn for? it was tied . . . MS.

II.

How is it, Shadows! that I knew ye not?

How came ye muffled in so hush a mask?

Was it a silent deep-disguised plot

To steal away, and leave without a task

My idle days? Ripe was the drowsy hour;

The blissful cloud of summer-indolence

Benumb'd my eyes; my pulse grew less and less;
Pain had no sting, and pleasure's wreath no flower:

O, why did ye not melt, and leave my sense

Unhaunted quite of all but—nothingness?

III.

A third time pass'd they by, and, passing, turn'd

Each one the face a moment whiles to me;

Then faded, and to follow them I burn'd

And ach'd for wings because I knew the three;

The first was a fair Maid, and Love her name;

The second was Ambition, pale of cheek,

And ever watchful with fatigued eye;

The last, whom I love more, the more of blame

Is heap'd upon her, maiden most unmeek,—

I knew to be my demon Poesy.

IV.

They faded, and, forsooth! I wanted wings:

O folly! What is love! and where is it?

And for that poor Ambition! it springs

From a man's little heart's short fever-fit;

For Poesy!—no,—she has not a joy,—

At least for me,—so sweet as drowsy noons,

And evenings steep'd in honied indolence;

O, for an age so shelter'd from annoy,

That I may never know how change the moons,

Or hear the voice of busy common-sense!

V.

And once more came they by;—alas! wherefore?

My sleep had been embroider'd with dim dreams;

My soul had been a lawn besprinkled o'er

With flowers, and stirring shades, and baffled beams:

The morn was clouded, but no shower fell,
 Tho' in her lids hung the sweet tears of May;
 The open casement press'd a new-leav'd vine,
 Let in the budding warmth and throstle's lay;
 O Shadows! 'twas a time to bid farewell!
 Upon your skirts had fallen no tears of mine.

VI.

So, ye three Ghosts, adieu! Ye cannot raise
 My head cool-bedded in the flowery grass;
 For I would not be dieted with praise,
 A pet-lamb in a sentimental farce!
 Fade softly from my eyes, and be once more
 In masque-like figures on the dreamy urn;
 Farewell! I yet have visions for the night,
 And for the day faint visions there is store;
 Vanish, ye Phantoms! from my idle spright,
 Into the clouds, and never more return!

SONNET

WHY did I laugh to-night? No voice will tell:
 No God, no Demon of severe response,
 Deigns to reply from heaven or from Hell.
 Then to my human heart I turn at once.
 Heart! Thou and I are here sad and alone;
 I say, why did I laugh! O mortal pain!
 O Darkness! Darkness! ever must I moan,
 To question Heaven and Hell and Heart in vain.
 Why did I laugh? I know this Being's lease,
 My fancy to its utmost blisses spreads; 10
 Yet would I on this very midnight cease,
 And the world's gaudy ensigns see in shreds;
 Verse, Fame, and Beauty are intense indeed,
 But Death intenser—Death is Life's high meed.

Sonnet 6 Say, wherefore did I laugh? MS. 11 would] could MS.

A DREAM, AFTER READING DANTE'S EPISODE OF

PAULO AND FRANCESCA

As Hermes once took to his feathers light,
 When lulled Argus, baffled, swoon'd and slept,
 So on a Delphic reed, my idle spright
 So play'd, so charm'd, so conquer'd, so bereft
 The dragon-world of all its hundred eyes;
 And, seeing it asleep, so fled away—
 Not to pure Ida with its snow-cold skies,
 Nor unto Tempe where Jove griev'd a day;
 But to that second circle of sad hell,
 Where 'mid the gust, the whirlwind, and the flaw
 Of rain and hail-stones, lovers need not tell 11
 Their sorrows. Pale were the sweet lips I saw,
 Pale were the lips I kiss'd, and fair the form
 I floated with, about that melancholy storm.

AN EXTEMPORE

FROM A LETTER TO GEORGE KEATS AND HIS WIFE

WHEN they were come into the Faery's Court
 They rang—no one at home—all gone to sport
 And dance and kiss and love as faeries do
 For Fa[e]ries be as humans, lovers true—
 Amid the woods they were, so lone and wild,
 Where even the Robin feels himself exil'd
 And where the very brooks as if afraid
 Hurry along to some less magic shade.

No one to see my Ape, my Dwarf, my Fool,
Or how I pace my Otaheitian mule.
Ape, Dwarf and Fool, why stand you gaping there?
Burst the door open, quick—or I declare
I'll switch you soundly and in pieces tear."
The Dwarf began to tremble and the Ape
Star'd at the Fool, the Fool was all agape,
The Princess grasp'd her switch, but just in time 20
The dwarf with piteous face began to rhyme.
"O mighty Princess did you ne'er hear tell
What your poor servants know but too too well?
Know you the three great crimes in faery land?
The first, alas! poor Dwarf, I understand—
I made a whipstock of a faery's wand—
The next is snoring in their company—
The next, the last, the direst of the three
Is making free when they are not at home.
I was a Prince—a baby prince—my doom 30
You see, I made a whipstock of a wand—
My top has henceforth slept in faery land.
He was a Prince, the Fool, a grown up Prince,
But he has never been a King's son since
He fell a-snoring at a faery Ball—
Your poor Ape was a prince and he, poor thing,
Picklock'd a faery's boudour—now no king,
But ape—so pray your highness stay awhile;
'Tis sooth indeed, we know it to our sorrow—
Persist and you may be an ape tomorrow— 40
While the Dwarf spake the Princess all for spite
Peal'd [sic] the brown hazel twig to lilly white,
Clench'd her small teeth, and held her lips apart,
Try'd to look unconcern'd with beating heart.
They saw her highness had made up her mind
And quaver'd like the reeds before the wind,
And they had had it, but, O happy chance!
The Ape for very fear began to dance
And grin'd as all his ugliness did ache—
She staid her vixen fingers for his sake, 50
He was so very ugly: then she took
Her pocket glass mirror and began to look
First at herself and [then] at him and then
She smil'd at her own beauteous face again.

Yet for all this—for all her pretty face
 She took it in her head to see the place.
 Women gain little from experience
 Either in Lovers, husbands or expense.
 The more the beauty, the more fortune too,
 Beauty before the wide world never knew. 60
 So each fair reasons—tho' it oft miscarries.
 She thought her pretty face would please the fa[e]ries.
 "My darling Ape I won't whip you today—
 Give me the Picklock, sirrah, and go play."
 They all three wept—but counsel was as vain
 As crying cup biddy to drops of rain.
 Yet lingeringly did the sad Ape forth draw
 The Picklock from the Pocket in his Jaw.
 The Princess took it and dismounting straight
 Trip'd in blue silver'd slippers to the gate 70
 And touch'd the wards, the Door ~~opes~~ full cou[r]teou[s]ly
 Opened—she enter'd with her servants three.
 Again it clos'd and there was nothing seen
 But the Mule grazing on the herbage green.

End of Canto xii

Canto the xiii

The Mule no sooner saw himself alone
 Than he prick'd up his Ears—and said "well done!
 At least, unhappy Prince, I may be free—
 No more a Princess shall side-saddle me.
 O King of Othaietà—tho' a Mule
 'Aye every inch a King'—tho' 'Fortune's fool'— 80
 Well done—for by what Mr. Dwarfy said
 I would not give a sixpence for her head."
 Even as he spake he trotted in high glee
 To the knotty side of an old Pollard tree
 And rub[d] his sides against the mossed bark
 Till his Girths burst and left him naked stark
 Except his Bridle—how get rid of that,
 Buckled and tied with many a twist and plait?
 At last it struck him to pretend to sleep
 And then the thievish Monkeys down would creep 90
 And filch the unpleasant trammels quite away.
 No sooner thought of than adown he lay,

Sham'd a good snore—the Monkey-men descended
And whom they thought to injure they befriended.
They hung his Bridle on a topmost bough
And off[f] he went, run, trot, or anyhow—
Brown is gone to bed—and I am tired of rhyming...

SPENSERIAN STANZAS
ON CHARLES ARMITAGE BROWN

I.

HE is to weet a melancholy carle:
Thin in the waist, with bushy head of hair,
As hath the seeded thistle when in parle
It holds the Zephyr, ere it sendeth fair
Its light balloons into the summer air;
Therto his beard had not begun to bloom,
No brush had touch'd his chin or razor sheer;
No care had touch'd his cheek with mortal doom,
But new he was and bright as scarf from Persian loom.

II.

Ne cared he for wine, or half-and-half
Ne cared he for fish or flesh or fowl,
And sauces held he worthless as the chaff;
He 'sdeigned the swine-head at the wassail-bowl;
Ne with lewd ribbalds sat he cheek by jowl;
Ne with sly Lemans in the scorner's chair;
But after water-brooks this Pilgrim's soul
Panted, and all his food was woodland air
Though he would oft-times feast on gilliflowers rare.

III.

The slang of cities in no wise he knew,
Tipping the wink to him was heathen Greek;
He sipp'd no olden Tom or ruin blue,
Or nantz or cherry-brandy drank full meek
By many a damsel hoarse and rouge of cheek;
Nor did he know each aged watchman's beat,
Nor in obscured purlieus would he seek
For curled Jewesses, with ankles neat,
Who as they walk abroad make tinkling with their feet.

LA BELLE DAME SANS MERCI

I.

AH, what can ail thee, wretched wight,
 Alone and palely loitering;
 The sedge is wither'd from the lake,
 And no birds sing.

II.

Ah, what can ail thee, wretched wight,
 So haggard and so woe-begone?
 The squirrel's granary is full,
 And the harvest's done.

III.

I see a lilly on thy brow,
 With anguish moist and fever dew;
 And on thy cheek a fading rose
 Fast withereth too.

IV.

I met a lady in the meads
 Full beautiful, a faery's child;
 Her hair was long, her foot was light,
 And her eyes were wild.

"La Belle Dame sans Merci" in its earliest known form was written into a journal-letter to George Keats and his wife in the latter half of April 1819, without any prelude, but with the heading—

Wednesday Evening—

La belle dame sans merci—

and written in a way that indicates fresh composition; for there are many corrections. This version was first published by Mr. Colvin in "Macmillan's Magazine" for August 1888. A revised version was published by Hunt in "The Indicator" on the 10th of May 1820. In Woodhouse's Common-place book is a transcript of the poem, which is probably the source of the version printed by Lord Houghton among the Literary Remains in 1848. The "Indicator" version is here adopted in the text, variations of more than ordinary interest being noted.

I and II 1 O what can ail thee, Knight at arms Draft.

III I see death's lilly on thy brow
 With anguish moist and fever dew
 And on thy cheeks death's fading rose
 Withereth too. Draft.

The word death's, however, is struck out in favour of a both in line 1 and in line 3; and Fast is put in before withereth in line 4.

IV In this stanza line 1 originally ended with Wilds (not Wolds as in "Macmillan's Magazine") instead of Meads.

V.

I set her on my pacing steed,
 And nothing else saw all day long;
 For sideways would she lean, and sing
 A faery's song.

VI.

I made a garland for her head,
 And bracelets too, and fragrant zone;
 She look'd at me as she did love,
 And made sweet moan.

VII.

She found me roots of relish sweet,
 And honey wild, and manna dew;
 And sure in language strange she said,
 I love thee true.

VIII.

She took me to her elfin grot,
 And there she gaz'd and sighed deep,
 And there I shut her wild sad eyes—
 So kiss'd to sleep.

IX.

And there we slumber'd on the moss,
 And there I dream'd, ah woe betide,
 The latest dream I ever dream'd
 On the cold hill side.

V This and the next stanza are transposed in the Draft and the Woodhouse version; and in the third line we read sidelong would she bend.

VII Line 2 originally stood thus—

And honey wild and honey dew.

The only change made in the Draft in this stanza is the substitution of manna dew for honey dew. There is no trace of the word once given in "Macmillan's Magazine" in line 3.

VIII-IX In Lord Houghton's version (following that of the journal-letter and Woodhouse)—

She took me to her elfin grot,
 And there she wept, and sigh'd full sore,
 And there I shut her wild wild eyes
 With kisses four.

And there she lulled me asleep, . . .

In the second line of stanza VIII is the cancelled reading

And there she wept and there she sigh'd . . .

And in line 4 of stanzas IX and XI, we have hill's side for hill side. The kisses four perhaps struck Keats, upon review, as a little quaint; and the other changes are an organic consequence of that made here. Indeed,

X.

I saw pale kings, and princes too,
 Pale warriors, death-pale were they all;
 Who cry'd—"La belle Dame sans merci
 Hath thee in thrall!"

XI.

I saw their starv'd lips in the gloam
 With horrid warning gaped wide,
 And I awoke, and found me here
 On the cold hill side.

XII.

And this is why I sojourn here
 Alone and palely loitering,
 Though the sedge is wither'd from the lake,
 And no birds sing.

SONG OF FOUR FAERIES,

FIRE, AIR, EARTH, AND WATER,

SALAMANDER, ZEPHYR, DUSKETHA, AND BREAMA.

SALAMANDER.

HAPPY, happy glowing fire!

ZEPHYR.

Fragrant air! delicious light!

DUSKETHA.

Let me to my glooms retire!

in the journal-letter Keats says—"Why four kisses—you will say—why four because I wish to restrain the headlong impetuosity of my Muse—she would have fain said 'score' without hurting the rhyme—but we must temper the Imagination as the Critics say with Judgment."

X The Draft reads They for Who in line 3, and Thee hath in thrall.

XI 1 gloom Draft, Woodhouse, and Houghton : gloom "Indicator." Hunt probably made that small change. Line 2 of the stanza had been begun with All tremble and had then been rewritten

With horrid warning wide agape before the reading of the text was adopted.

XII 1 And this is why I wither.—Draft, rejected.

The "Song of Four Faeries" also occurs in the journal-letter containing "La Belle Dame."

BREAMA.

I to green-weed rivers bright!

SALAMANDER.

Happy, happy glowing fire!
Dazzling bowers of soft retire,
Ever let my nourish'd wing,
Like a bat's, still wandering,
Faintless fan your fiery spaces, 10
Spirit sole in deadly places.
In unhaunted roar and blaze,
Open eyes that never daze,
Let me see the myriad shapes
Of men, and beasts, and fish, and apes,
Portray'd in many a fiery den,
And wrought by spumy bitumen.
On the deep intenser roof,
Arched every way aloof,
Let me breathe upon their skies,
And anger their live tapestries; 20
Free from cold, and every care,
Of chilly rain, and shivering air.

ZEPHYR.

Spirit of Fire! away! away!
Or your very roundelay
Will sear my plumage newly budded
From its quilled sheath, all studded
With the self-same dew that fell
On the May-grown Asphodel.
Spirit of Fire—away! away!

BREAMA.

Spirit of Fire—away! away! 30
Zephyr, blue-eyed Faery, turn,
And see my cool sedge-bury'd urn,
Where it rests its mossy brim
'Mid water-mint and cresses dim;
And the flowers, in sweet troubles,
Lift their eyes above the bubbles,
Like our Queen, when she would please
To sleep, and Oberon will tease.

TWO SONNETS ON FAME

I

FAME, like a wayward Girl, will still be coy
 To those who woo her with too slavish knees,
 But makes surrender to some thoughtless Boy,
 And dotes the more upon a heart at ease ;
 She is a Gipsej, will not speak to those
 Who have not learnt to be content without her ;
 A Jilt, whose ear was never whisper'd close,
 Who thinks they scandal her who talk about her ;
 A very Gipsej is she, Nilus-born,
 Sister-in-law to jealous Potiphar ; 10
 Ye love-sick Bards, repay her scorn for scorn,
 Ye Artists lovelorn, madmen that ye are !
 Make your best bow to her and bid adieu,
 Then, if she likes it, she will follow you.

II

"You cannot eat your cake and have it too."—Proverb.

How fever'd is the man, who cannot look
 Upon his mortal days with temperate blood,
 Who vexes all the leaves of his life's book,
 And robs his fair name of its maidenhood ;
 It is as if the rose should pluck herself,
 Or the ripe plum finger its misty bloom,
 As if a Naiad, like a meddling elf,
 Should darken her pure grot with muddy gloom,
 But the rose leaves herself upon the briar,
 For winds to kiss and grateful bees to feed, 10
 And the ripe plum still wears its dim attire,
 The undisturbed lake has crystal space,
 Why then should man, teasing the world for grace,
 Spoil his salvation for a fierce miscreed ?

These two sonnets also occur in the Journal-letter.

II 7-8 As if a clear Lake meddling with itself
 Should cloud its pureness with a muddy gloom
Journal-letter.

13-14 Why then should man his own bright name deface
 And burn our pleasures in his selfish fire
Journal-letter, rejected.

SONNET

ON THE SONNET

If by dull rhymes our English must be chain'd,
 And, like Andromeda, the Sonnet sweet
 Fetter'd, in spite of pained loveliness,
 Let us find out, if we must be constrain'd,
 Sandals more interwoven and complete
 To fit the naked foot of Poesy:
 Let us inspect the Lyre, and weigh the stress
 Of every chord, and see what may be gain'd
 By ear industrious, and attention meet;
 Misers of sound and syllable, no less 10
 Than Midas of his coinage, let us be
 Jealous of dead leaves in the bay wreath crown;
 So, if we may not let the Muse be free,
 She will be bound with garlands of her own.

OTHO THE GREAT

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Castle. Enter CONRAD.

Conrad. So, I am safe emerged from these broils!
Amid the wreck of thousands I am whole ;
For every crime I have a laurel-wreath,
For every lie a lordship. Nor yet has
My ship of fortune furl'd her silken sails,—
Let her glide on! This danger'd neck is saved,
By dexterous policy, from the rebel's axe ;
And of my ducal palace not one stone
Is bruised by the Hungarian petards.
Toil hard, ye slaves, and from the miser-earth 10
Bring forth once more my bullion, treasured deep,
With all my jewell'd salvers, silver and gold,
And precious goblets that make rich the wine.
But why do I stand babbling to myself?
Where is Auranthe? I have news for her Shall—

Enter AURANTHE.

Auranthe. Conrad! what tidings? Good, if I may guess

From your alert eyes and high-lifted brows.
What tidings of the battle? Albert? Ludolph? Otho?

Conrad. You guess aright. And, sister, slurring o'er
Our by-gone quarrels, I confess my heart 20
Is beating with a child's anxiety,
To make our golden fortune known to you.

Auranthe. So serious?

Conrad. Yes, so serious, that before
I utter even the shadow of a hint
Concerning what will make that sin-worn cheek
Blush joyous blood through every lineament,
You must make here a solemn vow to me.

Auranthe. I prythee, Conrad, do not overact

The hypocrite—what vow would you impose?

Conrad. Trust me for once,—that you may be assur'd
'Tis not confiding to a broken reed, 31
A poor Court-bankrupt, outwitted and lost,
Revolve these facts in your acutest mood,
In such a mood as now you listen to me :—
A few days since, I was an open rebel
Against the Emperor, had suborn'd his son,
Drawn off his nobles to revolt, and shown
Contented fools causes for discontent
Fresh hatch'd in my ambition's eagle nest—
So thriv'd I as a rebel, and behold 40
Now I am Otho's favourite, his dear friend,
His right hand, his brave Conrad.

Auranthe. I confess
You have intrigued with these unsteady times
To admiration; but to be a favourite—

Conrad. I saw my moment. The Hungarians,
Collected silently in holes and corners,
Appear'd, a sudden host, in the open day.
I should have perish'd in our empire's wreck,
But, calling interest loyalty, swore faith
To most believing Otho; and so help'd 50
His blood-stain'd ensigns to the victory
In yesterday's hard fight, that it has turn'd
The edge of his sharp wrath to eager kindness.

Auranthe. So far yourself. But what is this to me.
More than that I am glad? I gratulate you.

Conrad. Yes, sister, but it does regard you greatly,
Nearly, momentarily,—aye, painfully!
Make me this vow—

Auranthe. Concerning whom or what?

Conrad. Albert!

Auranthe. I would inquire somewhat of him:
You had a letter from me touching him? 60
No treason 'gainst his head in deed or word!
Surely you spar'd him at my earnest prayer?
Give me the letter—it should not exist!

Conrad. At one pernicious charge of the enemy,
I, for a moment-whiles, was prisoner ta'en
And rifled,—stuff! the horses' hoofs have minc'd it!

Auranthe. He is alive?

Conrad. He is! but here make oath
To alienate him from your scheming brain,
Divorce him from your solitary thoughts,
And cloud him in such utter banishment, 70
That when his person meets again your eye,
Your vision shall quite lose its memory,
And wander past him as through vacancy.

Auranthe. I'll not be perjured.

Conrad. No, nor great, nor mighty;
You would not wear a crown, or rule a kingdom.
To you it is indifferent.

Auranthe. What means this?

Conrad. You'll not be perjured! Go to Albert then,
That camp-mushroom—dishonour of our house.
Go, page his dusty heels upon a march,
Furbish his jingling baldric while he sleeps, 80
And share his mouldy ration in a siege.
Yet stay,—perhaps a charm may call you back,
And make the widening circlets of your eyes
Sparkle with healthy fevers.—The Emperor
Hath given consent that you should marry Ludolph!

Auranthe. Can it be, brother? For a golden crown
With a queen's awful lips I doubly thank you!
This is to wake in Paradise! Farewell
Thou clod of yesterday—'twas not myself!
Not till this moment did I ever feel 90
My spirit's faculties! I'll flatter you
For this, and be you ever proud of it;
Thou, Jove-like, struck'st thy forehead,
And from the teeming marrow of thy brain
I spring complete Minerva! But the prince—
His highness Ludolph—where is he?

Conrad. I know not:
When, lackeying my counsel at a beck,
The rebel lords, on bended knees, received
The Emperor's pardon, Ludolph kept aloof,
Sole, in a stiff, fool-hardy, sulky pride; 100
Yet, for all this, I never saw a father
In such a sickly longing for his son.
We shall soon see him, for the Emperor
He will be here this morning.

Auranthe. That I heard

Among the midnight rumours from the camp.

Conrad. You give up Albert to me?

Auranthe. Harm him not!

E'en for his highness Ludolph's sceptry hand,
I would not Albert suffer any wrong.

Conrad. Have I not laboured, plotted—?

Auranthe. See you spare him:

Nor be pathetic, my kind benefactor, 110

On all the many bounties of your hand,—

'Twas for yourself you laboured—not for me!

Do you not count, when I am queen, to take Advantage of your chance discoveries

Of my poor secrets, and so hold a rod

Over my life?

Conrad. Let not this slave—this villain—

Be cause of feud between us. See! he comes!

Look, woman, look, your Albert is quite safe!

In haste it seems. Now shall I be in the way,

And wish'd with silent curses in my grave, 120

Or side by side with 'whelmed mariners.

Enter ALBERT.

Albert. Fair on your graces fall this early morrow!

So it is like to do, without my prayers,

For your right noble names, like favourite tunes,

Have fall'n full frequent from our Emperor's lips,

High commented with smiles.

Auranthe.

Noble Albert!

Conrad (aside).

Noble!

Auranthe. Such salutation argues a glad heart
In our prosperity. We thank you, sir.

Albert. Lady! O, would to Heaven your poor servant

Could do you better service than mere words! 130

But I have other greeting than mine own,

From no less man than Otho, who has sent

This ring as pledge of dearest amity;

'Tis chosen I hear from Hymen's jewel'ry,

And you will prize it, lady, I doubt not,

Beyond all pleasures past, and all to come.

To you great duke—

Conrad.

To me! What of me, ha?

Albert. What pleas'd your grace to say?

Conrad. Your message, sir!

Albert. You mean not this to me?

Conrad. Sister, this way;
For there shall be no "gentle Alberts" now, [Aside.
No "sweet Auranthes!" 141

[Exeunt CONRAD and AURANTHE.

Albert (solus). The duke is out of temper; if he knows
More than a brother of a sister ought,
I should not quarrel with his peevishness.
Auranthe—Heaven preserve her always fair!—
Is in the heady, proud, ambitious vein;
I bicker not with her,—bid her farewell!
She has taken flight from me, then let her soar,—
He is a fool who stands at pining gaze!
But for poor Ludolph, he is food for sorrow: 150
No levelling bluster of my licens'd thoughts,
No military swagger of my mind,
Can smother from myself the wrong I've done him,—
Without design, indeed,—yet it is so,—
And opiate for the conscience have I none! [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Court-yard of the Castle.

Martial Music. Enter, from the outer gate, OTHO, Nobles, Knights, and Attendants. The Soldiers halt at the gate, with Banners in sight.

Otho. Where is my noble herald?

Enter CONRAD, from the Castle, attended by two Knights and Servants. ALBERT following.

Well, hast told

Auranthe our intent imperial?

Lest our rent banners, too o' the sudden shown,
Should fright her silken casements, and dismay
Her household to our lack of entertainment.

A victory!

Conrad. God save illustrious Otho!

Otho. Aye, Conrad, it will pluck out all grey hairs;
It is the best physician for the spleen;
The courtliest inviter to a feast;

The subtlest excuser of small faults; 10
And a nice judge in the age and smack of wine.

Enter, from the Castle, AURANTHE, followed by Pages holding up her robes, and a train of Women. She kneels.

Hail my sweet hostess! I do thank the stars,
Or my good soldiers, or their ladies' eyes,
That, after such a merry battle fought,
I can, all safe in body and in soul,
Kiss your fair hand and lady fortune's too.
My ring! now, on my life, it doth rejoice
These lips to feel't on this soft ivory!
Keep it, my brightest daughter; it may prove
The little prologue to a line of kings. 20
I strove against thee and my hot-blood son,
Dull blockhead that I was to be so blind,
But now my sight is clear; forgive me, lady.

Auranthe. My lord, I was a vassal to your frown,
And now your favour makes me but more humble;
In wintry winds the simple snow is safe,
But fadeth at the greeting of the sun:
Unto thine anger I might well have spoken,
Taking on me a woman's privilege,
But this so sudden kindness makes me dumb. 30

Otho. What need of this? Enough, if you will be
A potent tutoress to my wayward boy,
And teach him, what it seems his nurse could not,
To say, for once, I thank you. Sigifred!

Albert. He has not yet return'd, my gracious liege.

Otho. What then! No tidings of my friendly Arab?

Conrad. None, mighty Otho.

[To one of his Knights, who goes out.]

Send forth instantly
An hundred horsemen from my honoured gates,
To scour the plains and search the cottages.
Cry a reward, to him who shall first bring 40
News of that vanished Arabian,
A full-heap'd helmet of the purest gold.

Otho. More thanks, good Conrad; for, except my son's,

The subtlest excuser of small faults; 10
And a nice judge in the age and smack of wine.

News of that vanished Arabian,
A full-heap'd helmet of the purest gold.

Otho. More thanks, good Conrad; for, except my son's,

There is no face I rather would behold
Than that same quick-eyed pagan's. By the saints,
This coming night of banquets must not light
Her dazzling torches; nor the music breathe
Smooth, without clashing cymbal, tones of peace
And in-door melodies; nor the ruddy wine
Ebb spouting to the lees; if I pledge not, 50
In my first cup, that Arab!

Albert. Mighty Monarch,
I wonder not this stranger's victor-deeds
So hang upon your spirit. Twice in the fight
It was my chance to meet his olive brow,
Triumphant in the enemy's shatter'd rhomb;
And, to say truth, in any Christian arm
I never saw such prowess.

Otho. Did you ever?
O, 'tis a noble boy!—tut!—what do I say?
I mean a triple Saladin, whose eyes,
When in the glorious scuffle they met mine, 60
Seem'd to say—"Sleep, old man, in safety sleep;
I am the victory!"

Conrad. Pity he's not here.
Otho. And my son too, pity he is not here.
Lady Auranthe, I would not make you blush,
But can you give a guess where Ludolph is?
Know you not of him?

Auranthe. Indeed, my liege, no secret—
Otho. Nay, nay, without more words, dost know of him?

Auranthe. I would I were so over-fortunate,
Both for his sake and mine, and to make glad
A father's ears with tidings of his son. 70

Otho. I see 'tis like to be a tedious day.
Were Theodore and Gonfred and the rest
Sent forth with my commands?

Albert. Aye, my lord.
Otho. And no news! No news! 'Faith! 'tis very strange

He thus avoids us. Lady, is't not strange?
Will he be truant to you too? It is a shame.

Conrad. Will't please your highness enter, and accept
The unworthy welcome of your servant's house?

Leaving your cares to one whose diligence
May in few hours make pleasures of them all. 80

Otho. Not so tedious, Conrad. No, no, no,—

I must see Ludolph or the—What's that shout!

Voices without. Huzza! huzza! Long live the Emperor!

Other Voices. Fall back! Away there!

Otho. Say, what noise is that?

[ALBERT advancing from the back of the Stage, whither he had hastened on hearing the cheers of the soldiery.

Albert. It is young Gersa, the Hungarian prince,
Pick'd like a red stag from the fallow herd
Of prisoners. Poor prince, forlorn he steps,
Slow, and demure, and proud in his despair.
If I may judge by his so tragic bearing,
His eye not downcast, and his folded arm, 90
He doth this moment wish himself asleep
Among his fallen captains on yon plains.

Enter GERSA, in chains, and guarded.

Otho. Well said, Sir Albert.

Gersa. Not a word of greeting,

No welcome to a princely visitor,
Most mighty Otho? Will not my great host
Vouchsafe a syllable, before he bids
His gentlemen conduct me with all care
To some securest lodging?—cold perhaps!

Otho. What mood is this? Hath fortune touch'd thy brain?

Gersa. O kings and princes of this fev'rous world,
What abject things, what mockeries must ye be, 101
What nerveless minions of safe palaces!
When here, a monarch, whose proud foot is used
To fallen princes' necks, as to his stirrup,
Must needs exclaim that I am mad forsooth,
Because I cannot flatter with bent knees
My conqueror!

Otho. Gersa, I think you wrong me:
I think I have a better fame abroad.

Gersa. I prythee mock me not with gentle speech,
But, as a favour, bid me from thy presence; 110

Let me no longer be the wondering food
Of all these eyes ; prythee command me hence !

Otho. Do not mistake me, Gersa. That you may not,
Come, fair Auranthe, try if your soft hands
Can manage those hard rivets to set free
So brave a prince and soldier.

Auranthe (sets him free). Welcome task !

Gersa. I am wound up in deep astonishment !
Thank you, fair lady. Otho ! emperor !
You rob me of myself ; my dignity
Is now your infant ; I am a weak child. 120

Otho. Give me your hand, and let this kindly grasp
Live in our memories.

Gersa. In mine it will.
I blush to think of my unchasten'd tongue ;
But I was haunted by the monstrous ghost
Of all our slain battalions. Sire, reflect,
And pardon you will grant, that, at this hour,
The bruised remnants of our stricken camp
Are huddling undistinguish'd my dear friends,
With common thousands, into shallow graves.

Otho. Enough, most noble Gersa. You are free
To cheer the brave remainder of your host 131
By your own healing presence, and that too,
Not as their leader merely, but their king ;
For, as I hear, the wily enemy,
Who eas'd the crownnet from your infant brows,
Bloody Taraxa, is among the dead.

Gersa. Then I retire, so generous Otho please,
Bearing with me a weight of benefits
Too heavy to be borne.

Otho. It is not so ;
Still understand me, King of Hungary, 140
Nor judge my open purposes awry.
Though I did hold you high in my esteem
For your self's sake, I do not personate
The stage-play emperor to entrap applause,
To set the silly sort o' the world agape,
And make the politic smile ; no, I have heard
How in the Council you condemn'd this war,
Urging the perfidy of broken faith,—
For that I am your friend.

Gersa.

If ever, sire,
You are mine enemy, I dare here swear
'Twill not be Gersa's fault. Otho, farewell!

150

Otho. Will you return, Prince, to our banqueting?
Gersa. As to my father's board I will return.

Otho. Conrad, with all due ceremony, give
The prince a regal escort to his camp;
Albert, go thou and bear him company.
Gersa. farewell!

Gersa.

All happiness attend you!

Otho. Return with what good speed you may; for soon
We must consult upon our terms of peace.

[Exeunt GERSA and ALBERT with others.

And thus a marble column do I build
To prop my empire's dome. Conrad, in thee
I have another stedfast one, to uphold
The portals of my state; and, for my own
Pre-eminence and safety, I will strive
To keep thy strength upon its pedestal.
For, without thee, this day I might have been
A show-monster about the streets of Prague,
In chains, as just now stood that noble prince:
And then to me no mercy had been shown,
For when the conquer'd lion is once dungeon'd, 170
Who lets him forth again? or dares to give
An old lion sugar-cates of mild reprieve?
Not to thine ear alone I make confession,
But to all here, as, by experience,
I know how the great basement of all power
Is frankness, and a true tongue to the world;
And how intriguing secrecy is proof
Of fear and weakness, and a hollow state.
Conrad, I owe thee much.

160

Conrad.

To kiss that hand,
My emperor, is ample recompense,
For a mere act of duty.

180

Otho.

Thou art wrong;
For what can any man on earth do more?
We will make trial of your house's welcome,
My bright Auranthe!

Conrad.

How is Friedburg honoured!

Enter ETHELBERT and six Monks.

Ethelbert. The benison of heaven on your head,
Imperial Otho!

Otho. Who stays me? Speak! Quick!

Ethelbert. Pause but one moment, mighty conqueror
Upon the threshold of this house of joy.

Otho. Pray, do not prose, good Ethelbert, but speak
What is your purpose. 190

Ethelbert. The restoration of some captive maids,
Devoted to Heaven's pious ministries,
Who, being driven from their religious cells,
And kept in thralldom by our enemy,
When late this province was a lawless spoil,
Still weep amid the wild Hungarian camp,
Though hemm'd around by thy victorious arms.

Otho. Demand the holy sisterhood in our name
From Gersa's tents. Farewell, old Ethelbert. 199

Ethelbert. The saints will bless you for this pious care.

Otho. Daughter, your hand; Ludolph's would fit it best.

Conrad. Ho! let the music sound!

[Music. ETHELBERT raises his hands, as in benediction of OTHO. Exeunt severally.
The scene closes on them.

SCENE III.—The Country, with the Castle in the distance.

Enter LUDOLPH and SIGIFRED.

Ludolph. You have my secret; let it not be breath'd.

Sigifred. Still give me leave to wonder that the Prince
Ludolph and the swift Arab are the same;
Still to rejoice that 'twas a German arm
Death doing in a turban'd masquerade.

Ludolph. The Emperor must not know it, Sigifred.

Sigifred. I prythee, why? What happier hour of time
Could thy pleas'd star point down upon from heaven
With silver index, bidding thee make peace?

Ludolph. Still it must not be known, good Sigifred;

The star may point oblique.

11

Sigifred. If Otho knew
His son to be that unknown Mussulman
After whose spurring heels he sent me forth,
With one of his well-pleas'd Olympian oaths,
The charters of man's greatness, at this hour
He would be watching round the castle walls,
And, like an anxious warder, strain his sight
For the first glimpse of such a son return'd—
Ludolph, that blast of the Hungarians,
That Saracenic meteor of the fight,
That silent fury, whose fell scymitar
Kept danger all aloof from Otho's head,
And left him space for wonder.

20

Ludolph. Say no more.
Not as a swordsman would I pardon claim,
But as a son. The bronz'd centurion,
Long toil'd in foreign wars, and whose high deeds
Are shaded in a forest of tall spears,
Known only to his troop, hath greater plea
Of favour with my sire than I can have.

29

Sigifred. My lord, forgive me that I cannot see
How this proud temper with clear reason squares.
What made you then, with such an anxious love,
Hover around that life, whose bitter days
You vext with bad revolt? Was't opium,
Or the mad-fumed wine? Nay, do not frown,
I rather would grieve with you than upbraid.

Ludolph. I do believe you. No, 'twas not to make
A father his son's debtor, or to heal
His deep heart-sickness for a rebel child.
'Twas done in memory of my boyish days,
Poor cancel for his kindness to my youth.
For all his calming of my childish griefs,
And all his smiles upon my merriment.
No, not a thousand foughten fields could sponge
Those days paternal from my memory,
Though now upon my head he heaps disgrace.

40

Sigifred. My Prince, you think too harshly—

Ludolph.

Can I so?

44-5 Ever will those bright days live in my heart
Though he still MS., cancelled.

Hath he not gall'd my spirit to the quick?
And with a sullen rigour obstinate
Pour'd out a phial of wrath upon my faults? 50
Hunted me as the Tartar does the boar,
Driven me to the very edge o' the world,
And almost put a price upon my head?

Sigifred. Remember how he spar'd the rebel lords.

Ludolph. Yes, yes, I know he hath a noble nature
That cannot trample on the fallen. But his
Is not the only proud heart in his realm.
He hath wrong'd me, and I have done him wrong;
He hath lov'd me, and I have shown him kindness;
We should be almost equal.

Sigifred. Yet, for all this, 60
I would you had appear'd among those lords,
And ta'en his favour.

Ludolph. Ha! till now I thought
My friend had held poor Ludolph's honour dear.
What! would you have me sue before his throne
And kiss the courtier's missal, its silk steps?
Or hug the golden housings of his steed,
Amid a camp, whose steeled swarms I dar'd
But yesterday? And, at the trumpet sound,
Bow like some unknown mercenary's flag,
And lick the soiled grass? No, no, my friend, 70
I would not, I, be pardon'd in the heap,
And bless indemnity with all that scum,—
Those men I mean, who on my shoulders propp'd
Their weak rebellion, winning me with lies,
And pitying forsooth my many wrongs;
Poor self-deceived wretches, who must think
Each one himself a king in embryo,
Because some dozen vassals cry'd—my lord!
Cowards, who never knew their little hearts,
Till hurried danger held the mirror up, 80
And then they own'd themselves without a blush,
Curling, like spaniels, round my father's feet.
Such things deserted me and are forgiven,
While I, least guilty, am an outcast still,

55 He hath a noble nature, well I know. MS., rejected.

65 missal] Bible MS., cancelled.

66 steed] horse MS., cancelled.

And will be, for I love such fair disgrace.

Sigifred. I know the clear truth; so would Otho see,
For he is just and noble. Fain would I
Be pleader for you—

Ludolph. He'll hear none of it;
You know his temper, hot, proud, obstinate;
Endanger not yourself so uselessly. 90
I will encounter his thwart spleen myself,
To-day, at the Duke Conrad's, where he keeps
His crowded state after the victory.
There will I be, a most unwelcome guest,
And parley with him, as a son should do,
Who doubly loathes a father's tyranny;
Tell him how feeble is that tyranny;
How the relationship of father and son
Is no more valid than a silken leash
Where lions tug adverse, if love grow not 100
From interchanged love through many years.
Aye, and those turreted Franconian walls,
Like to a jealous casket, hold my pearl—
My fair Auranthe! Yes, I will be there.

Sigifred. Be not so rash; wait till his wrath shall pass,
Until his royal spirit softly ebbs
Self-influenced; then, in his morning dreams
He will forgive thee, and awake in grief
To have not thy good morrow.

Ludolph. Yes, to-day
I must be there, while her young pulses beat 110
Among the new-plum'd minions of the war.
Have you seen her of late? No? Auranthe,
Franconia's fair sister, 'tis I mean.
She should be paler for my troublous days—
And there it is—my father's iron lips
Have sworn divorcement 'twixt me and my right.

Sigifred (aside). Auranthe! I had hop'd this whim had pass'd.

Ludolph. And, Sigifred, with all his love of justice,
When will he take that grandchild in his arms,
That, by my love I swear, shall soon be his? 120

101 From mutual benefits MS., rejected.

112-13 Auranthe 'tis I mean, the Duke's fair sister

MS., cancelled.

This reconciliation is impossible,
For see—but who are these?

Sigifred. They are messengers
From our great emperor; to you, I doubt not,
For couriers are abroad to seek you out.

Enter THEODORE and GONFRED.

Theodore. Seeing so many vigilant eyes explore
The province to invite your highness back
To your high dignities, we are too happy.

Gonfred. We have no eloquence to colour justly
The emperor's anxious wishes.

Ludolph.

Go. I follow you.

[Exeunt THEODORE and GONFRED.]

I play the prude: it is but venturing— 130
Why should he be so earnest? Come, my friend,
Let us to Friedburg castle.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An Ante-chamber in the Castle.

Enter LUDOLPH and SIGIFRED.

Ludolph. No more advices, no more cautioning:
I leave it all to fate—to any thing!
I cannot square my conduct to time, place,
Or circumstance; to me 'tis all a mist!

Sigifred. I say no more.

Ludolph. It seems I am to wait
Here in the ante-room;—that may be a trifle.
You see now how I dance attendance here,
Without that tyrant temper, you so blame,
Snapping the rein. You have medicin'd me
With good advices; and I here remain, 10
In this most honourable ante-room,
Your patient scholar.

Sigifred. Do not wrong me, Prince.
By Heavens, I'd rather kiss Duke Conrad's slipper,
When in the morning he doth yawn with pride,
Than see you humbled but a half-degree!

Truth is, the Emperor would fain dismiss
The nobles ere he sees you.

Enter GONFRED from the Council-room.

Ludolph. Well, sir! what?

Gonfred. Great honour to the Prince! The Emperor,
Hearing that his brave son had re-appeared,
Instant dismiss'd the Council from his sight, 20
As Jove fans off the clouds. Even now they pass.
[Exit.

Enter the Nobles from the Council-room. They cross the stage, bowing with respect to LUDOLPH, he frowning on them. CONRAD follows. Exit Nobles.

Ludolph. Not the discoloured poisons of a fen,
Which he who breathes feels warning of his death,
Could taste so nauseous to the bodily sense,
As these prodigious sycophants disgust
The soul's fine palate.

Conrad. Princely Ludolph, hail!
Welcome, thou younger sceptre to the realm!
Strength to thy virgin crownnet's golden buds,
That they, against the winter of thy sire,
May burst, and swell, and flourish round thy brows, 30
Maturing to a weighty diadem!
Yet be that hour far off; and may he live,
Who waits for thee, as the chapp'd earth for rain.
Set my life's star! I have lived long enough,
Since under my glad roof, propitiously,
Father and son each other re-possess.

Ludolph. Fine wording, Duke! but words could never yet
Forestall the fates; have you not learnt that yet?
Let me look well: your features are the same;
Your gait the same; your hair of the same shade; 40
As one I knew some passed weeks ago,
Who sung far different notes into mine ears.
I have mine own particular comments on 't;

24 Not the death watch tickling a Beldam's ear

MS., cancelled.

26 The relish of my soul's invisible tongue MS., rejected.

You have your own, perhaps.

Conrad. My gracious Prince,
All men may err. In truth I was deceived
In your great father's nature, as you were.
Had I known that of him I have since known,
And what you soon will learn, I would have turn'd
My sword to my own throat, rather than held
Its threatening edge against a good King's quiet: 50
Or with one word fever'd you, gentle Prince,
Who seem'd to me, as rugged times then went,
Indeed too much oppress'd. May I be bold
To tell the Emperor you will haste to him?

Ludolph. Your Dukedom's privilege will grant so much.

[Exit CONRAD.]

He's very close to Otho, a tight leech!
Your hand—I go. Ha! here the thunder comes
Sullen against the wind! If in two angry brows
My safety lies, then Sigifred, I'm safe.

Enter OTHO and CONRAD.

Otho. Will you make Titan play the lackey-page 60
To chattering pigmies? I would have you know
That such neglect of our high Majesty
Annuls all feel of kindred. What is son,—
Or friend,—or brother,—or all ties of blood,—
When the whole kingdom, centred in ourself,
Is rudely slighted? Who am I to wait?
By Peter's chair! I have upon my tongue
A word to fright the proudest spirit here!—
Death!—and slow tortures to the hardy fool,
Who dares take such large charter from our smiles! 70
Conrad, we would be private. Sigifred!
Off! And none pass this way on pain of death!

[Exeunt CONRAD and SIGIFRED.]

Ludolph. This was but half expected, my good sire,
Yet I am griev'd at it, to the full height,
As though my hopes of favour had been whole.

Otho. How you indulge yourself! What can you hope for?

Ludolph. Nothing, my liege; I have to hope for nothing.

I come to greet you as a loving son,
And then depart, if I may be so free,
Seeing that blood of yours in my warm veins 80
Has not yet mitigated into milk.

Otho. What would you, sir?

Ludolph. A lenient banishment;
So please you let me unmolested pass
This Conrad's gates, to the wide air again.
I want no more. A rebel wants no more.

Otho. And shall I let a rebel loose again
To muster kites and eagles 'gainst my head?
No, obstinate boy, you shall be kept cag'd up,
Serv'd with harsh food, with scum for Sunday-drink.

Ludolph. Indeed!

Otho. And chains too heavy for your life:
I'll choose a gaoler, whose swart monstrous face 91
Shall be a hell to look upon, and she—

Ludolph. Ha!

Otho. Shall be your fair Auranthe.

Ludolph. Amaze! Amaze!

Otho. To-day you marry her.

Ludolph. This is a sharp jest!

Otho. No. None at all. When have I said a lie?

Ludolph. If I sleep not, I am a waking wretch.

Otho. Not a word more. Let me embrace my child.

Ludolph. I dare not. 'Twould pollute so good a father!

O heavy crime! that your son's blinded eyes
Could not see all his parent's love aright, 100
As now I see it. Be not kind to me—
Punish me not with favour.

Otho. Are you sure,

Ludolph. you have no saving plea in store?

Ludolph. My father, none!

Otho. Then you astonish me.

Ludolph. No, I have no plea. Disobedience,
Rebellion, obstinacy, blasphemy,

89 Serv'd with harsh food, with puddle for your drink
MS., rejected.

Are all my counsellors. If they can make
My crooked deeds show good and plausible,
Then grant me loving pardon, but not else,
Good Gods! not else, in any way, my liege! 110

Otho. You are a most perplexing, noble boy.

Ludolph. You not less a perplexing noble father.

Otho. Well, you shall have free passport through the gates.

Farewell!

Ludolph. Farewell! and by these tears believe,
And still remember, I repent in pain
All my misdeeds!

Otho. Ludolph, I will! I will!

But, Ludolph, ere you go, I would enquire
If you, in all your wandering, ever met
A certain Arab haunting in these parts.

Ludolph. No, my good lord, I cannot say I did. 120

Otho. Make not your father blind before his time;
Nor let these arms paternal hunger more
For an embrace, to dull the appetite
Of my great love for thee, my supreme child!
Come close, and let me breathe into thine ear.
I knew you through disguise. You are the Arab!
You can't deny it. [Embracing him.]

Ludolph. Happiest of days!

Otho. We'll make it so.

Ludolph. 'Stead of one fatted calf
Ten hecatombs shall bellow out their last,
Smote 'twixt the horns by the death-stunning mace 130
Of Mars, and all the soldiery shall feast
Nobly as Nimrod's masons, when the towers
Of Nineveh new kiss'd the parted clouds!

Otho. Large as a God speak out, where all is thine.

Ludolph. Aye, father, but the fire in my sad breast
Is quench'd with inward tears! I must rejoice
For you, whose wings so shadow over me
In tender victory, but for myself
I still must mourn. The fair Auranthe mine!
Too great a boon! I prythee let me ask 140
What more than I know of could so have changed
Your purpose touching her?

Otho. At a word, this:

In no deed did you give me more offence
 Than your rejection of Erminia.
 To my appalling, I saw too good proof
 Of your keen-eyed suspicion,—she is naught!

Ludolph. You are convinc'd?

Otho. Aye, spite of her sweet looks.
 O, that my brother's daughter should so fall!
 Her fame has pass'd into the grosser lips
 Of soldiers in their cups.

Ludolph. 'Tis very sad.

Otho. No more of her. Auranthe—Ludolph, come! 150
 This marriage be the bond of endless peace! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Entrance of GERSA's Tent in the Hungarian Camp.

Enter ERMINIA.

Erminia. Where! where! where shall I find a messenger?

A trusty soul? A good man in the camp?
 Shall I go myself? Monstrous wickedness!
 O cursed Conrad! devilish Auranthe!
 Here is proof palpable as the bright sun!
 O for a voice to reach the Emperor's ears!

[Shouts in the Camp.]

Enter an HUNGARIAN CAPTAIN.

Captain. Fair prisoner, hear you those joyous shouts?
 The king—aye, now our king,—but still your slave,
 Young Gersa, from a short captivity
 Has just return'd. He bids me say, bright Dame, 10
 That even the homage of his ranged chiefs
 Cures not his keen impatience to behold
 Such beauty once again. What ails you, lady?

Erminia. Say, is not that a German, yonder? There!

Captain. Methinks by his stout bearing he should be—
 Yes—'tis one Albert; a brave German knight,
 And much in the emperor's favour.

Erminia. I would fain
 Enquire of friends and kinsfolk; how they fared
 In these rough times. Brave soldier, as you pass

To royal Gersa with my humble thanks, 20
Will you send yonder knight to me?

Captain. I will. [Exit.

Erminia. Yes, he was ever known to be a man
Frank, open, generous; Albert I may trust.
O proof! proof! proof! Albert's an honest man;
Not Ethelbert the monk, if he were here,
Would I hold more trustworthy. Now!

Enter ALBERT.

Albert. Good Gods!

Lady Erminia! are you prisoner
In this beleaguer'd camp? Or are you here
Of your own will? You pleas'd to send for me.
By Venus, 'tis a pity I knew not 30
Your plight before, and, by her Son, I swear
To do you every service you can ask.
What would the fairest—?

Erminia. Albert, will you swear?

Albert. I have. Well?

Erminia. Albert, you have fame to lose.
If men, in court and camp, lie not outright,
You should be, from a thousand, chosen forth
To do an honest deed. Shall I confide—?

Albert. Aye, anything to me, fair creature. Do;
Dictate my task. Sweet woman,—

Erminia. Truce with that.
You understand me not; and, in your speech, 40
I see how far the slander is abroad.

Without proof could you think me innocent?

Albert. Lady, I should rejoice to know you so.

Erminia. If you have any pity for a maid,
Suffering a daily death from evil tongues;
Any compassion for that Emperor's niece,
Who, for your bright sword and clear honesty,
Lifted you from the crowd of common men
Into the lap of honour;—save me, knight!

Albert. How? Make it clear; if it be possible, 50
I, by the banner of Saint Maurice, swear
To right you.

Erminia. Possible!—Easy. O my heart!
This letter's not so soil'd but you may read it;—

Possible! There—that letter! Read—read it.

[Gives him a letter.

Albert (reading). “To the Duke Conrad.—Forget the threat you made at parting, and I will forget to send the Emperor letters and papers of your’s I have become possessed of. His life is no trifle to me; his death you shall find none to yourself.” (Speaks to himself:) ‘Tis me—my life that’s pleaded for! (Reads.) “He, for his own sake, will be dumb as the grave. Erminia has my shame fix’d upon her, sure as a wen. We are safe. AURANTHE.”

A she-devil! A dragon! I her imp!
Fire of Hell! Auranthe—lewd demon!
Where got you this? Where? When?

Erminia. I found it in the tent, among some spoils
Which, being noble, fell to Gersa’s lot.
Come in, and see. [They go in and return.

Albert. Villainy! Villainy!
Conrad’s sword, his corslet, and his helm, 70
And his letter. Caitiff, he shall feel—

Erminia. I see you are thunderstruck. Haste, haste away!

Albert. O I am tortured by this villainy.

Erminia. You needs must be. Carry it swift to Otho;
Tell him, moreover, I am prisoner
Here in this camp, where all the sisterhood,
Forc’d from their quiet cells, are parcell’d out
For slaves among these Huns. Away! Away!

Albert. I am gone.

Erminia. Swift be your steed! Within this hour
The Emperor will see it.

Albert. Ere I sleep: 80
That I can swear. [Hurries out.

Gersa (without). Brave captains! thanks. Enough
Of loyal homage now!

Enter GERSA.

Erminia. Hail, royal Hun!

Gersa. What means this, fair one? Why in such alarm?

Who was it hurried by me so distract?
It seem’d you were in deep discourse together;

Your doctrine has not been so harsh to him
As to my poor deserts. Come, come, be plain.
I am no jealous fool to kill you both,
Or, for such trifles, rob the adorned world
Of such a beauteous vestal.

Erminia. I grieve, my Lord, 90
To hear you condescend to ribald phrase.

Gersa. This is too much! Hearken, my lady pure!

Erminia. Silence! and hear the magic of a name—
Erminia! I am she,—the Emperor's niece!
Prais'd be the Heavens, I now dare own myself!

Gersa. Erminia! Indeed! I've heard of her.

Prythee, fair lady, what chance brought you here?

Erminia. Ask your own soldiers.

Gersa. And you dare own your name.
For loveliness you may—and for the rest
My vein is not censorious.

Erminia. Alas! poor me! 100
'Tis false indeed.

Gersa. Indeed you are too fair:
The swan, soft leaning on her fledgy breast,
When to the stream she launches, looks not back
With such a tender grace; nor are her wings
So white as your soul is, if that but be
Twin-picture to your face. Erminia!
To-day, for the first day, I am a king,
Yet would I give my unworn crown away
To know you spotless.

Erminia. Trust me one day more,
Generously, without more certain guarantee, 110
Than this poor face you deign to praise so much;
After that, say and do whate'er you please.
If I have any knowledge of you, sir,
I think, nay I am sure, you will grieve much
To hear my story. O be gentle to me,
For I am sick and faint with many wrongs,

96-100 Then you dare do no more than women dare
Who dare the devil on his 'vantage ground
Yet if some strange report I heard hold good
You are in truth no coward. Ha! Erminia!

MS., last two words cancelled.

Tir'd out, and weary-worn with contumelies.
Gersa. Poor lady!

Enter ETHELBERT.

Erminia. Gentle Prince, 'tis false indeed.
 Good morrow, holy father! I have had
 Your prayers, though I look'd for you in vain. 120
Ethelbert. Blessings upon you, daughter! Sure you look

Too cheerful for these foul pernicious days.
 Young man, you heard this virgin say 'twas false, —
 'Tis false, I say. What! can you not employ
 Your temper elsewhere, 'mong these burly tents,
 But you must taunt this dove, for she hath lost
 The Eagle Otho to beat off assault?
 Fie! fie! But I will be her guard myself;
 In the Emperor's name. I here demand of you
 Herself, and all her sisterhood. She false! 130
Gersa. Peace! peace, old man! I cannot think she is.
Ethelbert. Whom I have known from her first infancy,

Baptiz'd her in the bosom of the Church,
 Watch'd her, as anxious husbandmen the grain,
 From the first shoot till the unripe mid-May,
 Then to the tender ear of her June days,
 Which, lifting sweet abroad its timid green,
 Is blighted by the touch of calumny;
 You cannot credit such a monstrous tale.
Gersa. I cannot. Take her. Fair Erminia, 140
 I follow you to Friedburg,—is't not so?
Erminia. Aye, so we purpose.

Ethelbert. Daughter, do you so?
 How's this? I marvel! Yet you look not mad.
Erminia. I have good news to tell you, Ethelbert.
Gersa. Ho! ho, there! Guards!

Your blessing, father! Sweet Erminia,
 Believe me, I am well high sure—

Erminia. Farewell!
 Short time will show.

Yes, father Ethelbert,
 [Enter Chiefs.
Ethelbert. I have news precious as we pass along.
Ethelbert. Dear daughter, you shall guide me. 149
Erminia. To no ill.

Gersa. Command an escort to the Friedburg lines.

[Exeunt Chiefs.]

Pray let me lead. Fair lady, forget not

Gersa, how he believ'd you innocent.

I follow you to Friedburg with all speed. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Country.

Enter ALBERT.

Albert. O that the earth were empty, as when Cain
Had no perplexity to hide his head!
Or that the sword of some brave enemy
Had put a sudden stop to my hot breath,
And hurl'd me down the illimitable gulph
Of times past, unremember'd! Better so
Than thus fast-limed in a cursed snare,
The white limbs of a wanton. This the end
Of an aspiring life! My boyhood past
In feud with wolves and bears, when no eye saw
The solitary warfare, fought for love 11
Of honour 'mid the growling wilderness.
My sturdier youth, maturing to the sword,
Won by the syren-trumpets, and the ring
Of shields upon the pavement, when bright-mail'd
Henry the Fowler pass'd the streets of Prague.
Was't to this end I louted and became
The menial of Mars, and held a spear
Sway'd by command, as corn is by the wind?
Is it for this, I now am lifted up 20
By Europe's throned Emperor, to see
My honour be my executioner,—
My love of fame, my prided honesty
Put to the torture for confessional?
Then the damn'd crime of blurring to the world
A woman's secret!—Though a fiend she be,
Too tender of my ignominious life;
But then to wrong the generous Emperor
In such a searching point, were to give up
My soul for foot-ball at Hell's holiday! 20

I must confess,—and cut my throat,—to-day?
To-morrow? Ho! some wine!

Enter SIGIFRED.

Sigifred.

A fine humour—

Albert. Who goes there? Count Sigifred? Ha! Ha!

Sigifred. What, man, do you mistake the hollow sky
For a throng'd tavern,—and these stubbed trees
For old serge hangings,—me, your humble friend,
For a poor waiter? Why, man, how you stare!
What gipsies have you been carousing with?
No, no more wine; methinks you've had enough.

Albert. You well may laugh and banter. What a fool
An injury may make of a staid man! 41
You shall know all anon.

Sigifred.

Some tavern brawl?

Albert. 'Twas with some people out of common reach;
Revenge is difficult.

Sigifred.

I am your friend;

We meet again to-day, and can confer
Upon it. For the present I'm in haste.

Albert. Whither?

Sigifred.

To fetch King Gersa to the feast.

The Emperor on this marriage is so hot,

Pray Heaven it end not in apoplexy!

The very porters, as I pass'd the doors, 50
Heard his loud laugh, and answer'd in full choir.

I marvel, Albert, you delay so long

From those bright revelries; go, show yourself,
You may be made a duke.

Albert.

Aye, very like:

Pray, what day has his Highness fix'd upon?

Sigifred. For what?

Albert.

The marriage. What else can I mean?

Sigifred. To-day! O, I forgot, you could not know;
The news is scarce a minute old with me.

Albert. Married to-day! To-day! You did not say so?

Sigifred. Now, while I speak to you, their comely heads

Are bow'd before the mitre. 60

Albert.

O! monstrous!

Sigifred. What is this?

Albert. Nothing, Sigifred. Farewell!
We'll meet upon our subject. Farewell, count!

[Exit.

Sigifred. Is this clear-headed Albert? He brain-turn'd!
'Tis as portentous as a meteor.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—An Apartment in the Castle.

Enter, as from the Marriage, OTHO, LUDOLPH, AURANTHE, CONRAD, Nobles, Knights, Ladies, &c. Music.

Otho. Now, Ludolph! Now, Auranthe! Daughter fair!
What can I find to grace your nuptial day
More than my love, and these wide realms in fee?

Ludolph. I have too much.

Auranthe.

And I, my liege, by far.

Ludolph. Auranthe! I have! O, my bride, my love!
Not all the gaze upon us can restrain
My eyes, too long poor exiles from thy face,
From adoration, and my foolish tongue
From uttering soft responses to the love
I see in thy mute beauty beaming forth! 10
Fair creature, bless me with a single word!
All mine!

Auranthe. Spare, spare me, my Lord; I swoon else.

Ludolph. Soft beauty! by to-morrow I should die,
Wert thou not mine.

[They talk apart.

First Lady. How deep she has bewitch'd him!

First Knight. Ask you for her recipe for love philtres.

Second Lady. They hold the Emperor in admiration.

Otho. If ever king was happy, that am I!
What are the cities yond the Alps to me,
The provinces about the Danube's mouth,
The promise of fair soil beyond the Rhone; 20
Or routing out of Hyperborean hordes,
To these fair children, stars of a new age?
Unless perchance I might rejoice to win

64 Is] To Houghton: Is is conjectural.

64-5 Farewell and nothing—but this nothing is Something I'll take my oath on—He is mad.

Exit Sigifred. MS.

9-10 From uttering soft responses to thy mute
But eloquent Beauty. MS., rejected.

This little ball of earth, and chuck it them
To play with !

Auranthe. Nay, my Lord, I do not know.

Ludolph. Let me not famish.

Otho (to Conrad).

Good Franconia,

You heard what oath I swear, as the sun rose,
That unless Heaven would send me back my son,
My Arab,—no soft music should enrich
The cool wine, kiss'd off with a soldier's smack ; 30
Now all my empire, barter'd for one feast,
Seems poverty.

Conrad. Upon the neighbour-plain
The heralds have prepar'd a royal lists ;
Your knights, found war-proof in the bloody field,
Speed to the game.

Otho. Well, Ludolph, what say you ?

Ludolph. My lord !

Otho. A tourney ?

Conrad.

Or, if 't please you best—

Ludolph. I want no more !

First Lady.

He soars !

Second Lady.

Past all reason.

Ludolph. Though heaven's choir
Should in a vast circumference descend
And sing for my delight, I'd stop my ears ! 40
Though bright Apollo's car stood burning here,
And he put out an arm to bid me mount,
His touch an immortality, not I !

This earth, this palace, this room, Auranthe !

Otho. This is a little painful ; just too much.

Conrad, if he flames longer in this wise,

I shall believe in wizard-woven loves

And old romances ; but I'll break the spell.

Ludolph !

Conrad. He will be calm, anon.

Ludolph.

You call'd ?

Yes, yes, yes, I offend. You must forgive me ; 50

Not being quite recover'd from the stun

Of your large bounties. A tourney, is it not ?

[A senet heard faintly.]

Conrad. The trumpets reach us.

Ethelbert (without).
Detain us!

On your peril, sirs,

First Voice (without). Let not the abbot pass.

Second Voice (without). No,
On your lives!

First Voice (without). Holy father, you must not.

Ethelbert (without). Otho!

Otho.

Who calls on Otho?

Ethelbert (without).

Ethelbert!

Otho. Let him come in.

[Enter ETHELBERT leading in ERMINIA.

Thou cursed abbot, why
Hast brought pollution to our holy rites?

Hast thou no fear of hangman, or the faggot? 59

Ludolph. What portent—what strange prodigy is this?

Conrad. Away!

Ethelbert. You, Duke?

Erminia.

Albert has surely fail'd me!

Look at the Emperor's brow upon me bent!

Ethelbert. A sad delay!

Conrad.

Away, thou guilty thing!

Ethelbert. You again, Duke? Justice, most mighty

Otho!

You—go to your sister there and plot again,
A quick plot, swift as thought to save your heads;
For lo! the toils are spread around your den,
The world is all agape to see dragg'd forth
Two ugly monsters.

Ludolph. What means he, my lord?

Conrad. I cannot guess.

Ethelbert.

Best ask your lady sister, 70

Whether the riddle puzzles her beyond

The power of utterance.

Conrad.

Foul barbarian, cease;

The Princess faints!

Ludolph.

Stab him! O, sweetest wife!

[Attendants bear off AURANTHE.

Erminia. Alas!

Ethelbert.

Your wife?

Ludolph.

Aye, Satan! does that yerk ye?

59 Mad Churchman wouldst thou be impal'd alive? MS.

Ethelbert. Wife! so soon!

Ludolph. Aye, wife! Oh, impudence!
 Thou bitter mischief! Venomous mad priest!
 How dar'st thou lift those beetle brows at me?
 Me—the prince Ludolph, in this presence here,
 Upon my marriage-day, and scandalize
 My joys with such opprobrious surprise? 80
 Wife! Why dost linger on that syllable,
 As if it were some demon's name pronounc'd
 To summon harmful lightning, and make roar
 The sleepy thunder? Hast no sense of fear?
 No ounce of man in thy mortality?

Tremble! for, at my nod, the sharpen'd axe
 Will make thy bold tongue quiver to the roots,
 Those grey lids wink, and thou not know it more!

Ethelbert. O, poor deceived Prince! I pity thee!
 Great Otho! I claim justice—

Ludolph. Thou shalt have 't!
 Thine arms from forth a pulpit of hot fire 91
 Shall sprawl distracted! O that that dull cowl
 Were some most sensitive portion of thy life,
 That I might give it to my hounds to tear!
 Thy girdle some fine zealous-pained nerve
 To girth my saddle! And those devil's beads
 Each one a life, that I might, every day,
 Crush one with Vulcan's hammer!

Otho. Peace, my son;
 You far outstrip my spleen in this affair.
 Let us be calm, and hear the abbot's plea 100
 For this intrusion.

Ludolph. I am silent, sire.

Otho. Conrad, see all depart not wanted here.

[Exeunt Knights, Ladies, &c.]

Ludolph, be calm. Ethelbert, peace awhile.
 This mystery demands an audience
 Of a just judge, and that will Otho be.

Ludolph. Why has he time to breathe another word?

Otho. Ludolph, old Ethelbert, be sure, comes not
 To beard us for no cause; he's not the man

To cry himself up an ambassador
Without credentials.

Ludolph. I'll chain up myself. 110

Otho. Old Abbot, stand here forth. Lady Erminia,
Sit. And now, Abbot! what have you to say?
Our ear is open. First we here denounce
Hard penalties against thee, if't be found
The cause for which you have disturb'd us here,
Making our bright hours muddy, be a thing
Of little moment.

Ethelbert. See this innocent!
Otho! thou father of the people call'd,
Is her life nothing? Her fair honour nothing?
Her tears from matins until even-song 120
Nothing? Her burst heart nothing? Emperor!
Is this your gentle niece—the simplest flower
Of the world's herbal—this fair lilly blanch'd
Still with the dews of piety, this meek lady
Here sitting like an angel newly-shent,
Who veils its snowy wings and grows all pale,—
Is she nothing?

Otho. What more to the purpose, abbot?

Ludolph. Whither is he winding?

Conrad. No clue yet!

Ethelbert. You have heard, my Liege, and so, no doubt, all here,

Foul, poisonous, malignant whisperings; 130
Nay open speech, rude mockery grown common,
Against the spotless nature and clear fame
Of the princess Erminia, your niece.
I have intruded here thus suddenly,
Because I hold those base weeds, with tight hand,
Which now disfigure her fair growing stem,
Waiting but for your sign to pull them up
By the dark roots, and leave her palpable,
To all men's sight, a Lady, innocent.
The ignominy of that whisper'd tale 140
About a midnight gallant, seen to climb
A window to her chamber neighbour'd near,
I will from her turn off, and put the load

On the right shoulders; on that wretch's head,
Who, by close stratagems, did save herself,
Chiefly by shifting to this lady's room
A rope-ladder for false witness.

Ludolph. Most atrocious!

Otho. Ethelbert, proceed.

Ethelbert. With sad lips I shall:

For, in the healing of one wound, I fear
To make a greater. His young highness here 150
To-day was married.

Ludolph. Good.

Ethelbert. Would it were good!

Yet why do I delay to spread abroad
The names of those two vipers, from whose jaws
A deadly breath went forth to taint and blast
This guileless lady?

Otho. Abbot, speak their names.

Ethelbert. A minute first. It cannot be—but may
I ask, great judge, if you to-day have put
A letter by unread?

Otho. Does't end in this?

Conrad. Out with their names!

Ethelbert. Bold sinner, say you so?

Ludolph. Out, tedious monk!

Otho. Confess, or by the wheel—

Ethelbert. My evidence cannot be far away; 161
And, though it never come, be on my head
The crime of passing an attain upon
The slanderers of this virgin.

Ludolph. Speak aloud!

Ethelbert. Auranthe, and her brother there.

Conrad. Amaze!

Ludolph. Throw them from the windows!

Otho. Do what you will!

Ludolph. What shall I do with them?

Something of quick dispatch, for should she hear,
My soft Auranthe, her sweet mercy would
Prevail against my fury. Damned priest! 170
What swift death wilt thou die? As to the lady
I touch her not.

154 A poisonous breath went forth to blast and taint
MS., rejected.

Ethelbert. Illustrious Otho, stay!
An ample store of misery thou hast,
Choak not the granary of thy noble mind
With more bad bitter grain, too difficult
A cud for the repentance of a man
Grey-growing. To thee only I appeal,
Not to thy noble son, whose yeasting youth
Will clear itself, and crystal turn again.
A young man's heart, by Heaven's blessing, is 180
A wide world, where a thousand new-born hopes
Empurple fresh the melancholy blood:
But an old man's is narrow, tenantless
Of hopes, and stuff'd with many memories,
Which, being pleasant, ease the heavy pulse—
Painful, clog up and stagnate. Weigh this matter
Even as a miser balances his coin;
And, in the name of mercy, give command
That your knight Albert be brought here before you.
He will expound this riddle; he will show 190
A noon-day proof of bad Auranthe's guilt.
Otho. Let Albert straight be summon'd.

[Exit one of the Nobles.

Ludolph. Impossible!
I cannot doubt—I will not—no—to doubt
Is to be ashes!—wither'd up to death!

Otho. My gentle Ludolph, harbour not a fear;
You do yourself much wrong.

Ludolph. O, wretched dolt!
Now, when my foot is almost on thy neck,
Wilt thou infuriate me? Proof! Thou fool!
Why wilt thou teaze impossibility
With such a thick-skull'd persevering suit? 200
Fanatic obstinacy! Prodigy!
Monster of folly! Ghost of a turn'd brain!
You puzzle me,—you haunt me,—when I dream
Of you my brain will split! Bald sorcerer!
Juggler! May I come near you? On my soul
I know not whether to pity, curse, or laugh.

Enter ALBERT, and the Nobleman.

Here, Albert, this old phantom wants a proof!
Give him his proof! A camel's load of proofs!

Otho. Albert, I speak to you as to a man
Whose words once utter'd pass like current gold ; 210
And therefore fit to calmly put a close
To this brief tempest. Do you stand possess'd
Of any proof against the honourableness
Of Lady Auranthe, our new-spoused daughter ?

Albert. You chill me with astonishment. How 's this ?

My Liege, what proof should I have 'gainst a fame
Impossible of slur ? [Otho rises.

Erminia. O wickedness !

Ethelbert. Deluded monarch, 'tis a cruel lie.

Otho. Peace, rebel-priest !

Conrad. Insult beyond credence !

Erminia. Almost a dream !

Ludolph. We have awaken'd from 220

A foolish dream that from my brow hath wrung

A wrathful dew. O folly ! why did I

So act the lion with this silly gnat ?

Let them depart. Lady Erminia !

I ever griev'd for you, as who did not ?

But now you have, with such a brazen front,

So most maliciously, so madly striven

To dazzle the soft moon, when tenderest clouds

Should be unloop'd around to curtain her ;

I leave you to the desert of the world 220

Almost with pleasure. Let them be set free

For me ! I take no personal revenge

More than against a nightmare, which a man

Forgets in the new dawn. [Exit LUDOLPH.

Otho. Still in extremes ! No, they must not be loose.

Ethelbert. Albert, I must suspect thee of a crime
So fiendish—

Otho. Fear'st thou not my fury, monk ?

Conrad, be they in your sure custody

Till we determine some fit punishment.

It is so mad a deed, I must reflect 240

And question them in private ; for perhaps,

By patient scrutiny, we may discover

220 Then we are quite awakend from this dream

MS., cancelled.

Whether they merit death, or should be placed
In care of the physicians.

[Exeunt Otho and Nobles, ALBERT following.

Conrad. My guards, ho !

Erminia. Albert, wilt thou follow there ?

Wilt thou creep dastardly behind his back,
And slink away from a weak woman's eye ?
Turn, thou court-Janus ! thou forget'st thyself ;
Here is the Duke, waiting with open arms,

[Enter Guards.

To thank thee ; here congratulate each other ; 250
Wring hands ; embrace ; and swear how lucky 'twas
That I, by happy chance, hit the right man
Of all the world to trust in.

Albert. Trust ! to me !

Conrad (aside). He is the sole one in this mystery.

Erminia. Well, I give up, and save my prayers for Heaven !

You, who could do this deed, would ne'er relent,
Though, at my words, the hollow prison-vaults
Would groan for pity.

Conrad. Manacle them both !

Elhelbert. I know it—it must be—I see it all !

Albert, thou art the minion !

Erminia. Ah ! too plain— 260

Conrad. Silence ! Gag up their mouths ! I cannot bear
More of this brawling. That the Emperor
Had plac'd you in some other custody !
Bring them away. [Exeunt all but ALBERT.

Albert. Though my name perish from the book of honour,

Almost before the recent ink is dry,
And be no more remember'd after death,
Than any drummer's in the muster-roll ;
Yet shall I season high my sudden fall
With triumph o'er that evil-witted duke !
He shall feel what it is to have the hand
Of a man drowning, on his hateful throat.

270

272 Here the manuscript has the two following lines :

Erminia ! dream tonight of better days

Tomorrow makes them real—Once more good morrow.

Enter GERSA and SIGIFRED.

Gersa. What discord is at ferment in this house?

Sigifred. We are without conjecture; not a soul
We met could answer any certainty.

Gersa. Young Ludclph, like a fiery arrow, shot
By us.

Sigifred. The Emperor, with cross'd arms, in thought.

Gersa. In one room music, in another sadness,
Perplexity every where!

Albert. A trifle more!

Follow; your presences will much avail 280
To tune our jarred spirits. I'll explain. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—AURANTHE'S Apartment.

AURANTHE and CONRAD discovered.

Conrad. Well, well, I know what ugly jeopardy
We are cag'd in; you need not pester that
Into my ears. Prythee, let me be spared
A foolish tongue, that I may bethink me
Of remedies with some deliberation.
You cannot doubt but 'tis in Albert's power
To crush or save us?

Auranthe. No, I cannot doubt.
He has, assure yourself, by some strange means,
My secret; which I ever hid from him,
Knowing his mawkish honesty.

Conrad. Curs'd slave! 10

Auranthe. Ay, I could almost curse him now myself.
Wretched impediment! Evil genius!
A glue upon my wings, that cannot spread.
When they should span the provinces! A snake,
A scorpion, sprawling on the first gold step,
Conducting to the throne, high canopied.

Conrad. You would not hear my council, when his life
Might have been trodden out, all sure and hush'd;
Now the dull animal forsooth must be
Intreated, managed! When can you contrive 20
The interview he demands?

Aurantie. As speedily
It must be done as my brib'd woman can
Unseen conduct him to me; but I fear
'Twill be impossible, while the broad day
Comes through the panes with persecuting glare.
Methinks, if it now were night I could intrigue
With darkness, bring the stars to second me,
And settle all this trouble.

Conrad. Nonsense! Child!
See him immediately; why not now?

Aurantie. Do you forget that even the senseless door-posts 30
Are on the watch and gape through all the house?

How many whisperers there are about,
Hungry for evidence to ruin me;
Men I have spurn'd, and women I have taunted?
Besides, the foolish prince sends, minute whiles,
His pages—so they tell me—to enquire
After my health, entreating, if I please,
To see me.

Conrad. Well, suppose this Albert here;
What is your power with him?

Aurantie. He should be 40
My echo, my taught parrot! but I fear
He will be cur enough to bark at me;
Have his own say; read me some silly creed
'Bout shame and pity.

Conrad. What will you do then?

Aurantie. What I shall do, I know not: what I would

Cannot be done; for see, this chamber-floor
Will not yield to the pick-axe and the spade,—
Here is no quiet depth of hollow ground.

Conrad. Sister, you have grown sensible and wise,
Seconding, ere I speak it, what is now,
I hope, resolv'd between us.

Aurantie. Say, what is 't? 50

Conrad. You need not be his sexton too: a man
May carry that with him shall make him die
Elsewhere,—give that to him; pretend the while
You will tomorrow succumb to his wishes,
Be what they may, and send him from the Castle

On some fool's errand ; let his latest groan
Frighten the wolves !

Auranthe. Alas ! he must not die !

Conrad. Would you were both hears'd up in stifling lead !

Detested—

Auranthe. Conrad, hold ! I would not bear
The little thunder of your fretful tongue, 60
Tho' I alone were taken in these toils,
And you could free me ; but remember, sir,
You live alone in my security :
So keep your wits at work, for your own sake,
Not mine, and be more mannerly.

Conrad. Thou wasp !
If my domains were emptied of these folk,
And I had thee to starve—

Auranthe. O, marvellous !
But Conrad, now be gone ; the Host is look'd for ;
Cringe to the Emperor, entertain the Lords,
And, do ye mind, above all things, proclaim 70
My sickness, with a brother's sadden'd eye,
Condoling with Prince Ludolph. In fit time
Return to me.

Conrad. I leave you to your thoughts. [Exit.

Auranthe (sola). Down, down, proud temper ! down,
Auranthe's pride !

Why do I anger him when I should kneel ?
Conrad ! Albert ! help ! help ! What can I do ?
O wretched woman ! lost, wreck'd, swallow'd up,
Accursed, blasted ! O, thou golden Crown,
Orbing along the serene firmament
Of a wide empire, like a glowing moon ; 80
And thou, bright sceptre ! lustrous in my eyes,—
There—as the fabled fair Hesperian tree,
Bearing a fruit more precious ! graceful thing,
Delicate, godlike, magic ! must I leave
Thee to melt in the visionary air.
Ere, by one grasp, this common hand is made
Imperial ? I do not know the time
When I have wept for sorrow ; but methinks
I could now sit upon the ground, and shed
Tears, tears of misery. O, the heavy day ! 80

How shall I bear my life till Albert comes?
Ludolph! Erminia! Proofs! O heavy day!
Bring me some mourning weeds, that I may tire
Myself, as fits one wailing her own death:
Cut off these curls, and brand this lilly hand,
And throw these jewels from my loathing sight,—
Fetch me a missal, and a string of beads,—
A cup of bitter'd water, and a crust,—
I will confess, O holy Abbot!—How!
What is this? Auranthe! thou fool, dolt, 100
Whimpering idiot! up! up! act and quell!
I am safe! Coward! why am I in fear?
Albert! he cannot stickle, chew the cud
In such a fine extreme,—impossible!
Who knocks? [Goes to the Door, listens, and opens it.]

Enter ALBERT.

Albert, I have been waiting for you here
With such an aching heart, such swooning throbs
On my poor brain, such cruel—cruel sorrow,
That I should claim your pity! Art not well?

Albert. Yes, lady, well.

Auranthe. You look not so, alas! 110
But pale, as if you brought some heavy news.

Albert. You know full well what makes me look so pale.

Auranthe. No! Do I? Surely I am still to learn
Some horror; all I know, this present, is
I am near hustled to a dangerous gulph,
Which you can save me from,—and therefore safe,
So trusting in thy love; that should not make Thee pale, my Albert.

Albert. It doth make me freeze.

Auranthe. Why should it, love?

Albert. You should not ask me that,
But make your own heart monitor, and save 120
Me the great pain of telling. You must know.

Auranthe. Something has vexed you, Albert. There are times

When simplest things put on a sombre cast;
A melancholy mood will haunt a man,
Until most easy matters take the shape
Of unachievable tasks; small rivulets

Then seem impassable.

Albert. Do, not cheat yourself
With hope that gloss of words, or suppliant action,
Or tears, or ravings, or self-threaten'd death,
Can alter my resolve.

Auranthe. You make me tremble; 120
Not so much at your threats, as at your voice,
Untun'd, and harsh, and barren of all love.

Albert. You suffocate me! Stop this devil's parley,
And listen to me; know me once for all.

Auranthe. I thought I did. Alas! I am deceiv'd.

Albert. No, you are not deceiv'd. You took me for
A man detesting all inhuman crime;
And therefore kept from me your demon's plot
Against Erminia. Silent? Be so still;
For ever! Speak no more; but hear my words,
Thy fate. Your safety I have bought to-day 141
By blazoning a lie, which in the dawn
I'll expiate with truth.

Auranthe. O cruel traitor!

Albert. For I would not set eyes upon thy shame;
I would not see thee dragg'd to death by the hair,
Penanc'd, and taunted on a scaffolding!
To-night, upon the skirts of the blind wood
That blackens northward of these horrid towers,
I wait for you with horses. Choose your fate.
Farewell.

Auranthe. Albert, you jest; I'm sure you must.
You, an ambitious Soldier! I, a Queen, 151
One who could say,—Here, rule these Provinces!
Take tribute from those cities for thyself!
Empty these armouries, these treasuries,
Muster thy warlike thousands at a nod!
Go! conquer Italy!

Albert. Auranthe, you have made
The whole world chaff to me. Your doom is fix'd.

Auranthe. Out, villain! dastard!

133-4 Can Ludolph's wife hold such a devil's parley!

Auranthe, listen! Know me once for all;
Sooner would I have... MS., rejected.

141-3 Thy fate. Tomorrow to the public ear
I blazon out the truth. MS.

Albert. Look there to the door!
Who is it?

Auranthe. Conrad, traitor!

Albert. Let him in.

[Enter CONRAD.]

Do not affect amazement, hypocrite, 100
At seeing me in this chamber.

Conrad. Auranthe?

Albert. Talk not with eyes, but speak your curses out
Against me, who would sooner crush and grind
A brace of toads, than league with them to oppress
An innocent lady, gull an Emperor,
More generous to me than autumn's sun
To ripening harvests.

Auranthe. No more insult, sir!

Albert. Aye, clutch your scabbard; but, for prudence sake,

Draw not the sword; 'twould make an uproar, Duke,
You would not hear the end of. At nightfall 170
Your lady sister, if I guess aright,
Will leave this busy castle. You had best
Take farewell too of worldly vanities.

Conrad. Vassal!

Albert. To-morrow, when the Emperor sends
For loving Conrad, see you fawn on him.
Good even!

Auranthe. You'll be seen!

Albert. See the coast clear then.

Auranthe (as he goes). Remorseless Albert! Cruel, cruel wretch! [She lets him out.]

Conrad. So, we must lick the dust?

Auranthe. I follow him.

Conrad. How? Where? The plan of your escape?

Auranthe. He waits

For me with horses by the forest-side, 180
Northward.

Conrad. Good, good! he dies. You go, say you?

Auranthe. Perforce.

Conrad. Be speedy, darkness! Till that comes,
Fiends keep you company! [Exit.]

Auranthe. And you! And you!
 And all men! Vanish!
[Retires to an inner Apartment.

SCENE II.—An Apartment in the Castle.

Enter LUDOLPH and Page.

Page. Still very sick, my Lord; but now I went
 Knowing my duty to so good a Prince;
 And there her women in a mournful throng
 Stood in the passage whispering: if any
 Mov'd 'twas with careful steps and hush'd as death;
 They bid me stop.

Ludolph. Good fellow, once again
 Make soft enquiry; prythee be not stay'd
 By any hindrance, but with gentlest force
 Break through her weeping servants, till thou com'st
 E'en to her chamber door, and there, fair boy, 10
 If with thy mother's milk thou hast suck'd in
 Any diviner eloquence; woo her ears
 With plaints for me more tender than the voice
 Of dying Echo, echoed.

Page. Kindest master!
 To know thee sad thus, will unloose my tongue
 In mournful syllables. Let but my words reach
 Her ears and she shall take them coupled with
 Moans from my heart and sighs not counterfeit.
 May I speed better! [Exit Page.

Ludolph. Auranthe! My Life!
 Long have I lov'd thee, yet till now not lov'd: 20
 Remembering, as I do, hard-hearted times
 When I had heard even of thy death perhaps,
 And thoughtless, suffered to pass alone
 Into Elysium! now I follow thee
 A substance or a shadow, wheresoe'er
 Thou leadest me,—whether thy white feet press,
 With pleasant weight, the amorous-aching earth,
 Or thro' the air thou pioneerest me,
 A shade! Yet sadly I predestinate!

14 Of dying echo, echoed at her death... MS., cancelled.

O unbenignest Love, why wilt thou let
 Darkness steal out upon the sleepy world 20
 So wearily; as if night's chariot wheels
 Were clog'd in some thick cloud. O, changeful Love,
 Let not her steeds with drowsy-footed pace
 Pass the high stars, before sweet embassy
 Comes from the pillow'd beauty of that fair
 Completion of all delicate nature's wit.
 Pout her faint lips anew with rubious health
 And with thine infant fingers lift the fringe
 Of her sick eyelids; that those eyes may glow 40
 With wooing light upon me, ere the Morn
 Peers with disrelish, grey, barren, and cold.

Enter GERSA and Courtiers.

Otho calls me his Lion—should I blush
 To be so tam'd, so——

Gersa. Do me the courtesy
 Gentlemen to pass on.

Courtier. We are your servants.

[Excunt Courtiers.]

Ludolph. It seems then, Sir, you have found out the man
 You would confer with; me?

Gersa. If I break not Too much upon your thoughtful mood, I will Claim a brief while your patience.

Ludolph. For what cause
 Soe'er I shall be honour'd.

Gersa. I not less. 50

Ludolph. What may it be? No trifle can take place
 Of such deliberate prologue, serious 'haviour.
 But be it what it may I cannot fail
 To listen with no common interest—
 For though so new your presence is to me,
 I have a soldier's friendship for your fame—
 Please you explain.

30 unbenignest] unpropitious MS., rejected.

34-7 Let her not take her drowsy-eyed watch

Among the stars, before sweet embassy

Comes from the pillow'd beauty of that fair

Completion of all fairness and all form.

MS., rejected.

Gersa. As thus—for, pardon me,
I cannot in plain terms grossly assault
A noble nature; and would faintly sketch
What your quick apprehension will fill up 60
So finely I esteem you.

Ludolph. I attend—

Gersa. Your generous Father, most illustrious Otho,
Sits in the Banquet room among his chiefs—
His wine is bitter, for you are not there—
His eyes are fix'd still on the open doors,
And every passer in he frowns upon
Seeing no Ludolph comes.

Ludolph. I do neglect—

Gersa. And for your absence, may I guess the cause?

Ludolph. Stay there! no—guess? more princely you must be—

Than to make guesses at me. 'Tis enough, 70
I'm sorry I can hear no more.

Gersa. And I

As griev'd to force it on you so abrupt;
Yet one day you must know a grief whose sting
Will sharpen more the longer 'tis conceal'd.

Ludolph. Say it at once, sir, dead, dead, is she dead?

Gersa. Mine is a cruel task: she is not dead—
And would for your sake she were innocent—

Ludolph. Thou liest! thou amazest me beyond
All scope of thought; convulsest my heart's blood
To deadly churning—Gersa you are young 80
As I am; let me observe you face to face;
Not grey-brow'd like the poisonous Ethelbert,
No rheum'd eyes, no furrowing of age,
No wrinkles where all vices nestle in
Like crannied vermin—no, but fresh and young
And hopeful featur'd. Ha! by heaven you weep
Tears, human tears—Do you repent you then
Of a curs'd torturer's office! Why shouldst join—
Tell me, the league of Devils? Confess—confess
The Lie.—

Gersa. Lie!—but begone all ceremonious points 90
Of honour battailous. I could not turn
My wrath against thee for the orb'd world.

Ludolph. Your wrath, weak boy? Tremble at mine unless

Retraction follow close upon the heels
Of that late stounding insult: why has my sword
Not done already a sheer judgment on thee?
Despair, or eat thy words. Why, thou wast nigh
Whimpering away my reason: hark ye, Sir,
It is no secret;—that Erminia,
Erminia, Sir, was hidden in your tent; 100
O bless'd asylum! comfortable home!
Begone, I pity thee, thou art a Gull—
Erminia's last new puppet—

Gersa. Furious fire!
Thou mak'st me boil as hot as thou canst flame!
And in thy teeth I give thee back the lie!
Thou liest! Thou, Auranthe's fool, a wittol—

Ludolph. Look! look at this bright sword;
There is no part of it to the very hilt
But shall indulge itself about thine heart—
Draw—but remember thou must cower thy plumes, 110
As yesterday the Arab made thee stoop—

Gersa. Patience! not here, I would not spill thy blood
Here underneath this roof where Otho breathes,
Thy father—almost mine—

Ludolph. O faltering coward—

Re-enter PAGE.

Stay, stay, here is one I have half a word with—
Well—What ails thee child?

Page. My lord,
Ludolph. Good fellow!

Page. They are fled!
Ludolph. They—who?

Page. When anxiously
I hasten'd back, your grieving messenger,
I found the stairs all dark, the lamps extinct,
And not a foot or whisper to be heard. 120
I thought her dead, and on the lowest step
Sat listening; when presently came by
Two muffled up,—one sighing heavily,

The other cursing low, whose voice I knew
For the Duke Conrad's. Close I follow'd them
Thro' the dark ways they chose to the open air;
And, as I follow'd, heard my lady speak.

Ludolph. Thy life answers the truth!

Page. The chamber's empty!

Ludolph. As I will be of mercy! So, at last,
This nail is in my temples!

Gersa. Be calm in this. 130

Ludolph. I am.

Gersa. And Albert too has disappear'd;
Ere I met you, I sought him everywhere;
You would not hearken.

Ludolph. Which way went they, boy?

Gersa. I'll hunt with you.

Ludolph. No, no, no. My senses are Still whole. I have surviv'd. My arm is strong—
My appetite sharp—for revenge! I'll no sharer
In my feast; my injury is all my own,
And so is my revenge, my lawful chattels!
Terrier, ferret them out! Burn—burn the witch!
Trace me their footsteps! Away! 140

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A part of the Forest.

Enter CONRAD and AURANTHE.

Auranthe. Go no further; not a step more; thou art
A master-plague in the midst of miseries.
Go—I fear thee. I tremble every limb,
Who never shook before. There's moody death
In thy resolved looks—Yes, I could kneel
To pray thee far away. Conrad, go, go—
There! yonder underneath the boughs I see
Our horses!

Conrad. Aye, and the man.

Auranthe. Yes, he is there.
Go, go,—no blood, no blood; go, gentle Conrad!

2 A plague-spot in the midst of miseries. MS., cancelled.

Conrad. Farewell!

Auranthe. Farewell, for this Heaven pardon you. 10

[Exit AURANTHE.

Conrad. If he survive one hour, then may I die
In unimagined tortures—or breathe through
A long life in the foulest sink of the world!
He dies—'tis well she do not advertise
The caitiff of the cold steel at his back.

[Exit CONRAD.

Enter LUDOLPH and PAGE.

Ludolph. Miss'd the way, boy, say not that on your peril!

Page. Indeed, indeed I cannot trace them further.

Ludolph. Must I stop here? Here solitary die?
Stifled beneath the thick oppressive shade
Of these dull boughs,—this oven of dark thickets,— 20

18-32 Ludolph. What here! here solitary must I die
Without revenge, here stifled in the shade
Of these dull Boughs? Pshaw bitter bitter end—
A bitter death! a suffocating death!
A gnawing, silent deadly, quiet death!
Must she escape me? Can I not clutch her fast?
She's gone, away, away, away—and now
Each moment brings its poison—I must die
As near a Hermit's death as patience—Oh!
War! War! War! where is that illustrious noise
To gasp away my life

Scene changes to another part of the wood.

Enter ALBERT wounded and LUDOLPH.

MS., cancelled.

Silent,—without revenge?—pshaw!—bitter end,—
 A bitter death,—a suffocating death,—
 A gnawing—silent—deadly, quiet death!
 Escap'd?—fled?—vanish'd? melted into air?
 She's gone! I cannot clutch her! no revenge!
 A muffled death, ensnar'd in horrid silence!
 Suck'd to my grave amid a dreamy calm!
 O, where is that illustrious noise of war,
 To smother up this sound of labouring breath,
 This rustle of the trees!

[AURANTHE shricks at a distance.

Page.

My Lord, a noise!

This way—hark!

Ludolph.

Yes, yes! A hope! A music!
 A glorious clamour! How I live again! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter ALBERT (wounded).

Albert. O for enough life to support me on
 To Otho's feet—

Enter LUDOLPH.

Ludolph. Thrice villainous, stay there!
 Tell me where that detested woman is
 Or this is through thee!

Albert. My good Prince, with me
 The sword has done its worst; not without worst
 Done to another—Conrad has it home—
 I see you know it all—

Ludolph.

Where is his sister?

AURANTHE rushes in.

Auranthe. Albert!

Ludolph. Ha! There! there!—He is the paramour!—
 There—hug him—dying! O, thou innocence,
 Shrine him and comfort him at his last gasp, 10
 Kiss down his eyelids! Was he not thy love?
 Wilt thou forsake him at his latest hour?
 Keep fearful and aloof from his last gaze,

His most uneasy moments, when cold death
Stands with the door ajar to let him in?

Albert. O that that door with hollow slam would close
Upon me sudden, for I cannot meet,
In all the unknown chambers of the dead,
Such horrors——

Ludolph. Auranthe! what can he mean?
What horrors? Is it not a joyous time? 20

Am I not married to a paragon

“Of personal beauty and untainted soul?”

A blushing fair-eyed Purity! A Sylph,
Whose snowy timid hand has never sin'd
Beyond a flower pluck'd, white as itself?

Albert, you do insult my Bride—your Mistress—
To talk of horrors on our wedding night.

Albert. Alas! poor Prince, I would you knew my heart.
’Tis not so guilty—

Ludolph. Hear you he pleads not guilty—
You are not? or if so what matters it? 30

You have escap’d me,—free as the dusk air—

Hid in the forest—safe from my revenge;

I cannot catch you—You should laugh at me,

Poor cheated Ludolph,—make the forest hiss

With jeers at me—You tremble; faint at once,

You will come to again. O Cockatrice,

I have you. Whither wander those fair eyes

To entice the Devil to your help, that he

May change you to a Spider, so to crawl

Into some cranny to escape my wrath? 40

Albert. Sometimes the counsel of a dying man

Doth operate quietly when his breath is gone—

Disjoin those hands—part—part, do not destroy

Each other—forget her—our miseries

Are equal shar’d, and mercy is—

Ludolph. A boon

When one can compass it. Auranthe, try

Your oratory—your breath is not so hitch’d—

Aye, stare for help— [ALBERT groans and dies.

There goes a spotted soul
Howling in vain along the hollow night—

24-5 Whose snowy timid hand has never grasp’d
Beyond a flower, dainty as itself, MS., rejected.

Hear him—he calls you—Sweet Auranthe, come! 50
Auranthe. Kill me.

Ludolph. No! What? upon our Marriage-night!
 The earth would shudder at so foul a deed—
 A fair Bride, a sweet Bride, an innocent Bride!
 No, we must revel it, as 'tis in use
 In times of delicate brilliant ceremony:
 Come, let me lead you to our halls again—
 Nay, linger not—make no resistance sweet—
 Will you—Ah wretch, thou canst not, for I have
 The strength of twenty lions 'gainst a lamb—
 Now one adieu for Albert—come away.— 60

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—An inner Court of the Castle.

Enter SIGIFRED, GONFRED, and THEODORE meeting.

Theodore. Was ever such a night?

Sigifred. What horrors more?
 Things unbeliev'd one hour, so strange they are,
 The next hour stamps with credit.

Theodore. Your last news?
Gonfred. After the Page's story of the death
 Of Albert and Duke Conrad?

Sigifred. And the return
 Of Ludolph with the Princess.

Gonfred. No more save
 Prince Gersa's freeing Abbot Ethelbert,
 And the sweet lady, fair Erminia,
 From prison.

Theodore. Where are they now? hast yet heard?
Gonfred. With the sad Emperor they are closeted;
 I saw the three pass slowly up the stairs, 11
 The lady weeping, the old Abbot cowl'd.

Sigifred. What next?

Theodore. I ache to think on't.

Gonfred. 'Tis with fate.

Theodore. One while these proud towers are hush'd as death.

Gonfred. The next our poor Prince fills the arched rooms
With ghastly ravings.

Sigifred. I do fear his brain.

Gonfred. I will see more. Bear you so stout a heart?
[Exeunt into the Castle.]

SCENE IV.—A Cabinet, opening towards a Terrace.

OTHO, ERMINIA, ETHELBERT, and a Physician, discovered.

Otho. O, my poor Boy! my Son! my Son! my
Ludolph!

Have ye no comfort for me, ye Physicians
Of the weak Body and Soul?

Ethelbert. 'Tis not the Medicine
Either of heaven or earth can cure unless Fit time be chosen to administer—

Otho. A kind forbearance, holy Abbot—come
Erminia, here sit by me, gentle Girl;
Give me thy hand—hast thou forgiven me?

Erminia. Would I were with the saints to pray for you!

Otho. Why will ye keep me from my darling child?

Physician. Forgive me, but he must not see thy face—

Otho. Is then a father's countenance a Gorgon?
Hath it not comfort in it? Would it not
Console my poor Boy, cheer him, heal his spirits?
Let me embrace him, let me speak to him—
I will—who hinders me? Who's Emperor?

Physician. You may not, Sire—'twould overwhelm him quite,

He is so full of grief and passionate wrath,
Too heavy a sigh would kill him—or do worse.
He must be sav'd by fine contrivances—
And most especially we must keep clear
Out of his sight 'a Father whom he loves—
His heart is full, it can contain no more,
And do its ruddy office.

Ethelbert. Sage advice;
We must endeavour how to ease and slacken
The tight-wound energies of his despair,
Not make them tenser—

Otho. Enough! I hear, I hear.
Yet you were about to advise more—I listen.

Ethelbert. This learned doctor will agree with me,
That not in the smallest point should he be thwarted
Or gainsaid by one word—his very motions, 31
Nods, becks and hints, should be obey'd with care,
Even on the moment: so his troubled mind
May cure itself—

Physician. There is no other means.

Otho. Open the door: let's hear if all is quiet—

Physician. Beseech you, Sire, forbear.

Erminia.

Do, do.

Otho.

I command!

Open it straight—hush!—quiet—my lost Boy!
My miserable Child!

Ludolph (indistinctly without). Fill, fill my goblet,—
Here's a health!

Erminia. O, close the door!

Otho. Let, let me hear his voice; this cannot last—
And fain would I catch up his dying words 41
Though my own knell they be—this cannot last—
O let me catch his voice—for lo! I hear
This silence whisper me that he is dead!
It is so. Gersa?

Enter GERSA.

Physician. Say, how fares the prince?

Gersa. More calm—his features are less wild and flush'd—

Once he complain'd of weariness—

Physician.

Indeed!

'Tis good—'tis good—let him but fall asleep,
That saves him.

Otho.

Gersa, watch him like a child— 49
Ward him from harm—and bring me better news—

Physician. Humour him to the height. I fear to go;

For should he catch a glimpse of my dull garb,
It might affright him—fill him with suspicion

43 catch] hear MS., cancelled.

44 A whisper in this silence that he's dead! Houghton, but struck out in MS. for text.

That we believe him sick, which must not be—

Gersa. I will invent what soothing means I can.

[Exit GERSA.]

Physician. This should cheer up your Highness—weariness

Is a good symptom, and most favourable—

It gives me pleasant hopes. Please you walk forth
Onto the Terrace; the refreshing air

Will blow one half of your sad doubts away. 60

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Banqueting Hall, brilliantly illuminated, and set forth with all costly magnificence, with Supper-tables, laden with services of Gold and Silver. A door in the back scene, guarded by two Soldiers. Lords, Ladies, Knights, Gentlemen, &c., whispering sadly, and ranging themselves; part entering and part discovered.

First Knight. Grievously are we tantaliz'd, one and all—

Sway'd here and there, commanded to and fro
As though we were the shadows of a dream
And link'd to a sleeping fancy. What do we here?

Gonfred. I am no Seer—you know we must obey
The prince from A to Z—though it should be
To set the place in flames. I pray hast heard
Where the most wicked Princess is?

First Knight.

There, Sir,
In the next room—have you remark'd those two
Stout soldiers posted at the door?

Gonfred.

For what? 10

[They whisper.]

First Lady. How ghast a train!

Second Lady. Sure this should be some splendid burial.

First Lady. What fearful whispering! See, see,— Gersa there!

Enter GERSA.

Gersa. Put on your brightest looks; smile if you can;

Behave as all were happy; keep your eyes
From the least watch upon him; if he speaks
To any one, answer collectedly,
Without surprise, his questions, howe'er strange.
Do this to the utmost,—though, alas! with me
The remedy grows hopeless! Here he comes,— 20
Observe what I have said,—show no surprise.

Enter LUDOLPH, followed by SIGIFRED and Page.

Ludolph. A splendid company! rare beauties here!
I should have Orphean lips, and Plato's fancy,
Amphion's utterance, toned with his lyre,
Or the deep key of Jove's sonorous mouth,
To give fit salutation. Methought I heard,
As I came in, some whispers,—what of that?
'Tis natural men should whisper; at the kiss
Of Psyche given by Love, there was a buzz
Among the gods!—and silence is as natural. 30
These draperies are fine, and, being a mortal,
I should desire no better; yet, in truth,
There must be some superior costliness,
Some wider-domed high magnificence!
I would have, as a mortal I may not,
Hanging of heaven's clouds, purple and gold,
Slung from the spheres; gauzes of silver mist,
Loop'd up with cords of twisted wreathed light,
And tassell'd round with weeping meteors!
These pendent lamps and chandeliers are bright 40
As earthly fires from dull dross can be cleansed;
Yet could my eyes drink up intenser beams
Undazzled,—this is darkness,—when I close
These lids, I see far fiercer brilliances,—
Skies full of splendid moons, and shooting stars,
And spouting exhalations, diamond fires,
And panting fountains quivering with deep glows!
Yes—this is dark—is it not dark?

Sigifred.

My Lord,

'Tis late; the lights of festival are ever

Quench'd in the morn.

Ludolph. 'Tis not to-morrow then? 50

Sigifred. 'Tis early dawn.

Gersa. Indeed full time we slept;

Say you so, Prince?

Ludolph. I say I quarrell'd with you;
We did not tilt each other,—that's a blessing,—
Good gods! no innocent blood upon my head!

Sigifred. Retire, Gersa!

Ludolph. There should be three more here:
For two of them, they stay away perhaps,
Being gloomy-minded, haters of fair revels,—
They know their own thoughts best.

As for the third,
Deep blue eyes—semi-shaded in white lids,
Finish'd with lashes fine for more soft shade, 60
Completed by her twin-arch'd ebon brows—
White temples of exactest elegance,
Of even mould felicitous and smooth—
Cheeks fashion'd tenderly on either side,
So perfect, so divine that our poor eyes
Are dazzled with the sweet proportioning,
And wonder that 'tis so,—the magic chance!
Her nostrils, small, fragrant, faery-delicate;
Her lips—I swear no human bones e'er wore
So taking a disguise—you shall behold her! 70
We'll have her presently; aye, you shall see her,
And wonder at her, friends, she is so fair—
She is the world's chief Jewel, and by heaven
She's mine by right of marriage—she is mine!
Patience, good people, in fit time I send
A Summoner—she will obey my call,
Being a wife most mild and dutiful.
First I would hear what music is prepared
To herald and receive her—let me hear!

Sigifred. Bid the musicians soothe him tenderly. 80

[A soft strain of Music.]

Ludolph. Ye have none better—no—I am content;
'Tis a rich sobbing melody, with reliefs
Full and majestic; it is well enough,
And will be sweeter, when ye see her pace

Sweeping into this presence, glisten'd o'er
With emptied caskets, and her train upheld
By ladies, habited in robes of lawn,
Sprinkled with golden crescents; (others bright
In silks, with spangles shower'd,) and bow'd to
By Duchesses and pearled Margravines— 90
Sad, that the fairest creature of the earth—
I pray you mind me not—'tis sad, I say,
That the extremest beauty of the world
Should so entrench herself away from me,
Behind a barrier of engender'd guilt!

Second Lady. Ah! what a moan!

First Knight. Most piteous indeed!

Ludolph. She shall be brought before this company,
And then—then—

First Lady. He muses.

Gersa. O, Fortune, where will this end?

Sigifred. I guess his purpose! Indeed he must not have

That pestilence brought in,—that cannot be, 100
There we must stop him.

Gersa. I am lost! Hush, hush!
He is about to rave again.

Ludolph. A barrier of guilt! I was the fool.
She was the cheater! Who's the cheater now,
And who the fool? The entrapp'd, the caged fool,
The bird-lim'd raven? She shall croak to death
Secure! Methinks I have her in my fist,
To crush her with my heel! Wait, wait! I marvel
My father keeps away: good friend, ah! Sigifred!
Do bring him to me—and Erminia 110
I fain would see before I sleep—and Ethelbert,
That he may bless me, as I know he will
Though I have curs'd him.

Sigifred. Rather suffer me
To lead you to them—

Ludolph. No, excuse me, no—
The day is not quite done—go bring them hither.

[Exit SIGIFRED.]

Certes, a father's smile should, like sun light,
Slant on my sheafed harvest of ripe bliss—

Besides, I thirst to pledge my lovely Bride
In a deep goblet: let me see—what wine?
The strong Iberian juice, or mellow Greek? 120
Or pale Calabrian? Or the Tuscan grape?
Or of old Ætna's pulpy wine presses,
Black stain'd with the fat vintage, as it were
The purple slaughter-house, where Bacchus' self
Prick'd his own swollen veins? Where is my Page?

Page.

Here, here!

Ludolph. Be ready to obey me; anon thou shalt
Bear a soft message for me—for the hour
Draws near when I must make a winding up
Of bridal Mysteries—a fine-spun vengeance!
Carve it on my Tomb, that when I rest beneath 130
Men shall confess—This Prince was gull'd and cheated,
But from the ashes of disgrace he rose
More than a fiery Phoenix—and did burn
His ignominy up in purging fires—
Did I not send, Sir, but a moment past,
For my Father?

Gersa. You did.

Ludolph. Perhaps 'twould be Much better he came not.

Gersa.

He enters now!

Enter OTHO, ERMINIA, ETHELBERT, SIGIFRED, and Physician.

Ludolph. O thou good Man, against whose sacred head

I was a mad conspirator, chiefly too
For the sake of my fair newly wedded wife, 140
Now to be punish'd, do not look so sad!
Those charitable eyes will thaw my heart,
Those tears will wash away a just resolve,
A verdict ten times sworn! Awake—awake—
Put on a judge's brow, and use a tongue
Made iron-stern by habit! Thou shalt see
A deed to be applauded, 'scribed in gold!
Join a loud voice to mine, and so denounce

128 The word righteous is cancelled before winding up in the MS.

133 Phoenix] dragon Houghton.

What I alone will execute!

Otho. Dear son,
What is it? By your father's love, I sue 150
That it be nothing merciless!

Ludolph. To that demon?
Not so! No! She is in temple-stall
Being garnish'd for the sacrifice, and I,
The Priest of Justice, will immolate her
Upon the altar of wrath! She stings me through!—
Even as the worm doth feed upon the nut,
So she, a scorpion, preys upon my brain!
I feel her gnawing here! Let her but vanish,
Then, father, I will lead your legions forth,
Compact in steeled squares, and speared files, 160
And bid our trumpets speak a fell rebuke
To nations drows'd in peace!

Otho. To-morrow, Son,
Be your word law—forget to-day—

Ludolph. I will
When I have finish'd it—now! now! I'm pight,
Tight-footed for the deed!

Erminia. Alas! Alas!
Ludolph. What Angel's voice is that? Erminia!
Ah! gentlest creature, whose sweet innocence
Was almost murder'd; I am penitent,
Wilt thou forgive me? And thou, holy Man,
Good Ethelbert, shall I die in peace with you? 170

Erminia. Die, my lord!

Ludolph. I feel it possible.

Otho. Physician?

Physician. I fear me he is past my skill.

Otho. Not so!

Ludolph. I see it, I see it—I have been wandering—
Half-mad—not right here—I forget my purpose.

Bestir, bestir, Auranthe! ha! ha! ha!

Youngster! Page! go bid them drag her to me!

Obey! This shall finish it! [Draws a dagger.]

Otho. O my Son! my Son!

Sigifred. This must not be—stop there!

Ludolph. Am I obey'd?
A little talk with her—no harm—haste! haste!

[Exit Page.]

Set her before me—never fear I can strike. 180

Several Voices. My Lord! My Lord!

Gersa.

Good Prince!

Ludolph. Why do ye trouble me? out—out—out
away!

There she is! take that! and that! no, no—

That's not well done—Where is she?

[The doors open. Enter Page. Several women are seen grouped about Auranthe in the inner room.

Page. Alas! My Lord, my Lord! they cannot move her!

Her arms are stiff,—her fingers clench'd and cold—

Ludolph. She's dead!

[Staggers and falls into their arms.

Ethelbert.

Take away the dagger.

Gersa.

Softly; so!

Otho. Thank God for that!

Sigifred.

I fear it could not harm him.

Gersa. No!—brief be his anguish!

Ludolph. She's gone—I am content—Nobles, good night! 190

We are all weary—faint—set ope the doors—

I will to bed!—To-morrow—

KING STEPHEN
A FRAGMENT OF A TRAGEDY
WRITTEN IN NOVEMBER 1819

KING STEPHEN

A FRAGMENT OF A TRAGEDY

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter King STEPHEN, Knights, and Soldiers.

Stephen. If shame can on a soldier's vein-swoll'n front
Spread deeper crimson than the battle's toil,
Blush in your casing helmets! for see, see!
Yonder my chivalry, my pride of war,
Wrench'd with an iron hand from firm array,
Are routed loose about the plashy meads,
Of honour forfeit. O that my known voice
Could reach your dastard ears, and fright you more!
Fly, cowards, fly! Gloucester is at your backs!
Throw your slack bridles o'er the flurried manes, 10
Ply well the rowel with faint trembling heels,
Scampering to death at last!

First Knight. The enemy
Bears his flaunt standard close upon their rear.

Second Knight. Sure of a bloody prey, seeing the fens
Will swamp them girth-deep.

Stephen. Over head and ears,
No matter! 'Tis a gallant enemy;
How like a comet he goes streaming on.
But we must plague him in the flank,—hey, friends?
We are well breathed,—follow!

Enter Earl BALDWIN and Soldiers, as defeated.

Stephen. De Redvers!
What is the monstrous bugbear that can fright 20
Baldwin?

Baldwin. No scare-crow, but the fortunate star
Of boisterous Chester, whose fell truncheon now
Points level to the goal of victory.

This way he comes, and if you would maintain
Your person unaffronted by vile odds,
Take horse, my Lord.

Stephen. And which way spur for life?
Now I thank Heaven I am in the toils,
That soldiers may bear witness how my arm
Can burst the meshes. Not the eagle more
Loves to beat up against a tyrannous blast, 30
Than I to meet the torrent of my foes.
This is a brag,—be't so,—but if I fall,
Carve it upon my 'scutcheon'd sepulchre.
On, fellow soldiers! Earl of Redvers, back!
Not twenty Earls of Chester shall brow-beat
The diadem. [Exeunt. Alarum.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Field.

Trumpets sounding a Victory. Enter GLOCESTER, Knights, and Forces.

Glocester. Now may we lift our bruised vizors up,
And take the flattering freshness of the air.
While the wide din of battle dies away
Into times past, yet to be echoed sure
In the silent pages of our chroniclers.

First Knight. Will Stephen's death be mark'd there,
my good Lord,

Or that we gave him lodging in yon towers?

Glocester. Fain would I know the great usurper's fate.

Enter two Captains severally.

First Captain. My Lord!

Second Captain. Most noble Earl!

First Captain. The King—

Second Captain. The Empress greets—

Glocester. What of the King?

First Captain. He sole and lone maintains 10

A hopeless bustle mid our swarming arms,
And with a nimble savageness attacks,
Escapes, makes fiercer onset, then anew
Eludes death, giving death to most that dare
Trespass within the circuit of his sword!

He must by this have fallen. Baldwin is taken ;
And for the Duke of Bretagne, like a stag
He flies, for the Welsh beagles to hunt down.
God save the Empress !

Glocester. Now our dreaded Queen :
What message from her Highness ?

Second Captain. Royal Maud 20
From the throng'd towers of Lincoln hath look'd down,
Like Pallas from the walls of Ilion,
And seen her enemies havock'd at her feet.
She greets most noble Glocester from her heart,
Intreating him, his captains, and brave knights,
To grace a banquet. The high city gates
Are envious which shall see your triumph pass ;
The streets are full of music.

Enter Second Knight.

Glocester. Whence come you ?

Second Knight. From Stephen, my good Prince,—
Stephen ! Stephen ! 29

Glocester. Why do you make such echoing of his name ?

Second Knight. Because I think, my lord, he is no man,

But a fierce demon, 'nointed safe from wounds,
And misbaptized with a Christian name.

Glocester. A mighty soldier !—Does he still hold out ?

Second Knight. He shames our victory. His valour still

Keeps elbow-room amid our eager swords,
And holds our bladed falchions all aloof—
His gleaming battle-axe being slaughter-sick,
Smote on the morion of a Flemish knight,
Broke short in his hand ; upon the which he flung
The heft away with such a vengeful force, 41
It paunch'd the Earl of Chester's horse, who then
Spleen-hearted came in full career at him.

Glocester. Did no one take him at a vantage then ?

Second Knight. Three then with tiger leap upon him flew,

Whom, with his sword swift-drawn and nimbly held,
He stung away again, and stood to breathe,
Smiling. Anon upon him rush'd once more

A throng of foes, and in this renew'd strife,
My sword met his and snapp'd off at the hilts. 50
Glocester. Come, lead me to this Mars—and let us
move

In silence, not insulting his sad doom
With clamorous trumpets. To the Empress bear
My salutation as befits the time.

[Exeunt GLOCESTER and Forces.]

SCENE III.—The Field of Battle. Enter STEPHEN unarmed.

Stephen. Another sword! And what if I could seize
One from Bellona's gleaming armoury,
Or choose the fairest of her sheaved spears!

50 hilts MS. : hilt Houghton.

51 Mars] mars MS. : man Houghton.

Scene II is followed in Keats's manuscript by a cancelled opening of Scene III, thus—

Scene 3rd

The field of Battle—Enter Stephen unarm'd

Stephen. Another Sword! for one short minute longer
That I may pepper that De Kaims and then
Yield to { valiant } some twenty squadrons— { Stephen say
 { this army } { This is gory!
Wouldst thou exchange this helmeted renown
To rule in quiet Pylos Nestor-like?
No!—

Enter De Kaims Knights and Soldiers dropping in De Kaims...

In rewriting the opening of the Scene, Keats at first put

Another Sword! and what if I took one
From forth Bellona's gleaming armoury which stands altered to the far better reading of the text. After line 3 the rewritten opening originally stood thus—

Where is my Enemy? Aye, close at hand
Here comes the testy Brood

but this stands changed to the reading of the text, save that comes is not altered to come. Line 15 stands thus—

Yield Stephen, or my Sword's point ~~explore~~ dip in...
I scarcely think Keats meant this as an alternative present-future,

or my sword's point dips in

The gloomy current of a traitor's heart,
as Lord Houghton gave it: more probably he used or for ere or before.
There is certainly no s either in explore or in dip.

Where are my enemies? Here, close at hand,
 Here come the testy brood. O for a sword!
 I'm faint—a biting sword! A noble sword!
 A hedge-stake—or a ponderous stone to hurl
 With brawny vengeance, like the labourer Cain.
 Come on! Farewell my kingdom, and all hail
 Thou superb, plum'd, and helmeted renown, 10
 All hail—I would not truck this brilliant day
 To rule in Pylos with a Nestor's beard—
 Come on!

Enter DE KAIMS and Knights, &c.

De Kaims. Is't madness, or a hunger after death,
 That makes thee thus unarm'd throw taunts at us?
 Yield, Stephen, or my sword's point dip in
 The gloomy current of a traitor's heart.

Stephen. Do it, De Kaims, I will not budge an inch.

De Kaims. Yes, of thy madness thou shalt take the meed.

Stephen. Darest thou?

De Kaims. How dare, against a man disarm'd?

Stephen. What weapons has the lion but himself?
 Come not near me, De Kaims, for by the price 21
 Of all the glory I have won this day,
 Being a king, I will not yield alive
 To any but the second man of the realm,
 Robert of Gloucester.

De Kaims. Thou shalt vail to me.

Stephen. Shall I, when I have sworn against it, sir?
 Thou think'st it brave to take a breathing king,
 That, on a court-day bow'd to haughty Maud,
 The awed presence-chamber may be bold
 To whisper, there's the man who took alive 20
 Stephen—me—prisoner. Certes, De Kaims,
 The ambition is a noble one.

De Kaims. 'Tis true,
 And, Stephen, I must compass it.

27 a breathing king] a king alive MS., rejected.

30-31 To whi[s]per { there's the man who } took alive

King...

The stubborn Reb[el]... MS., rejected.

Stephen.

No, no,

Do not tempt me to throttle you on the gorge,
Or with my gauntlet crush your hollow breast,
Just when your knighthood is grown ripe and full
For lordship.

A Soldier. Is an honest yeoman's spear
Of no use at a need? Take that.

Stephen.

Ah, dastard!

De Kaims. What, you are vulnerable! my prisoner!

Stephen. No, not yet. I disclaim it, and demand
Death as a sovereign right unto a king 41
Who 'sdains to yield to any but his peer,
If not in title, yet in noble deeds,
The Earl of Gloucester. Stab to the hilts, De Kaims,
For I will never by mean hands be led
From this so famous field. Do ye hear! Be quick!

[Trumpets. Enter the Earl of CHESTER and Knights.

SCENE IV.—*A Presence Chamber. Queen MAUD in a
Chair of State, the Earls of GLOUCESTER and CHESTER, Lords, Attendants.*

Maud. Gloucester, no more: I will behold that Boulogne:

Set him before me. Not for the poor sake
Of regal pomp and a vain-glorious hour,
As thou with wary speech, yet near enough,
Hast hinted.

Gloucester. Faithful counsel have I given;
If wary, for your Highness' benefit.

Maud. The Heavens forbid that I should not think so,
For by thy valour have I won this realm,
Which by thy wisdom I will ever keep.
To sage advisers let me ever bend 10

A meek attentive ear, so that they treat
Of the wide kingdom's rule and government,
Not trenching on our actions personal.
Advis'd, not school'd, I would be; and henceforth
Spoken to in clear, plain, and open terms,
Not side-ways sermon'd at.

44 hilts MS. : hilt Houghton.

Glocester. Then, in plain terms,
Once more for the fallen king—

Maud. Your pardon, Brother,
I would no more of that; for, as I said,
'Tis not for worldly pomp I wish to see.
The rebel, but as dooming judge to give 20
A sentence something worthy of his guilt.

Glocester. If't must be so, I'll bring him to your presence. [Exit GLOCESTER.]

Maud. A meaner summoner might do as well—
My Lord of Chester, is't true what I hear
Of Stephen of Boulogne, our prisoner,
That he, as a fit penance for his crimes,
Eats wholesome, sweet, and palatable food
Off Glocester's golden dishes—drinks pure wine,
Lodges soft?

Chester. More than that, my gracious Queen,
Has anger'd me. The noble Earl, methinks, 30
Full soldier as he is, and without peer
In counsel, dreams too much among his books.
It may read well, but sure 'tis out of date
To play the Alexander with Darius.

Maud. Truth! I think so. By Heavens it shall not last!

Chester. It would amaze your Highness now to mark
How Glocester overstrains his courtesey
To that crime-loving rebel, that Boulogne—

Maud. That ingrate!

Chester. For whose vast ingratitude
To our late sovereign lord, your noble sire, 40
The generous Earl condoles in his mishaps,
And with a sort of lackeying friendliness,
Talks off the mighty frowning from his brow,
Woos him to hold a duet in a smile,
Or, if it please him, play an hour at chess—

Maud. A perjured slave!

Chester. And for his perjury,
Glocester has fit rewards—nay, I believe,
He sets his bustling household's wits at work
For flatteries to ease this Stephen's hours,
And make a heaven of his purgatory; 50
Adorning bondage with the pleasant gloss

Of feasts and music, and all idle shows
Of indoor pageantry ; while syren whispers,
Predestin'd for his ear, 'scape as half-check'd
From lips the courtliest and the rubiest
Of all the realm, admiring of his deeds.

Maud. A frost upon his summer !

Chester. A queen's nod
Can make his June December. Here he comes.

POEMS WRITTEN LATE IN 1819

A PARTY OF LOVERS:

"A few Nonsense Verses" sent in a Letter to George Keats.

PENSIVE they sit, and roll their languid eyes,
Nibble their toast and cool their tea with sighs;
Or else forget the purpose of the night,
Forget their tea, forget their appetite.
See, with cross'd arms they sit—Ah! happy crew,
The fire is going out and no one rings
For coals, and therefore no coals Betty brings.
A fly is in the milk-pot. Must he die
Circled by a humane society?
No, no; there, Mr. Werter takes his spoon, 10
Inserts it, dips the handle, and lo! soon
The little straggler, sav'd from perils dark,
Across the teaboard draws a long wet mark.

Romeo! Arise, take snuffers by the handle,
There's a large cauliflower in each candle.
A winding sheet—ah, me! I must away
To No. 7, just beyond the circus gay.
Alas, my friend, your coat sits very well;
Where may your Tailor live? I may not tell.
O pardon me. I'm absent now and then. 20
Where might my Tailor live? I say again
I cannot tell, let me no more be teased;
He lives in Wapping, might live where he pleased.

SONNET.

THE day is gone, and all its sweets are gone!
Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand, and softer breast,
Warm breath, light whisper, tender semi-tone,
Bright eyes, accomplish'd shape, and lang'rous waist!

Faded the flower and all its budded charms,
 Faded the sight of beauty from my eyes,
 Faded the shape of beauty from my arms,
 Faded the voice, warmth, whiteness, paradise—
 Vanish'd unseasonably at shut of eve,
 When the dusk holiday—or holinight 10
 Of fragrant-curtain'd love begins to weave
 The woof of darkness thick, for hid delight;
 But, as I've read love's missal through to-day,
 He'll let me sleep, seeing I fast and pray.

LINES TO FANNY.

WHAT can I do to drive away
 Remembrance from my eyes? for they have seen,
 Aye, an hour ago, my brilliant Queen!
 Touch has a memory. O say, love, say,
 What can I do to kill it and be free
 In my old liberty?
 When every fair one that I saw was fair,
 Enough to catch me in but half a snare,
 Not keep me there:
 When, howe'er poor or particolour'd things, 10
 My muse had wings,
 And ever ready was to take her course
 Whither I bent her force,
 Unintellectual, yet divine to me;—
 Divine, I say!—What sea-bird o'er the sea
 Is a philosopher the while he goes
 Winging along where the great water throes?

How shall I do
 To get anew
 Those moulted feathers, and so mount once more 20
 Above, above
 The reach of fluttering Love,
 And make him cower lowly while I soar?
 Shall I gulp wine? No, that is vulgarism,
 A heresy and schism,
 Foisted into the canon law of love;—

3 The word and or but has probably dropped out after Aye.

No,—wine is only sweet to happy men ;
 More dismal cares
 Seize on me unawares,—
 Where shall I learn to get my peace again ? 30
 To banish thoughts of that most hateful land,
 Dungeoner of my friends, that wicked strand
 Where they were wreck'd and live a wrecked life ;
 That monstrous region, whose dull rivers pour,
 Ever from their sordid urns unto the shore,
 Unown'd of any weedy-haired gods ;
 Whose winds, all zephyrless, hold scourging rods,
 Iced in the great lakes, to afflict mankind ;
 Whose rank-grown forests, frosted, black, and blind,
 Would fright a Dryad ; whose harsh herbag'd meads
 Make lean and lank the starv'd ox while he feeds ;
 There bad flowers have no scent, birds no sweet song,
 And great unerring Nature once seems wrong. 43

O, for some sunny spell
 To dissipate the shadows of this hell !
 Say they are gone,—with the new dawning light
 Steps forth my lady bright !
 O, let me once more rest
 My soul upon that dazzling breast !
 Let once again these aching arms be plac'd, 50
 The tender gaolers of thy waist !
 And let me feel that warm breath here and there
 To spread a rapture in my very hair,—
 O, the sweetness of the pain !
 Give me those lips again !
 Enough ! Enough ! it is enough for me
 To dream of thee !

33 Probably wrecked should be wretched.

35 Even seems a likelier initial word here than Ever.

42 The word bad before flowers is questionable. Keats may have got as far as bud with the word buds, and then decided for flowers (disyllable) and forgotten to strike out bud.

SONNET.

TO FANNY.

I CRY your mercy—pity—love!—aye, love!
Merciful love that tantalizes not,
One-thoughted, never-wandering, guileless love,
Unmask'd, and being seen—without a blot!
O! let me have thee whole,—all—all—be mine!
That shape, that fairness, that sweet minor zest
Of love, your kiss,—those hands, those eyes divine,
That warm, white, lucent, million-pleasured breast,—
Yourself—your soul—in pity give me all.
Withhold no atom's atom or I die, 10
Or living on perhaps, your wretched thrall,
Forget, in the mist of idle misery,
Life's purposes,—the palate of my mind
Losing its gust, and my ambition blind!

THE FALL OF HYPERION

A DREAM

AN ATTEMPT MADE AT THE END OF 1819 TO RECONSTRUCT THE POEM

THE FALL OF HYPERION

A DREAM

[CANTO I.]

FANATICS have their dreams, wherewith they weave
A paradise for a sect; the savage too
From forth the loftiest fashion of his sleep
Guesses at Heaven; pity these have not
Trac'd upon vellum or wild Indian leaf
The shadows of melodious utterance.
But bare of laurel they live, dream, and die;
For Poesy alone can tell her dreams,
With the fine spell of words alone can save
Imagination from the sable chain 10
And dumb enchantment. Who alive can say,
"Thou art no Poet—may'st not tell thy dreams?"
Since every man whose soul is not a clod
Hath visions, and would speak, if he had loved,
And been well nurtured in his mother tongue.
Whether the dream now purpos'd to rehearse
Be poet's or fanatic's will be known
When this warm scribe my hand is in the grave.

Methought I stood where trees of every clime,
Palm, myrtle, oak, and sycamore, and beech, 20
With plantain, and spice-blossoms, made a screen;
In neighbourhood of fountains (by the noise
Soft-showering in my ears), and, (by the touch
Of scent,) not far from roses. Turning round
I saw an arbour with a drooping roof
Of trellis vines, and bells, and larger blooms,
Like floral censers, swinging light in air;
Before its wreathed doorway, on a mound
Of moss, was spread a feast of summer fruits,
Which, nearer seen, seem'd refuse of a meal 30
By angel tasted or our Mother Eve;

For empty shells were scattered on the grass,
 And grape-stalks but half bare, and remnants more,
 Sweet-smelling, whose pure kinds I could not know.
 Still was more plenty than the fabled horn
 Thrice emptied could pour forth, at banqueting
 For Proserpine return'd to her own fields,
 Where the white heifers low. And appetite
 More yearning than on Earth I ever felt
 Growing within, I ate deliciously ; 40
 And, after not long, thirsted, for thereby
 Stood a cool vessel of transparent juice
 Sipp'd by the wander'd bee, the which I took,
 And, pledging all the mortals of the world,
 And all the dead whose names are in our lips,
 Drank. That full draught is parent of my theme.
 No Asian poppy nor elixir fine
 Of the soon-fading jealous Caliphat ;
 No poison gender'd in close monkish cell,
 To thin the scarlet conclave of old men, 50
 Could so have rapt unwilling life away.
 Among the fragrant husks and berries crush'd,
 Upon the grass I struggled hard against
 The domineering potion ; but in vain :
 The cloudy swoon came on, and down I sank,
 Like a Silenus on an antique vase.
 How long I slumber'd 'tis a chance to guess.
 When sense of life return'd, I started up
 As if with wings ; but the fair trees were gone,
 The mossy mound and arbour were no more : 60
 I look'd around upon the carved sides
 Of an old sanctuary with roof august,
 Builded so high, it seem'd that filmed clouds
 Might spread beneath, as o'er the stars of heaven ;
 So old the place was, I remember'd none
 The like upon the Earth : what I had seen
 Of grey cathedrals, buttress'd walls, rent towers,
 The superannuations of sunk realms,
 Or Nature's rocks toil'd hard in waves and winds,

45 in our lips Houghton : this looks corrupt. A more likely reading would be on our lips.

48 soon-fading] death-doing MS. rejected, fide Woodhouse.

55 sank Houghton : sunk Woodhouse.

Seem'd but the faulture of decrepit things 70
To that eternal domed Monument.—
Upon the marble at my feet there lay
Store of strange vessels and large draperies,
Which needs had been of dyed asbestos wove,
Or in that place the moth could not corrupt,
So white the linen, so, in some, distinct
Ran imageries from a sombre loom.
All in a mingled heap confus'd there lay
Robes, golden tongs, censer and chafing-dish,
Girdles, and chains, and holy jewelries. 80

Turning from these with awe, once more I rais'd
My eyes to fathom the space every way;
The embossed roof, the silent massy range
Of columns north and south, ending in mist
Of nothing, then to eastward, where black gates
Were shut against the sunrise evermore.—
Then to the west I look'd, and saw far off
An image, huge of feature as a cloud,
At level of whose feet an altar slept,
To be approach'd on either side by steps, 90
And marble balustrade, and patient travail
To count with toil the innumerable degrees.
Towards the altar sober-paced I went,
Repressing haste, as too unholy there;
And, coming nearer, saw beside the shrine
One minist'ring; and there arose a flame.—
When in mid-way the sickening East wind
Shifts sudden to the south, the small warm rain
Melts out the frozen incense from all flowers,
And fills the air with so much pleasant health 100
That even the dying man forgets his shroud;—
Even so that lofty sacrificial fire,
Sending forth Maian incense, spread around
Forgetfulness of everything but bliss,

89 slept] perhaps corrupt. The supposition to which I lean is that Keats wrote slept, meaning by a "stepped altar" an altar approached by steps, and that he had in his mind rejected that phrase by the time he wrote the next line, but failed to revise line 89 so as to do away the pleonasm.

97 As in mid-day Houghton.

And clouded all the altar with soft smoke ;
 From whose white fragrant curtains thus I heard
 Language pronounc'd : " If thou canst not ascend
 " These steps, die on that marble where thou art.
 " Thy flesh, near cousin to the common dust,
 " Will parch for lack of nutriment—thy bones 110
 " Will wither in few years, and vanish so
 " That not the quickest eye could find a grain
 " Of what thou now art on that pavement cold.
 " The sands of thy short life are spent this hour,
 " And no hand in the universe can turn
 " Thy hourglass, if these gummed leaves be burnt
 " Ere thou canst mount up these immortal steps."
 I heard, I look'd : two senses both at once,
 So fine, so subtle, felt the tyranny
 Of that fierce threat and the hard task proposed. 120
 Prodigious seem'd the toil ; the leaves were yet
 Burning—when suddenly a palsied chill
 Struck from the paved level up my limbs,
 And was ascending quick to put cold grasp
 Upon those streams that pulse beside the throat :
 I shriek'd, and the sharp anguish of my shriek
 Stung my own ears—I strove hard to escape
 The numbness ; strove to gain the lowest step.
 Slow, heavy, deadly was my pace : the cold
 Grew stifling, suffocating, at the heart ; 130
 And when I clasp'd my hands I felt them not.
 One minute before death, my iced foot touch'd
 The lowest stair ; and as it touch'd, life seem'd
 To pour in at the toes : I mounted up,
 As once fair angels on a ladder flew
 From the green turf to Heaven—" Holy Power,"
 Cried I, approaching near the horned shrine,
 " What am I that should so be saved from death ?
 " What am I that another death come not
 " To choke my utterance sacrilegious, here ?" 140
 Then said the veiled shadow—" Thou hast felt
 " What 'tis to die and live again before
 " Thy fated hour, that thou hadst power to do so

140 sacrilegious Houghton : sacriligious Woodhouse, sic de Selin- court.

"Is thy own safety ; thou hast dated on
Thy doom."—"High Prophetess," said I, "purge off,
Benign, if so it please thee, my mind's film."—
"None can usurp this height," return'd that shade,
"But those to whom the miseries of the world
"Are misery, and will not let them rest.
"All else who find a haven in the world, 150
"Where they may thoughtless sleep away their days,
"If by a chance into this fane they come,
"Rot on the pavement where thou rottedst half."—
"Are there not thousands in the world," said I,
Encourag'd by the sooth voice of the shade,
"Who love their fellows even to the death,
"Who feel the giant agony of the world,
"And more, like slaves to poor humanity,
"Labour for mortal good ? I sure should see
"Other men here ; but I am here alone." 160
"Those whom thou spak'st of are no vision'ries," Rejoin'd that voice—"They are no dreamers weak,
"They seek no wonder but the human face ;
"No music but a happy-noted voice—
"They come not here, they have no thought to come—
"And thou art here, for thou art less than they—
"What benefit canst thou, or all thy tribe,
"To the great world ? Thou art a dreaming thing,
"A fever of thyself—think of the Earth ;
"What bliss even in hope is there for thee ? 170
"What haven ? every creature hath its home ;
"Every sole man hath days of joy and pain,
"Whether his labours be sublime or low—
"The pain alone ; the joy alone ; distinct :
"Only the dreamer venoms all his days,
"Bearing more woe than all his sins deserve.
"Therefore, that happiness be somewhat shar'd,
"Such things as thou art are admitted oft
"Into like gardens thou didst pass erewhile,
"And suffer'd in these temples : for that cause 180
"Thou standest safe beneath this statue's knees."
"That I am favour'd for unworthiness,

144 thy Woodhouse : thine Houghton.

167 Woodhouse inserts do in brackets after thou : Houghton adopts do.

"By such propitious parley medicin'd
 "In sickness not ignoble, I rejoice,
 "Aye, and could weep for love of such award."
 So answer'd I, continuing, "If it please,
 "Majestic shadow, tell me: sure not all
 "Those melodies sung into the World's ear
 "Are useless: sure a poet is a sage;
 "A humanist, physician to all men. 190
 "That I am none I feel, as vultures feel
 "They are no birds when eagles are abroad.
 "What am I then: Thou spakest of my tribe:
 "What tribe?" The tall shade veil'd in drooping white
 Then spake, so much more earnest, that the breath
 Moved the thin linen folds that drooping hung
 About a golden censer from the hand
 Pendent—"Art thou not of the dreamer tribe?
 "The poet and the dreamer are distinct,
 "Diverse, sheer opposite, antipodes. 200
 "The one pours out a balm upon the World,
 "The other vexes it." Then shouted I
 Spite of myself, and with a Pythia's spleen
 "Apollo! faded! O far flown Apollo!
 "Where is thy misty pestilence to creep
 "Into the dwellings, through the door crannies
 "Of all mock lyrists, large self worshipers
 "And careless Hectorers in proud bad verse.
 "Though I breathe death with them it will be life
 "To see them sprawl before me into graves. 210
 "Majestic shadow, tell me where I am,
 "Whose altar this; for whom this incense curls;
 "What image this whose face I cannot see,
 "For the broad marble knees; and who thou art,
 "Of accent feminine so courteous?"

Then the tall shade, in drooping linens veil'd,
 Spoke out, so much more earnest, that her breath
 Stirr'd the thin folds of gauze that drooping hung
 About a golden censer from her hand
 Pendent; and by her voice I knew she shed 220
 Long-treasured tears. "This temple, sad and lone,

"Is all spar'd from the thunder of a war
"Foughten long since by giant hierarchy
"Against rebellion: this old image here,
"Whose carved features wrinkled as he fell,
"Is Saturn's; I Moneta, left supreme
"Sole Priestess of this desolation."—

I had no words to answer, for my tongue,
Useless, could find about its roofed home
No syllable of a fit majesty 230

To make rejoinder to Moneta's mourn.
There was a silence, while the altar's blaze
Was fainting for sweet food: I look'd thereon,
And on the paved floor, where nigh were piled Faggots of cinnamon, and many heaps
Of other crisped spice-wood—then again
I look'd upon the altar, and its horns
Whiten'd with ashes, and its lang'rous flame,
And then upon the offerings again;

And so by turns—till sad Moneta cried, 240
"The sacrifice is done, but not the less

"Will I be kind to thee for thy good will.
"My power, which to me is still a curse,
"Shall be to thee a wonder; for the scenes
"Still swooning vivid through my globed brain,
"With an electral changing misery,
"Thou shalt with these dull mortal eyes behold,
"Free from all pain, if wonder pain thee not."

As near as an immortal's spher'd words
Could to a mother's soften, were these last: 250

And yet I had a terror of her robes,
And chiefly of the veils, that from her brow
Hung pale, and curtain'd her in mysteries,
That made my heart too small to hold its blood.
This saw that Goddess, and with sacred hand
Parted the veils. Then saw I a wan face,
Not pin'd by human sorrows, but bright-blanch'd
By an immortal sickness which kills not;
It works a constant change, which happy death
Can put no end to; deathwards progressing 260
To no death was that visage; it had past

227 Priestess Woodhouse: goddess Houghton.

The lilly and the snow; and beyond these
I must not think now, though I saw that face—
But for her eyes I should have fled away.
They held me back, with a benignant light,
Soft mitigated by divinest lids
Half-closed, and visionless entire they seem'd
Of all external things;—they saw me not,
But in blank splendor, beam'd like the mild moon,
Who comforts those she sees not, who knows not
What eyes are upward cast. As I had found 271
A grain of gold upon a mountain's side,
And twing'd with avarice strain'd out my eyes
To search its sullen entrails rich with ore,
So at the view of sad Moneta's brow.
I ask'd to see what things the hollow brain
Behind environed: what high tragedy
In the dark secret chambers of her skull
Was acting, that could give so dread a stress
To her cold lips, and fill with such a light 280
Her planetary eyes; and touch her voice
With such a sorrow—"Shade of Memory!"—
Cried I, with act adorant at her feet.
"By all the gloom hung round thy fallen house,
"By this last temple, by the golden age,
"By great Apollo, thy dear Foster Child,
"And by thyself, forlorn divinity,
"The pale Omega of a withered race,
"Let me behold, according as thou saidst,
"What in thy brain so ferments to and fro!" 290
No sooner had this conjuration pass'd
My devout lips, than side by side we stood
(Like a stunt bramble by a solemn pine)
Deep in the shady sadness of a vale,
Far sunken from the healthy breath of morn,
Far from the fiery noon and eve's one star.
Onward I look'd beneath the gloomy boughs,
And saw, what first I thought an image huge,
Like to the image pedestal'd so high
In Saturn's temple. Then Moneta's voice 300
Came brief upon mine ear—"So Saturn sat
When he had lost his Realms—" whereon there grew 277 environed] probably a transcriber's misreading of envisioned.

A power within me of enormous ken
 To see as a god sees, and take the depth
 Of things as nimbly as the outward eye
 Can size and shape pervade. The lofty theme
 At those few words hung vast before my mind,
 With half-unravel'd web. I set myself
 Upon an eagle's watch, that I might see,
 And seeing ne'er forget. No stir of life 310
 Was in this shrouded vale, not so much air
 As in the zoning of a summer's day
 Robs not one light seed from the feather'd grass,
 But where the dead leaf fell there did it rest:
 A stream went voiceless by, still deaden'd more
 By reason of the fallen divinity
 Spreading more shade; the Naiad 'mid her reeds
 Prest her cold finger closer to her lips.

Along the margin-sand large footmarks went
 No farther than to where old Saturn's feet 320
 Had rested, and there slept, how long a sleep!
 Degraded, cold, upon the sodden ground
 His old right hand lay nerveless, listless, dead,
 Unseptr'd; and his realmless eyes were clos'd,
 While his bow'd head seem'd listening to the Earth,
 His ancient mother, for some comfort yet.

It seem'd no force could wake him from his place;
 But there came one who, with a kindred hand
 Touch'd his wide shoulders after bending low
 With reverence, though to one who knew it not. 330
 Then came the griev'd voice of Mnemosyne,
 And griev'd I hearken'd. "That divinity
 "Whom thou saw'st step from yon forlornest wood,
 "And with slow pace approach our fallen King,
 "Is Thea, softest-natur'd of our Brood."
 I mark'd the Goddess in fair statuary
 Surpassing wan Moneta by the head,
 And in her sorrow nearer woman's tears.

307 At Woodhouse: Of Houghton.

308 set] sat Houghton, following Woodhouse (?); but this must be a mistranscription from Keats's manuscript.

315 voiceless Woodhouse: noiseless Houghton.

320 farther Woodhouse: further Houghton.

There was a listening fear in her regard,
 As if calamity had but begun ; 340
 As if the vanward clouds of evil days
 Had spent their malice, and the sullen rear
 Was with its stored thunder labouring up.
 One hand she press'd upon that aching spot
 Where beats the human heart, as if just there,
 Though an immortal, she felt cruel pain ;
 The other upon Saturn's bended neck
 She laid, and to the level of his hollow ear
 Leaning with parted lips, some words she spake
 In solemn tenor and deep organ tune ; 350
 Some mourning words, which in our feeble tongue
 Would come in this-like accenting ; how frail
 To that large utterance of the early Gods !

"Saturn ! look up—and for what, poor lost King ?
 "I have no comfort for thee ; no not one ;
 "I cannot say, wherefore thus sleepest thou ?
 "For Heaven is parted from thee, and the Earth
 "Knows thee not, so afflicted, for a God ;
 "And Ocean too, with all its solemn noise,
 "Has from thy sceptre pass'd, and all the air 360
 "Is emptied of thine hoary majesty :
 "Thy thunder, captious at the new command,
 "Rumbles reluctant o'er our fallen house ;
 "And thy sharp lightning, in unpracticed hands,
 "Scorches and burns our once serene domain.
 "With such remorseless speed still come new woes,
 "That unbelief has not a space to breathe.
 "Saturn ! sleep on :—Me thoughtless, why should I
 "Thus violate thy slumbrous solitude ?
 "Why should I ope thy melancholy eyes ? 370
 "Saturn, sleep on, while at thy feet I weep."

Dream, and so dream all night without a noise,
Save from one gradual solitary gust,
Swelling upon the silence; dying off;
As if the ebbing air had but one wave;
So came these words, and went; the while in tears
She prest her fair large forehead to the earth, 379
Just where her fallen hair might spread in curls,
A soft and silken mat for Saturn's feet.
Long, long these two were postured motionless,
Like sculpture builded-up upon the grave
Of their own power. A long awful time
I look'd upon them: still they were the same;
The frozen God still bending to the earth,
And the sad Goddess weeping at his feet,
Moneta silent. Without stay or prop,
But my own weak mortality, I bore
The load of this eternal quietude, 380
The unchanging gloom, and the three fixed shapes
Ponderous upon my senses, a whole moon.
For by my burning brain I measured sure
Her silver seasons shedded on the night,
And every day by day methought I grew
More gaunt and ghostly.— Oftentimes I pray'd
Intense, that Death would take me from the Vale
And all its burthens—gasping with despair
Of change, hour after hour I curs'd myself;
Until old Saturn rais'd his faded eyes, 400
And look'd around and saw his kingdom gone,
And all the gloom and sorrow of the place,
And that fair kneeling Goddess at his feet.
As the moist scent of flowers, and grass, and leaves,
Fills forest dells with a pervading air,
Known to the woodland nostril, so the words
Of Saturn fill'd the mossy glooms around,
Even to the hollows of time-eaten oaks,
And to the windings of the foxes' hole,
With sad low tones, while thus he spake, and sent
Strange musings to the solitary Pan. 411
“Moan, brethren, moan; for we are swallow'd up

"And buried from all Godlike exercise
 "Of influence benign on planets pale,
 "And peaceful sway above man's harvesting, 415
 "And all those acts which Deity supreme
 "Doth ease its heart of love in. Moan and wail,
 "Moan, brethren, moan; for lo, the rebel spheres
 "Spin round, the stars their ancient courses keep,
 "Clouds still with shadowy moisture haunt the earth,
 "Still suck their fill of light from sun and moon;
 "Still buds the tree, and still the sea-shores murmur;
 "There is no death in all the Universe, 423
 "No smell of death—there shall be death—Moan, moan,
 "Moan, Cybele, moan; for thy pernicious Babes
 "Have changed a god into an aching Palsy.
 "Moan, brethren, moan, for I have no strength left,
 "Weak as the reed—weak—feeble as my voice—
 "O, O, the pain, the pain of feebleness.
 "Moan, moan, for still I thaw—or give me help;
 "Throw down those imps, and give me victory. 431
 "Let me hear other groans, and trumpets blown
 "Of triumph calm, and hymns of festival,
 "From the gold peaks of Heaven's high-piled clouds;
 "Voices of soft proclaim, and silver stir
 "Of strings in hollow shells; and there shall be
 "Beautiful things made new for the surprise
 "Of the sky-children." So he feebly ceas'd,
 With such a poor and sickly sounding pause,
 Methought I heard some old man of the earth 440
 Bewailing earthly loss; nor could my eyes
 And ears act with that pleasant unison of sense
 Which marries sweet sound with the grace of form,
 And dolorous accent from a tragic harp
 With large-limb'd visions.—More I scrutinized:
 Still fix'd he sat beneath the sable trees,
 Whose arms spread straggling in wild serpent forms,
 With leaves all hush'd; his awful presence there
 (Now all was silent) gave a deadly lie
 To what I erewhile heard—only his lips 450
 Trembled amid the white curls of his beard.

They told the truth, though, round, the snowy locks
 Hung nobly, as upon the face of heaven
 A mid-day fleece of clouds. Thea arose,
 And stretched her white arm through the hollow dark,
 Pointing some whither: whereat he too rose
 Like a vast giant, seen by men at sea
 To grow pale from the waves at dull midnight.
 They melted from my sight into the woods;
 Ere I could turn, Moneta cried, "These twain 460
 "Are speeding to the families of grief,
 "Where roof'd in by black rocks they waste, in pain
 "And darkness, for no hope."—And she spake on,
 As ye may read who can unwearied pass
 Onward from th' Antichamber of this dream,
 Where even at the open doors awhile
 I must delay, and glean my memory
 Of her high phrase:—perhaps no further dare.

END OF CANTO I.

CANTO II.

"MORTAL, that thou may'st understand aright,
 "I humanize my sayings to thine ear,
 "Making comparisons of earthly things;
 "Or thou might'st better listen to the wind,
 "Whose language is to thee a barren noise,
 "Though it blows legend-laden thro' the trees.—
 "In melancholy realms big tears are shed,
 "More sorrow like to this, and such like woe,
 "Too huge for mortal tongue, or pen of scribe.
 "The Titans fierce, self hid or prison bound, 10
 "Groan for the old allegiance once more,
 "Listening in their doom for Saturn's voice.
 "But one of our whole eagle-brood still keeps
 "His sov'reignty, and rule, and majesty;

 "Still sits, still snuffs the incense teeming up

 "Nor at dog's howl or gloom-bird's Even screech, 20
 "Or the familiar visitings of one
 "Upon the first toll of his passing bell:
 "But horrors, portioned to a giant nerve,
 "Make great Hyperion ache. His palace bright,
 "Bastion'd with pyramids of glowing gold,
 "And touch'd with shade of bronzed obelisks,
 "Glares a blood-red thro' all the thousand courts,
 "Arches, and domes, and fiery galleries:
 "And all its curtains of Aurorian clouds

 "Instead of sweets, his ample palate takes

 "Wherefore when harbour'd in the sleepy West,
 "After the full completion of fair day,
 "For rest divine upon exalted couch
 "And slumber in the arms of melody,
 "He paces through the pleasant hours of ease
 "With strides colossal, on from hall to hall;
 "While far within each aisle and deep recess 40
 "His winged minions in close clusters stand
 "Amaz'd, and full of fear; like anxious men,

That in its lucid depth reflected pure
Her priestess-garments.—My quick eyes ran on
From stately nave to nave, from vault to vault,
Through bow'rs of fragrant and enwreathed light
And diamond-paved lustrous long arcades.
Anon rush'd by the bright Hyperion ;
His flaming robes stream'd out beyond his heels,
And gave a roar, as if of earthly fire,
That scared away the meek ethereal hours, 60
And made their dove-wings tremble. On he flared.

THE CAP AND BELLS
OR THE JEALOUSIES

A FAERY TALE—UNFINISHED

THE CAP AND BELLS

OR THE JEALOUSIES

A FAERY TALE—UNFINISHED

I.

IN midmost Ind, beside Hydaspes cool,
There stood, or hover'd, tremulous in the air,
A faery city, 'neath the potent rule
Of Emperor Elfinan; fam'd ev'rywhere
For love of mortal women, maidens fair,
Whose lips were solid, whose soft hands were made
Of a fit mould and beauty, ripe and rare,
To pamper his slight wooing, warm yet staid:
He lov'd girls smooth as shades, but hated a mere shade.

II.

This was a crime forbidden by the law;
And all the priesthood of his city wept,
For ruin and dismay they well foresaw,
If impious prince no bound or limit kept,
And faery Zendervester overstept;
They wept, he sin'd, and still he would sin on,
They dreamt of sin, and he sin'd while they slept;
In vain the pulpit thunder'd at the throne,
Caricature was vain, and vain the tart lampoon.

III.

Which seeing, his high court of parliament
Laid a remonstrance at his Highness' feet,
Praying his royal senses to content
Themselves with what in faery land was sweet,
Befitting best that shade with shade should meet:
Whereat, to calm their fears, he promis'd soon
From mortal tempters all to make retreat,—
Aye, even on the first of the new moon,
An immaterial wife to espouse as heaven's boon.

IV.

Meantime he sent a fluttering embassy
 To Pigmio, of Imaus sovereign,
 To half beg, and half demand, respectfully,
 The hand of his fair daughter Bellanaine;
 An audience had, and speeching done, they gain
 Their point, and bring the weeping bride away;
 Whom, with but one attendant, safely lain
 Upon their wings, they bore in bright array,
 While little harps were touch'd by many a lyric fay.

V.

As in old pictures tender cherubim
 A child's soul thro' the sapphir'd canvas bear,
 So, thro' a real heaven, on they swim
 With the sweet princess on her plumag'd lair,
 Speed giving to the winds her lustrous hair;
 And so she journey'd, sleeping or awake,
 Save when, for healthful exercise and air,
 She chose to promener à l'aile, or take
 A pigeon's somerset, for sport or change's sake.

VI.

"Dear Princess, do not whisper me so loud,"
 Quoth Corallina, nurse and confidant,
 "Do not you see there, lurking in a cloud,
 Close at your back, that sly old Crafticant?
 He hears a whisper plainer than a rant:
 Dry up your tears, and do not look so blue;
 He's Elfinan's great state-spy militant,
 His running, lying, flying foot-man too,—
 Dear mistress, let him have no handle against you!

VII.

"Show him a mouse's tail, and he will guess,
 With metaphysic swiftness, at the mouse;
 Show him a garden, and with speed no less,
 He'll surmise sagely of a dwelling house,
 And plot, in the same minute, how to chouse

V 1-2 As in old Pictures Cherubs bear aloft
 The souls of children Hicograph, rejected.

The owner out of it ; show him a"— "Peace!
Peace! nor contrive thy mistress' ire to rouse!"
Return'd the Princess, "my tongue shall not cease
Till from this hated match I get a free release.

VIII.

"Ah, beauteous mortal!" "Hush!" quoth Coralline,
"Really you must not talk of him, indeed."
"You hush!" replied the mistress, with a shine
Of anger in her eyes, enough to breed
In stouter hearts than nurse's fear and dread:
'Twas not the glance itself made nurse's flinch,
But of its threat she took the utmost heed;
Not liking in her heart an hour-long pinch,
Or a sharp needle run into her back an inch.

IX.

So she was silenc'd, and fair Bellanaine,
Writhing her little body with ennui,
Continued to lament and to complain,
That Fate, cross-purposing, should let her be
Ravish'd away far from her dear countree;
That all her feelings should be set at naught,
In trumping up this match so hastily,
With lowland blood; and lowland blood she thought
Poison, as every staunch true-born Imaian ought.

X.

Sorely she griev'd, and wetted three or four
White Provence rose-leaves with her faery tears,
But not for this cause;—alas! she had more
Bad reasons for her sorrow, as appears
In the fam'd memoirs of a thousand years,
Written by Crafticant, and published
By Parpaglion and Co., (those sly compeers
Who rak'd up ev'ry fact against the dead.)
In Scarab Street, Panthea, at the Jubal's Head.

XI.

Where, after a long hypercritic howl
Against the vicious manners of the age
He goes on to expose, with heart and soul,
What vice in this or that year was the rage,
Backbiting all the world in every page;

With special strictures on the horrid crime,
 (Section'd and subsection'd with learning sage,)
 Of faeries stooping on their wings sublime
 To kiss a mortal's lips, when such were in their prime.

XII.

Turn to the copious index, you will find
 Somewhere in the column, headed letter B,
 The name of Bellanaine, if you're not blind ;
 Then pray refer to the text, and you will see
 An article made up of calumny
 Against this highland princess, rating her
 For giving way, so over fashionably,
 To this new-fangled vice, which seems a burr
 Stuck in his moral throat, no coughing e'er could stir.

XIII.

There he says plainly that she lov'd a man !
 That she around him flutter'd, flirted, toy'd,
 Before her marriage with great Elfinan ;
 That after marriage too, she never joy'd
 In husband's company, but still employ'd
 Her wits to 'scape away to Angle-land ;
 Where liv'd the youth, who worried and annoy'd
 Her tender heart, and its warm ardours fann'd
 To such a dreadful blaze, her side would scorch her hand.

XIV.

But let us leave this idle tittle-tattle
 To waiting-maids, and bed-room coteries,
 Nor till fit time against her fame wage battle.
 Poor Elfinan is very ill at ease,
 Let us resume his subject if you please :
 For it may comfort and console him much
 To rhyme and syllable his miseries ;
 Poor Elfinan ! whose cruel fate was such,
 He sat and curs'd a bride he knew he could not touch.

XV.

Soon as (according to his promises)
 The bridal embassy had taken wing,
 And vanish'd, bird-like, o'er the suburb trees,
 The Emperor, empiere'd with the sharp sting
 Of love, retired, vex'd and murmuring

Like any drone shut from the fair bee-queen,
Into his cabinet, and there did fling
His limbs upon a sofa, full of spleen,
And damn'd his House of Commons, in complete chagrin.

XVI.

"I'll trounce some of the members," cried the Prince,
"I'll put a mark against some rebel names,
I'll make the Opposition-benches wince,
I'll show them very soon, to all their shames,
What 'tis to smother up a Prince's flames;
That ministers should join in it, I own,
Surprises me!—they too at these high games!
Am I an Emperor? Do I wear a crown?
Imperial Elfinan, go hang thyself or drown!

XVII.

"I'll trounce 'em!—there's the square-cut chancellor,
His son shall never touch that bishopric;
And for the nephew of old Palfior,
I'll show him that his speech has made me sick,
And give the colonelcy to Phalaric;
The tiptoe marquis, moral and gallant,
Shall lodge in shabby taverns upon tick;
And for the Speaker's second cousin's aunt,
She sha'n't be maid of honour,—by heaven that she sha'n't!

XVIII.

"I'll shirk the Duke of A.; I'll cut his brother;
I'll give no garter to his eldest son;
I won't speak to his sister or his mother!
The Viscount B. shall live at cut-and-run;
But how in the world can I contrive to stun
That fellow's voice, which plagues me worse than any,
That stubborn fool, that impudent state-dun,
Who sets down ev'ry sovereign as a zany,—
That vulgar commoner, Esquire Biancopany?

XVIII 9 Biancopany = Whitbread.

XIX.

"Monstrous affair! Pshaw! pah! what ugly minx
 Will they fetch from Imaus for my bride?
 Alas! my wearied heart within me sinks,
 To think that I must be so near allied
 To a cold dullard fay,—ah, woe betide!
 Ah, fairest of all human loveliness!
 Sweet Bertha! what crime can it be to glide
 About the fragrant pleatings of thy dress,
 Or kiss thine eyes, or count thy locks, tress after tress?"

XX.

So said, one minute's while his eyes remain'd
 Half lidded, piteous, languid, innocent;
 But, in a wink, their splendour they regain'd,
 Sparkling revenge with amorous fury blent.
 Love thwarted in bad temper oft has vent:
 He rose, he stamp'd his foot, he rang the bell,
 And order'd some death-warrants to be sent
 For signature:—somewhere the tempest fell,
 As many a poor felon does not live to tell.

XXI.

"At the same time Eban,"—(this was his page,
 A fay of colour, slave from top to toe,
 Sent as a present, while yet under age,
 From the Viceroy of Zanguebar,—wise, slow,
 His speech, his only words were "yes" and "no,"
 But swift of look, and foot, and wing was he,—)
 "At the same time, Eban, this instant go
 To Hum the soothsayer, whose name I see
 Among the fresh arrivals in our empery.

XXII.

"Bring Hum to me! But stay—here, take my ring,
 The pledge of favour, that he not suspect
 Any foul play, or awkward murdering,
 Tho' I have bowstrung many of his sect;
 Throw in a hint, that if he should neglect

XX 1 So saying his eyes one minute's while were soft
Holograph, rejected.

One hour, the next shall see him in my grasp,
And the next after that shall see him neck'd,
Or swallow'd by my hunger-starved asp,—
And mention ('tis as well) the torture of the wasp."

XXIII.

These orders given, the Prince, in half a pet,
Let o'er the silk his propping elbow slide,
Caught up his little legs, and, in a fret,
Fell on the sofa on his royal side.
The slave retreated backwards, humble-eyed,
And with a slave-like silence clos'd the door,
And to old Hum thro' street and alley hied;
He "knew the city," as we say, of yore,
And for short cuts and turns, was nobody knew more.

XXIV.

It was the time when wholesale houses close
Their shutters with a moody sense of wealth,
But retail dealers, diligent, let loose
The gas (objected to on score of health),
Convey'd in little solder'd pipes by stealth,
And make it flare in many a brilliant form,
That all the powers of darkness it repell'th,
Which to the oil-trade doth great scaith and harm,
And supersedeth quite the use of the glow-worm.

XXV.

Eban, untempted by the pastry-cooks,
(Of pastry he got store within the palace,)
With hasty steps, wrapp'd cloak, and solemn looks,
Incognito upon his errand sallies,
His smelling-bottle ready for the allies;
He pass'd the Hurdy-gurdies with disdain,
Vowing he'd have them sent aboard the gallies;
Just as he made his vow, it 'gan to rain,
Therefore he call'd a coach, and bade it drive amain.

XXVI.

"I'll pull the string," said he, and further said,
"Polluted Jarvey! Ah, thou filthy hack!
Whose springs of life are all dried up and dead,
Whose linsey-woolsey lining hangs all slack,
Whose rug is straw, whose wholeness is a crack;

And evermore thy steps go clatter-clitter;
 Whose glass once up can never be got back,
 Who prov'st, with jolting arguments and bitter,
 That 'tis of modern use to travel in a litter.

XXVII.

"Thou inconvenience! thou hungry crop
 For all corn! thou snail-creeper to and fro,
 Who while thou goest ever seem'st to stop,
 And fiddle-faddle standest while you go;
 I' the morning, freighted with a weight of woe,
 Unto some lazar-house thou journeyest,
 And in the evening tak'st a double row
 Of dowdies, for some dance or party drest,
 Besides the goods meanwhile thou movest east and west.

XXVIII.

"By thy ungallant bearing and sad mien,
 An inch appears the utmost thou couldst budge;
 Yet at the slightest nod, or hint, or sign,
 Round to the curb-stone patient dost thou trudge,
 School'd in a beckon, learned in a nudge,
 A dull-eyed Argus watching for a fare;
 Quiet and plodding, thou dost bear no grudge
 To whisking Tilburies, or Phaetons rare,
 Curricles, or Mail-coaches, swift beyond compare."

XXIX.

Philosophizing thus, he pull'd the check,
 And bade the Coachman wheel to such a street,
 Who, turning much his body, more his neck,
 Louted full low, and hoarsely did him greet:
 "Certes, Monsieur were best take to his feet,

XXVIII 5 As courteous to a Cobler as a Judge
MS., cancelled.

XXIX The following stanza is cancelled in the MS. after XXIX.

"Ho! Ho thought Eban so this Signor Hum
 A conversazione holds tonight
 Whene'er he beats his literary drum
 The learned muster round all right and tight

Seeing his servant can no further drive
For press of coaches, that to-night here meet
Many as bees about a straw-capp'd hive,
When first for April honey into faint flowers they dive."

XXX.

Eban then paid his fare, and tiptoe went
To Hum's hotel; and, as he on did pass
With head inclin'd, each dusky lineament
Show'd in the pearl-pav'd street, as in a glass;
His purple vest, that ever peeping was
Rich from the fluttering crimson of his cloak,
His silvery trowsers, and his silken sash
Tied in a burnish'd knot, their semblance took
Upon the mirror'd walls, wherever he might look.

XXXI.

He smil'd at self, and, smiling, show'd his teeth,
And seeing his white teeth, he smil'd the more;
Lifted his eye-brows, spurn'd the path beneath,
Show'd teeth again, and smil'd as heretofore,
Until he knock'd at the magician's door;
Where, till the porter answer'd, might be seen,
In the clear panel more he could adore,—
His turban wreath'd of gold, and white, and green,
Mustachios, ear-ring, nose-ring, and his sabre keen.

XXXII.

"Does not your master give a rout to-night?"
Quoth the dark page. "Oh, no!" return'd the Swiss,
"Next door but one to us, upon the right,
The Magazin des Modes now open is Against the Emperor's wedding;—and, sir, this
My master finds a monstrous horrid bore;
As he retir'd, an hour ago I wis,
With his best beard and brimstone, to explore
And cast a quiet figure in his second floor.

Drest in best black to talk by candle light."
E'en while he thought, for eighteen penny fare
He paid a half penny by cunning sleight
Made argent; then with self-contented Air
Broke through the Crowd to Hums, and all the world was there.

XXXIII.

"Gad! he's oblig'd to stick to business!
 For chalk, I hear, stands at a pretty price;
 And as for aqua vitæ—there's a mess!
 The dentes sapientiæ of mice,
 Our barber tells me too, are on the rise,—
 Tinder's a lighter article,—nitre pure
 Goes off like lightning,—grains of Paradise
 At an enormous figure!—stars not sure!—
 Zodiac will not move without a sly douceur!

XXXIV.

"Venus won't stir a peg without a fee,
 And master is too partial, entre nous,
 To—" "Hush—hush!" cried Eban, "sure that is he
 Coming down stairs,—by St. Bartholomew!
 As backwards as he can,—is't something new?
 Or is't his custom, in the name of fun?"
 "He always comes down backward, with one shoe"—
 Return'd the porter—"off, and one shoe on.
 Like, saving shoe for sock or stocking, my man John!"

XXXV.

It was indeed the great Magician,
 Feeling, with careful toe, for every stair,
 And retrograding careful as he can,
 Backwards and downwards from his own two pair:
 "Salpietro!" exclaim'd Hum, "is the dog there?
 He's always in my way upon the mat!"
 "He's in the kitchen, or the Lord knows where."— Replied the Swiss,—"the nasty, yelping brat!"
 "Don't beat him!" return'd Hum, and on the floor came pat.

XXXVI.

Then facing right about, he saw the Page,
 And said: "Don't tell me what you want. Eban;
 The Emperor is now in a huge rage,—
 'Tis nine to one he'll give you the rattan!
 Let us away!" Away together ran

XXXV 8 yelping] whelping MS. and Houghton.

The plain-dress'd sage and spangled blackamoor.
Nor rested till they stood to cool, and fan,
And breathe themselves at the Emperor's chamber door,
When Eban thought he heard a soft imperial snore.

XXXVII.

"I thought you guess'd, foretold, or prophesied,
That's Majesty was in a raving fit?"
"He dreams," said Hum, "or I have ever lied.
That he is tearing you, sir, bit by bit."
"He's not asleep, and you have little wit,"
Replied the page: "that little buzzing noise,
Whate'er your palmistry may make of it,
Comes from a play-thing of the Emperor's choice,
From a Man-Tiger-Organ, prettiest of his toys."

XXXVIII.

Eban then usher'd in the learned Seer:
Elfinan's back was turn'd, but, ne'ertheless,
Both, prostrate on the carpet, ear by ear,
Crept silently, and waited in distress,
Knowing the Emperor's moody bitterness;
Eban especially, who on the floor 'gan
Tremble and quake to death,—he feared less
A dose of senna-tea or nightmare Gorgon
Than the Emperor when he play'd on his Man-Tiger-Organ.

XXXIX.

They kiss'd nine times the carpet's velvet face
Of glossy silk, soft, smooth, and meadow-green,
Where the close eye in deep rich fur might trace
A silver tissue, scanty to be seen,
As daisies lurk'd in June-grass, buds in treen;
Sudden the music ceased, sudden the hand
Of majesty, by dint of passion keen,
Doubled into a common fist, went grand,
And knock'd down three cut glasses, and his best ink-stand.

XL.

Then turning round, he saw those trembling two:
 "Eban," said he, "as slaves should taste the fruits
 Of diligence, I shall remember you
 To-morrow, or the next day, as time suits,
 In a finger conversation with my mutes,—
 Begone!—for you, Chaldean! here remain!
 Fear not, quake not, and as good wine recruits
 A conjurer's spirits, what cup will you drain?
 Sherry in silver, hock in gold, or glass'd champagne?"

XLI.

"Commander of the Faithful!" answer'd Hum,
 "In preference to these, I'll merely taste
 A thimble-full of old Jamaica rum."
 "A simple boon!" said Elfinan; "thou may'st
 Have Nantz, with which my morning-coffee's lac'd."
 "I'll have a glass of Nantz, then,"—said the Seer,—
 "Made racy—(sure my boldness is misplac'd!)—
 With the third part—(yet that is drinking dear!)—
 Of the least drop of crème de citron, crystal clear."

XLII.

"I pledge you, Hum! and pledge my dearest love,
 My Bertha!" "Bertha! Bertha!" cried the sage,
 "I know a many Berthas!" "Mine's above
 All Berthas!" sighed the Emperor. "I engage,"
 Said Hum, "in duty, and in vassalage,
 To mention all the Berthas in the Earth;—
 There's Bertha Watson,—and Miss Bertha Page,—
 This fam'd for languid eyes, and that for mirth,—
 There's Bertha Blount of York,—and Bertha Knox of Perth."

XLIII.

"You seem to know"—"I do know," answer'd Hum,
 "Your Majesty's in love with some fine girl
 Named Bertha; but her surname will not come,
 Without a little conjuring." "'Tis Pearl,
 'Tis Bertha Pearl that makes my brains so whirl;

And she is softer, fairer than her name!"

"Where does she live?" ask'd Hum. "Her fair locks curl

So brightly, they put all our fays to shame!—
Live?—O! at Canterbury, with her old grand-dame."

XLIV.

"Good! good!" cried Hum, "I've known her from a child!

She is a changeling of my management;
She was born at midnight in an Indian wild;
Her mother's screams with the striped tiger's blent,
While the torch-bearing slaves a halloo sent
Into the jungles; and her palanquin,
Rested amid the desert's dreariment,
Shook with her agony, till fair were seen
The little Bertha's eyes oped on the stars serene."

XLV.

"I can't say," said the monarch; "that may be
Just as it happen'd, true or else a bam!

Drink up your brandy, and sit down by me,
Feel, feel my pulse, how much in love I am;
And if your science is not all a sham,
Tell me some means to get the lady here."

"Upon my honour!" said the son of Cham,

"She is my dainty changeling, near and dear,
Although her story sounds at first a little queer."

XLVI.

"Convey her to me, Hum, or by my crown,
My sceptre, and my cross-surmounted globe,
I'll knock you"—"Does your majesty mean—down?
No, no, you never could my feelings probe
To such a depth!" The Emperor took his robe,

And wept upon its purple palatine,
While Hum continued, shamming half a sob,—

"In Canterbury doth your lady shine?
But let me cool your brandy with a little wine."

XLVII.

Whereat a narrow Flemish glass he took,
 That once belong'd to Admiral de Witt,
 Admir'd it with a connoisseuring look,
 And with the ripest claret crowned it,
 And, ere one lively bead could burst and flit,
 He turn'd it quickly, nimbly upside down,
 His mouth being held conveniently fit
 To catch the treasure: "Best in all the town!"
 He said, smack'd his moist lips, and gave a pleasant frown.

XLVIII.

"Ah! good my Prince, weep not!" And then again
 He fill'd a bumper. "Great Sire, do not weep!
 Your pulse is shocking, but I'll ease your pain."
 "Fetch me that Ottoman, and prithee keep
 Your voice low," said the Emperor; "and steep
 Some lady's-fingers nice in Candy wine;
 And prithee, Hum, behind the screen do peep
 For the rose-water vase, magician mine!
 And sponge my forehead,—so my love doth make me pine.

XLIX.

"Ah, cursed Bellanaine!" "Don't think of her,"
 Rejoin'd the Mago, "but on Bertha muse;
 For, by my choicest best barometer,
 You shall not throttled be in marriage noose;
 I've said it, Sire; you only have to choose
 Bertha or Bellanaine." So saying, he drew
 From the left pocket of his threadbare hose,
 A sampler hoarded slyly, good as new,
 Holding it by his thumb and finger full in view.

L.

"Sire, this is Bertha Pearl's neat handy-work,
 Her name, see here, Midsummer, ninety-one."
 Elfinan snatch'd it with a sudden jerk,
 And wept as if he never would have done.

Honouring with royal tears the poor homespun ;
Whereon were broider'd tigers with black eyes,
And long-tail'd pheasants, and a rising sun,
Plenty of posies, great stags, butterflies
Bigger than stags,—a moon,—with other mysteries.

LI.

The monarch handled o'er and o'er again
These day-school hieroglyphics with a sigh ;
Somewhat in sadness, but pleas'd in the main,
Till this oracular couplet met his eye
Astounded—Cupid I, do thee defy!
It was too much. He shrunk back in his chair,
Grew pale as death, and fainted—very nigh!
"Pho! nonsense!" exclaim'd Hum, "now don't despair ;
She does not mean it really. Cheer up hearty there!

LII.

"And listen to my words. You say you won't,
On any terms, marry Miss Bellanaine ;
It goes against your conscience—good! Well, don't.
You say you love a mortal. I would fain
Persuade your honour's highness to refrain
From peccadilloes. But, Sire, as I say,
What good would that do? And, to be more plain,
You would do me a mischief some odd day,
Cut off my ears and hands, or head too, by my fay!

LIII.

"Besides, manners forbid that I should pass any
Vile strictures on the conduct of a prince
Who should indulge his genius, if he has any,
Not, like a subject, foolish matters mince.

LI In the MS. the first word of line 2 is unquestionably These : the Those of the Houghton text is likely to be unauthorized. In line 5 the "oracular couplet" has the comma after I instead of after Cupid as in the Houghton text. Keats's own punctuation preserves what we editors failed to bring out, that Bertha's sampler made two lines of her defiance—

CUPID I DO THEE DEFY.

Now I think on 't, perhaps I could convince
Your Majesty there is no crime at 'all
In loving pretty little Bertha, since
She's very delicate,—not over tall,—
A fairy's hand, and in the waist, why—very small."

LIV.

"Ring the repeater, gentle Hum!" "Tis five,"
Said gentle Hum; "the nights draw in apace;
The little birds I hear are all alive;
I see the dawning touch'd upon your face;
Shall I put out the candles, please your Grace?"
"Do put them out, and, without more ado,
Tell me how I may that sweet girl embrace,—
How you can bring her to me." "That's for you,
Great Emperor! to adventure, like a lover true."

LV.

"I fetch her!"—"Yes, an't like your Majesty:
And as she would be frighten'd wide awake
To travel such a distance through the sky,
Use of some soft manœuvre you must make,
For your convenience, and her dear nerves' sake:
Nice way would be to bring her in a swoon,
Anon, I'll tell what course were best to take;
You must away this morning." "Hum! so soon?"
"Sire, you must be in Kent by twelve o'clock at noon."

LVI.

At this great Cæsar started on his feet,
Lifted his wings, and stood attentive-wise.
"Those wings to Canterbury you must beat,
If you hold Bertha as a worthy prize.
Look in the Almanack—Moore never lies—
April the twenty-fourth,—this coming day,
Now breathing its new bloom upon the skies,
Will end in St. Mark's Eve;—you must away.
For on that eve alone can you the maid convey."

LVI 7 Now spreading its yo[u]ng bloom upon the sky,
MS., rejected.

Two rejected readings in this stanza are of unusual interest:

April the twenty fifth this very morn
Is sacred to St. Mark and

Ends quiet in St Agnes E[ve].

LVII.

Then the magician solemnly 'gan frown,
 So that his frost-white eyebrows, beetling low,
 Shaded his deep-green eyes, and wrinkles brown
 Plaited upon his furnace-scorched brow :
 Forth from the hood that hung his neck below,
 He lifted a bright casket of pure gold,
 Touch'd a spring-lock, and there in wool, or snow
 Charm'd into ever-freezing, lay an old
 And legend-leaved book, mysterious to behold.

LVIII.

"Take this same book,—it will not bite you, Sire ;
 There, put it underneath your royal arm ;
 Though it's a pretty weight it will not tire,
 But rather on your journey keep you warm :
 This is the magic, this the potent charm,
 That shall drive Bertha to a fainting fit !
 When the time comes, don't feel the least alarm,
 Uplift her from the ground, and swiftly flit
 Back to your palace, where I wait for guerdon fit."

LIX.

"What shall I do with this same book?" "Why merely
 Lay it on Bertha's table, close beside
 Her work-box, and 'twill help your purpose dearly ;
 I say no more." "Or good or ill betide,
 Through the wide air to Kent this morn I glide !"
 Exclaim'd the Emperor. "When I return,
 Ask what you will,—I'll give you my new bride!
 And take some more wine, Hum ;—O Heavens !
 I burn
 To be upon the wing ! Now, now, that minx I spurn !"

LX.

"Leave her to me," rejoind the magian :
 "But how shall I account, illustrious fay !
 For thine imperial absence ? Pho ! I can Say you are very sick, and bar the way

To your so loving courtiers for one day ;
 If either of their two archbishops' graces
 Should talk of extreme unction, I shall say
 You do not like cold pig with Latin phrases,
 Which never should be used but in alarming cases."

LXI.

"Open the window, Hum ; I'm ready now !"
 "Zooks !" exclaim'd Hum, as up the sash he drew,
 "Behold, your Majesty, upon the brow
 Of yonder hill, what crowds of people !" "Whew !
 The monster's always after something new,"
 Return'd his Highness, "they are piping hot
 To see my pigsny Bellanaine. Hum ! do
 Tighten my belt a little,—so, so,—not Too tight,—the book !—my wand !—so. nothing is forgot."

LXII.

"Wounds ! how they shout !" said Hum, "and there,—see, see !
 The Ambassadors return'd from Pigmio !
 The morning's very fine,—uncommonly !
 See, past the skirts of yon white cloud they go,
 Tinging it with soft crimsons ! Now below
 The sable-pointed heads of firs and pines
 They dip, move on, and with them moves a glow
 Along the forest side ! Now amber lines
 Reach the hill top, and now throughout the valley shines."

LXIII.

"Why, Hum, you're getting quite poetical !
 Those noirs you managed in a special style."
 "If ever you have leisure, Sire, you shall See scraps of mine will make it worth your while,

LXII 6 The sable heads of pointed firs and pines MS., rejected.

7 They dip and fill the forest with a glow MS., cancelled.

Tit-bits for Phœbus!—yes, you well may smile.
Hark! Hah! the bells!" "A little further yet,
Good Hum, and let me view this mighty coil."
Then the great Emperor full graceful set
His elbow for a prop, and snuff'd his mignonnette.

LXIV.

The morn is full of holiday; loud bells
With rival clamours ring from every spire;
Cunningly-station'd music dies and swells
In echoing places; when the winds respire,
Light flags stream out like gauzy tongues of fire;
A metropolitan murmur, life!ful, warm,
Comes from the northern suburbs; rich attire
Freckles with red and gold the moving swarm;
While here and there clear trumpets blow a keen alarm.

LXV.

And now the fairy escort was seen clear,
Like the old pageant of Aurora's train,
Above a pearl-built minster, hovering near;
First wily Crafticant, the chamberlain,
Balance'd upon his grey-grown pinions twain,
His slender wand officially reveal'd;
Then black gnomes scattering sixpences like rain;
Then pages three and three; and next, slave-held,
The Imaian 'scutcheon bright,—one mouse in argent field.

LXVI.

Gentlemen pensioners next; and after them,
A troop of winged Janizaries flew;
Then Slaves, as presents bearing many a gem;
Then twelve physicians fluttering two and two;
And next a chaplain in a cassock new;
Then Lords in waiting; then (what head not reels
For pleasure?)—the fair Princess in full view,
Borne upon wings,—and very pleas'd she feels
To have such splendour dance attendance at her heels.

LXVII.

For there was more magnificence behind:
 She wav'd her handkerchief. "Ah, very grand!"
 Cried Elfinan, and clos'd the window-blind;
 "And, Hum, we must not shilly-shally stand,—
 Adieu! adieu! I'm off for Angle-land!
 I say, old Hocus, have you such a thing
 About you,—feel your pockets, I command,—
 I want, this instant, an invisible ring,—
 Thank you, old mummy!—now securely I take wing."

LXVIII.

Then Elfinan swift vaulted from the floor,
 And lighted graceful on the window-sill;
 Under one arm the magic book he bore,
 The other he could wave about at will;
 Pale was his face, he still look'd very ill:
 He bow'd at Bellanaine, and said—"Poor Bell!
 Farewell! farewell! and if for ever! still
 For ever fare thee well!"—and then he fell
 A laughing!—snapp'd his fingers!—shame it is to tell!

LXIX.

"By'r Lady! he is gone!" cries Hum, "and I—
 (I own it)—have made too free with his wine;
 Old Crafticant will smoke me. By the bye—
 This room is full of jewels as a mine,—
 Dear valuable creatures, how ye shine!
 Sometime to-day I must contrive a minute,
 If Mercury propitiously incline,
 To examine his scrutoire, and see what's in it,
 For of superfluous diamonds I as well may thin it."

LXX.

"The Emperor's horrid bad; yes, that's my cue!"
 Some histories say that this was Hum's last speech;
 That, being fuddled, he went reeling through
 The corridor, and scarce upright could reach
 The stair-head; that being glutted as a leech,
 And us'd, as we ourselves have just now said,
 To manage stairs reversely, like a peach
 Too ripe, he fell, being puzzled in his head
 With liquor and the staircase: verdict—found stone dead.

LXXI.

This as a falsehood Crafticanto treats ;
 And as his style is of strange elegance,
 Gentle and tender, full of soft conceits,
 (Much like our Boswell's,) we will take a glance
 At his sweet prose, and, if we can, make dance
 His woven periods into careless rhyme ;
 O, little faery Pegasus ! rear—prance—
 Trot round the quarto—ordinary time !
 March, little Pegasus, with pawing hoof sublime !

LXXII.

Well, let us see,—tenth book and chapter nine,—
 Thus Crafticant pursues his diary :—
 " 'Twas twelve o'clock at night, the weather fine,
 Latitude thirty-six ; our scouts descry
 A flight of starlings making rapidly
 Towards Thibet. Mem. :—birds fly in the night ;
 From twelve to half-past—wings not fit to fly
 For a thick fog—the Princess sulky quite Call'd for an extra shawl, and gave her nurse a bite.

LXXIII.

" Five minutes before one—brought down a moth
 With my new double-barrel—stew'd the thighs
 And made a very tolerable broth—
 Princess turn'd dainty ;—to our great surprise,
 Alter'd her mind, and thought it very nice :
 Seeing her pleasant, tried her with a pun,
 She frown'd ; a monstrous owl across us flies
 About this time,—a sad old figure of fun ;
 Bad omen—this new match can't be a happy one.

LXXIV.

" From two till half-past, dusky way we made,
 Above the plains of Gobi,—desert, bleak ;
 Beheld afar off, in the hooded shade
 Of darkness, a great mountain (strange to speak),
 Spitting, from forth its sulphur-baken peak,
 A fan-shap'd burst of blood-red, arrowy fire,
 Turban'd with smoke, which still away did reek,
 Solid and black from that eternal pyre,
 Upon the laden wind that scanty could respire.

LXXV.

"Just upon three o'clock a falling star
Created an alarm among our troop,
Kill'd a man-cook, a page, and broke a jar,
A tureen, and three dishes, at one swoop,
Then passing by the Princess, singed her hoop :
Could not conceive what Coralline was at,
She clapp'd her hands three times and cried out
'Whoop !'

Some strange Imaian custom. A large bat
Came sudden 'fore my face, and brush'd against my hat.

LXXVI.

"Five minutes thirteen seconds after three,
Far in the west a mighty fire broke out,
Conjectur'd, on the instant, it might be
The city of Balk—'twas Balk beyond all doubt :
A Griffin, wheeling here and there about,
Kept reconnoitring us—doubled our guard—
Lighted our torches, and kept up a shout,
Till he sheer'd off—the Princess very scar'd—
And many on their marrow-bones for death prepar'd.

LXXVII.

"At half-past three arose the cheerful moon—
Bivouack'd for four minutes on a cloud—
Where from the earth we heard a lively tune
Of tambourines and pipes, serene and loud,
While on a flowery lawn a brilliant crowd
Cinque-parted danc'd, some half asleep reposed
Beneath the green-fan'd cedars, some did shroud
In silken tents, and 'mid light fragrance dozed,
Or on the open turf their soothed eyelids closed.

LXXVIII

"Dropp'd my gold watch, and kill'd a kettledrum—
It went for apoplexy—foolish folks !—
Left it to pay the piper—a good sum—
(I've got a conscience, maugre people's jokes ;)
To scrape a little favour 'gan to coax
Her Highness' pug-dog—got a sharp rebuff—
She wish'd a game at whist—made three revokes—
Turn'd from myself, her partner, in a huff ;
His majesty will know her temper time enough.

LXXIX.

"She cried for chess—I play'd a game with her—
Castled her king with such a vixen look,
It bodes ill to his Majesty—(refer
To the second chapter of my fortieth book,
And see what hoity-toity airs she took).
At half-past four the morn essay'd to beam—
Saluted, as we pass'd, an early rook—
The Princess fell asleep, and, in her dream,
Talk'd of one Master Hubert, deep in her esteem.

LXXX.

"About this time,—making delightful way,—
Shed a quill-feather from my larboard wing—
Wish'd, trusted, hop'd 'twas no sign of decay—
Thank heaven, I'm hearty yet!—'twas no such thing:—
At five the golden light began to spring,
With fiery shudder through the bloomed east;
At six we heard Panthea's churches ring—
The city all her unhiv'd swarms had cast,
To watch our grand approach, and hail us as we pass'd.

LXXXI.

"As flowers turn their faces to the sun,
So on our flight with hungry eyes they gaze,
And, as we shap'd our course, this, that way run,
With mad-cap pleasure, or hand-clasp'd amaze;
Sweet in the air a mild-ton'd music plays,
And progresses through its own labyrinth;
Buds gather'd from the green spring's middle-days,
They scatter'd,—daisy, primrose, hyacinth,—
Or round white columns wreath'd from capital to plinth.

LXXXII.

"Onward we floated o'er the panting streets,
That seem'd throughout with upheld faces paved;
Look where we will, our bird's-eye vision meets
Legions of holiday; bright standards waved,
And fluttering ensigns emulously craved
Our minute's glance; a busy thunderous roar,
From square to square, among the buildings raved,
As when the sea, at flow, gluts up once more
The craggy hollowness of a wild reefed shore.

LXXXIII.

"And 'Bellanaine for ever!' shouted they,
While that fair Princess, from her winged chair,
Bow'd low with high demeanour, and, to pay
Their new-blown loyalty with guerdon fair,
Still emptied, at meet distance, here and there,
A plenty horn of jewels. And here I
(Who wish to give the devil her due) declare
Against that ugly piece of calumny,
Which calls them Highland pebble-stones not worth a fly.

LXXXIV.

"Still 'Bellanaine!' they shouted, while we glide
'Slant to a light Ionic portico,
The city's delicacy, and the pride
Of our Imperial Basilic; a row
Of lords and ladies, on each hand, make show
Submissive of knee-bent obeisance.
All down the steps; and, as we enter'd, lo!
The strangest sight—the most unlook'd-for chance—
All things turn'd topsy-turvy in a devil's dance.

LXXXV.

"'Stead of his anxious Majesty and court
At the open doors, with wide saluting eyes,
Congées and scape-graces of every sort,
And all the smooth routine of gallantries,
Was seen, to our immoderate surprise,
A motley crowd thick gather'd in the hall,
Lords, scullions, deputy-sculions, with wild cries
Stunning the vestibule from wall to wall,
Where the Chief Justice on his knees and hands doth crawl.

LXXXVI.

"Counts of the palace, and the state purveyor
Of moth's-down, to make soft the royal beds,
The Common Council and my fool Lord Mayor
Marching a-row, each other slipshod treads;

Powder'd bag-wigs and ruffy-tuffy heads
Of cinder wenches meet and soil each other ;
Toe crush'd with heel ill-natur'd fighting breeds,
Frill-rumpling elbows brew up many a bother,
And fists in the short ribs keep up the yell and pother.

LXXXVII.

"A Poet, mounted on the Court-Clown's back,
Rode to the Princess swift with spurring heels,
And close into her face, with rhyming clack,
Began a Prothalamion ;—she reels,
She falls, she faints ! while laughter peals
Over her woman's weakness. 'Where !' cried I,
'Where is his Majesty ?' No person feels
Inclin'd to answer ; wherefore instantly
I plung'd into the crowd to find him or to die.

LXXXVIII.

"Jostling my way I gain'd the stairs, and ran
To the first landing, where, incredible !
I met, far gone in liquor, that old man,
That vile impostor Hum,——"
So far so well,—
For we have prov'd the Mago never fell
Down stairs on Crafticanto's evidence ;
And therefore duly shall proceed to tell,
Plain in our own original mood and tense,
The sequel of this day, though labour 'tis immense!

* * * *

Lines supposed to have been addressed to Fanny Brawne

THIS living hand, now warm and capable
Of earnest grasping, would, if it were cold
And in the icy silence of the tomb,
So haunt thy days and chill thy dreaming nights
That thou wouldst wish thine own heart dry of blood
So in my veins red life might stream again,
And thou be conscience-calm'd—see here it is—
I hold it towards you. .

SONNET

Written on a Blank Page in Shakespeare's Poems, facing "A Lover's Complaint."

BRIGHT star, would I were stedfast as thou art—
Not in lone splendour hung aloft the night
And watching, with eternal lids apart,
Like nature's patient, sleepless Eremité,
The moving waters at their priestlike task
Of pure ablution round earth's human shores,
Or gazing on the new soft-fallen mask
Of snow upon the mountains and the moors—
No—yet still stedfast, still unchangeable,
Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,¹⁰
To feel for ever its soft fall and swell,
Awake for ever in a sweet unrest,
Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath,
And so live ever—or else swoon to death.

[Lines] These were written in the margin of a page of the holograph manuscript of "The Cup and Bells," and were published in my sixth one-volume edition of Keats's poetry (1898).
